New Theaters

Bellefontaine, O.—Estimates are being received for the proposed new theater at Kenton. The project, to cost $100,000, is backed by Daniel Gutilla, and associates.

Marysville, Kan.—Work is being pushed on the Isis theater so the house can be open by Thanksgiving Day. The theater is located in the Community House.

Greenville, S. C.—The American Spinning Co., of which most residents hereabouts are employees, plans a picture theater, work on which is expected to start in the near future.

Norworde, N. Y.—Work is nearing completion on the new theater and building being erected on the site of the old Castle, destroyed by fire last year.

Highland, N. Y.—W. R. Seaman has signed a lease for part of the Hartshorn Bldg., which he will remodel into a theater.

Santa Rosa, Calif.—Proctor & Cleghorn have been awarded the contract to erect the new theater at Fifth and Davis Sts., for Tocchini Bros.

Oneonta, Ala.—Work has begun on excavating the property on First Avenue, which will house a new theater to be called the Strand.

Many Paramount Changes
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Milwaukee—Many changes have been made locally by Paramount. O. J. Wooden, formerly with Paramount, has been appointed manager of the company's exchange here, succeeding Neal F. Agnew, who has been made Chicago branch manager. Agnew, in turn, succeeds C. C. Wallace, promoted to district manager for Chicago, Peoria and Milwaukee territory. Other new members of the sales staff are Jack Woodward and H. Sharaff.

More Lee-Bradford Sales

Further sales on the Lee-Bradford product includes:

"Partners of the Sunset," to Eastern Feature Film, Boston. "Adventures of the Far North," to Standard Film, Atlanta. "Sister Against Sister," to J. I. Filkins, Syracuse. "Partners of the Sunset," to Progress Pictures, St. Louis. "Shattered Reputations," to T. J. Flannagan, Syracuse. "Is Money Everything" and "Adventures of the Far North," to Greiver Prods., of Chicago. "Call of the Hills," "Determination" and "Sister Against Sister," to General Dist. Corp., Portland, Ore.

Plan a Jersey Chain
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Trenton, N. J.—Jack Flynn and Sam Frank, who recently took over the Palace and Eagle in Hammon-ton, N. J., plan entering exhibition extensively. These two houses are the only picture theaters in town and are the first links in a chain which the owners propose to control.

Philadelphia — Having purchased the Hippodrome of Allentown, George Bennethum has made plans for converting the structure into an office and store building. Bennethum, who is associated with Wilmer and Vincent, also has an equity in the Victor, and will continue its operation under the management of Walter Reinbold. Added to the Bennethum chain is the Karlton in Quakertown, Pa. The Bennethum chain now totals 18 houses.

"Doug" Says He's at Mercy of Combinations—Mary Slams Block Bookings—Both Before Trade Commission

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
Los Angeles—At the final coast session of the Federal Trade Commission before adjournment until January, when the hearing will be resumed in Jacksonville, Douglas Fairbanks appeared and declared that he was at the mercy of theater combinations. He testified:
"I am awaiting the outcome of this inquiry before I do anything on my next picture. 'The Thief of Bagdad' will cost nearly $2,000,000, without any direct assurance of getting it back. Because of conditions as they now exist, I am at the mercy of the combinations."

When cross-examined by Robert T. Swaine, of Famous counsel, relative to what combinations he meant, Fairbanks included Famous Players, First National, Goldwyn and Loew. Continuing, he said:
"You are all aiming toward amalgamation—all you fellows who are playing pinochle in New York: Zukor, Loew, Godsol and the rest."

Fear Huge Combine

Mary Pickford traced the formation of United Artists and the troubles encountered in obtaining proper theater representation where producers owned theaters, specifically naming Philadelphia and various points in the South. "Block bookings," said Miss Pickford, "will sound the death knell of the picture business, if the practice continues. I will retire from the business if conditions become any worse. The producer who owns houses does not have the incentive to make really big productions. Key cities mean two fifths of the returns." If the market is closed by block booking the producers owning theaters will eliminate the people who are seeking to make big pictures and conditions will lapse into the state of three years ago.

Swain, cross-examining for Famous, wanted Miss Pickford to produce books showing her earnings as a producer, his intent being to establish how much she was financially injured by combinations of theaters. W. H. Fuller, for the Government, objected and if the commission over-rules this, this testimony will be sought later in New York.

The Pickford-Fairbanks testimony was taken in the projection room of their studio. Miss Pickford first testified concerning a clause in her 1919 contract with Famous covering the marketing of her pictures singly. She said:

"Exhibitors told and wrote me that they could not buy mine without taking others and I continually complained to Zukor. Finally, I told him of my intention of leaving unless a separate company was formed. Then Artcraft was launched. My wishes were not lived up to even then."

She then went on telling of new negotiations and declared that Zukor offered $125,000 for her work in three pictures, but that she asked $250,000 per negative, including all production costs. "When he found that I was leaving him," she said, "to go with First National, he said why don't you retire from the screen, I will give you $250,000 if you will quit the business." This led up to the story of the formation of United Artists.

Seymour Tally, son of T. L. Tally, was another witness. He said the proposed partnership between his father and Sid Grauman, of five years ago, did not involve First National in any way and that the deal fell through when Grauman aligned himself with Famous. Ralph Kohn on the stand, declared that Famous owned a fifty per cent interest in the Mountain States Theaters Corp., and a twenty-five per cent interest in the Rothchild theaters in San Francisco.

Hulbert to Address T. O. C. C.

Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert will address the T. O. C. C. tomorrow probably on Motion Picture Day. The meeting was put off from today in order to accommodate the Mayor.

Support for Repeal

It is now the opinion in some circles here that the admission tax repeal may not be so heavily frowned upon in Congress as was first believed. Certainly, those working and hoping for the elimination of the irksome measure hold that Congress will act favorably on that section of the Mellon report, at least.

Mellon's program is the result of many months' work. He outlines his suggestions in a letter to Representative William R. Greene, acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. The Secretary figures that the revenue derived from the admission tax totals $70,000,000 annually, and in suggesting the elimination of that measure states that the burden is borne by the bulk of the people through the medium of the box-offices of neighborhood picture theaters.

Off for French Lick

Col. H. A. Cole, of Texas, W. A. Steffes of Minneapolis, and Counsel Handy of the Kansas M. P. T. O. left New York last night for French Lick.

Colonel Cole said he felt very happy over the developments in Washington regarding the tax, but said that was more reason for the get-together to see that everything worked all right.

M. P. T. O. "Gratified"

The M. P. T. O., in a statement yesterday, declared itself "much gratified" over Secretary Mellon's action and called attention to the fact that Sydney S. Cohen had conferred with him in October relative to this. It was pointed out, however, that the united action of all exhibitors was still necessary to secure the proper reaction from Congress.

$600,000 House for Woodhaven

A. H. Schwartz will spend $600,000 on a new theater and office building to be erected at 96th St. and Jamaica Ave., Woodhaven. The house will seat 2,500 and will show vaudeville and first-runs. The Loew circuit will be interested and the house will operate under the Loew name.

Schedule Changed

"Pioneer Trails" is at the Rivoli this week and "His Children's Children" at the Rialto. The original schedule has been reversed to the present order. "The Cruise of the Speejacks" has been divided into two parts with the first instalment at the Rivoli this week.

can market will be open to But he, like others who have thought to the idea, believes most practicable way for producers to meet conditions is to establish a joint sales office here for the sole purpose of selling the best English made. Physical distribution one of the American concern

Note—If Fredman can convince half dozen important British producers to get together and join to handle the best of the pictures in America, he will have accomplished a very worthwhile thing. No one English producer is sufficient big important picture to meet the demands of American exhibitors. Only the best of their products by carrying through a campaign to acquaint the trade with the value of this product they will have a very good chance to put them over.

Defying Destiny

(Chaudet Production—Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

LOOKS like Selznick has a box office picture here. Primarily because it is just the type of film play that "the folks back home" like. Tells about the rise and fall and then rise again of a regular American youth with his red-blooded romance appealingly woven into the entire fabric. The picture has a story to tell and in business-like way goes ahead and tells it. There are no frills, no elaborate scenic sideplay, just a regular plain entertaining tale that will please 90 per cent. of film fans.

Monte Blue and Irene Rich co-operate to put this one over. They give convincing performances while their support which includes Jackie Saunders, Russell Simpson, and Tully Marshall, is high class.

The plot has all the ingredients of a business getter. Right off the handle we are introduced to a realistic storm and fire in which some thrilling rescues are staged. Then follows some dramatic moments in which the hero is accused of stealing some bank funds, the trial in which he is found not guilty and his fleeing from the town—driven away by public opinion. Then a sequence introduces plastic surgery in which some very prominent scars are removed from the hero's face and he returns to make the town pay. From this point on there is something doing every minute and it all ends as most pictures do— with the little girl in the big man's arms.

Technically the production is well nigh flawless. The sets are artistic and when necessary, as in the club ball scenes, quite elaborate. Photography and lighting are good and the titles are a bit different.

THEME. A romantic drama centering around the life-long love between a daughter of wealth and a son of poverty. Although scarred by flames and public opinion, the man never loses the girl's love and trust.

THE TAX

big first runs, especially in the controlled towns behave pretty much as they please. And all producers are practically at their mercy. And there isn't any doubt that block bookings are unhealthy. But even block bookings, and controlled towns with silly prices aren't going to sound any death knell in this business. No, Mary; not for a minute. Because the people of a nation will have something to say—when it becomes necessary—about anything that will deprive them of virtually their chief amusement. In many instances their only amusement.

It is a fact, criticised often before, that the big first runs do not pay as much for big pictures as they should. There are exceptions, of course. But so long as the present method of distribution continues; until percentage becomes a reality instead of the miscarriage that is as operated at present, so long will these first run operators get away with the murder. The answer is simple; a more economic method of physical distribution—plus percentage for first and second runs on a straight out right percentage basis—with the guarantee thrown in the sewer.

read what he says. Elsewhere in this issue. And when you disagree—if you don't agree—or if you do—let's know what you think.

Body Blows

Godsol puts a few in. He says the vital issue of the day is whether or not the producer "is to receive fair and reasonable prices for his pictures." And points out that if rental prices come down the producer will be better off than now even with a reduction in costs and then he suggests, like the he-man he is, that it is time for the producers to stop blabbing and take action.

Particularly against exhibitor combinations and booking arrangements and then he suggests a joint distribution scheme with pictures playing a percentage.

He finishes up his argument by saying how sound the Goldwyn Committee is, adding that his "is not a cry of personal distress."

What Godsol says has in many ways been pointed out in this publication since last spring. If producers and distributors will only have the brains enough to get together and do something besides talk, it will be worth-while.

Italian Deal On?

Reports Baratollo of U. C. I. Dickering With Griffith—Scoffed at Here

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The Rome correspondent of The Weekly, reports that Joseph Baratollo, head of the U. C. I.—the Unione Cinematografica Italiana—is negotiating with D. W. Griffith to come here to direct a production, designed on a lavish scale. The Kine Weekly correspondent says the contract is expected to be signed in a few days. Baratollo has also arranged to make a series of pictures in Rome for an English concern. An American director will probably handle the production.

At the Griffith offices, Gerritt J. Lloyd declared that negotiations have

Pertinent

By F. J. GODSOL

President, Goldwyn Pictures Corp.

I have always refrained from giving interviews or issuing statements about the picture industry as I feel the public is not interested in what I might have to say. Besides, nothing that has appeared in the press about the ills of the industry has helped to cure them.

I have again been asked for a statement and I now feel like expressing my views although with very little hope of any good resulting.

Much has been said about the present high cost of production. High cost of production exists and should be remedied. But nothing will be gained by any plan so far suggested.

Cost is simply a question of supply and demand of material and labor.

There are too few leading film artists, outstanding directors, continuity writers, art directors and others for the yearly production of pictures, with the result that all producers are continually bidding for the same people.

This cannot be remedied by temporarily shutting down studios because as soon as the studios reopen, the producers will again start fishing out of the same pond and salaries will again soar.

Lasky Says Hollywood Mental State Is Leaning Toward Conservation—Announces New Films

Jesse L. Lasky in a statement issued yesterday declared the campaign to eliminate waste in production had already borne fruit "in a new frame of mind in Hollywood." He said this change in attitude was vital, because the waste of the past was "largely due to the mental attitude with which the studio people approached production."

He expressed complete confidence in the future and then proceeded to display the proof of his convictions by announcing a new batch of pictures which includes:

"North of 36," produced by James Cruze; Cecil B. DeMille's, "Triumph;" "Zander The Great"; a William DeMille production, "Icebound;" "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," by Francis Hodgson Bennett; Booth Tarkington's play, "Magnolia," with Glenn

Nat'l "Lab" Body

May Be Formed—Allied Members and Others Invited to Hoy's Dinner at Astor

A national organization of laboratory owners is in the offing. The project may be discussed at a dinner to be tendered tomorrow night at the Astor by Frederick H. Elliott on behalf of the Hoy Reporting Service.

The impression was created a few days ago that the dinner was to be confined to members of the Allied Laboratories Ass'n, but this is not so. It will be a general "get together" of "lab" men, at which organization on a country-wide basis will be discussed and a credit system, functioning under the Hoy banner gone into. So far about 25 acceptances have been received by Elliott.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Saint Peter's Square, the entrance to the largest and most imposing ecclesiastical edifice in the world, is 247 yards wide by 350 yards long, and besides containing the entrance to the cathedral, has the entrance to the vatican and possesses the colossal colonnade of Bernini, of which there are 285 columns and 84 pillars.

From this location, George Fitzmaurice "shot" many fascinating scenes for "The Eternal City," a Samuel Goldwyn production. A First National Picture.—Advt.

William S. Hart and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. will continue and their will be a number of pictures utilizing the services of the stock company.

Discounting the idea that Famous would cease production entirely, Lasky said:

"We are simply determined to make every dollar spent in production return us a dollar value on the screen. Since we announced our determination to curtail extravagance in pictures, there has been a great deal of loose talk. Some producers said they were going to follow our lead; others said they were going to spend more money than ever. Some people blamed the actors; the actors blamed the directors and there was a wonderful exhibition of passing the buck all around.

"For a long time production costs have been mounting. This nobody can deny. Everybody agreed something should be done about it. But, as in the case of the weather it was all talk and no action. The picture business is sounder now than ever before; and if there be anything wrong it is entirely because of lack of co-operation among producers. All actors are not over paid, but some actors are. All directors are not extravagant but some directors are. Where salaries of actors and directors are out of proportion you can attribute the condition to the unethical and foolishly short sighted competition among producers.

"We realized all this before we made our decision. We realized that some producers would attempt to make capital out of our action and make us the goats. But we decided that, whatever any other company might do, we were going to set our own business straight."

They Didn't Want to, But We Made 'Em—LAUGH

A distributor called us up after reading our "They Laughed Like ——!" advertisement in the Sunday Telegraph.

"How many expressions did you get in your mail as a result of your 'test showing'?" he asked.

"About two hundred," we told him.

"All complimentary?"

"Of course not," we admitted to his surprise, "THEY DIDN'T WANT TO LAUGH BUT WE MADE 'EM—and they admit it."

And they did laugh—those four hundred representative big business men—Columbia University alumni—professors and scientists. Some of them disagreed with us—knocked us hard for daring to "jazz" the lines of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's masterpiece in the sub-titles of "The School For Scandal."

BUT THE FACT REMAINS THAT THE PICTURE MADE 'EM LAUGH. And if we made the highbrows chuckle—roar like kids and stamp their feet—what'll we do when the picture plays to THE MASS OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WHO WANT TO LAUGH!

We've sent "The School For Scandal," back to the workshop for a little more of that stuff that made 'em laugh.

Another fundamental factor entering into high cost is the unnecessary extra time taken by directors in the production of their pictures. This is and has been difficult to control because of the arbitrary attitude assumed by the present day director of importance.

There are also the large carrying and overhead charges which can only be fairly absorbed by greater instead of lesser production.

In my opinion, high cost of production is not an issue for the industry collectively but for each producer to individually solve and it can only be accomplished by the individual developing unknown artists and by the employment of uncelebrated directors on reasonable terms who will agree to and will "shoot" their pictures within a limited number of days.

Today, in the motion picture industry, the real vital issue is whether or not the producer is to receive fair and reasonable prices for his pictures.

If rental prices come down with a reduction in costs, the producer will be no better off than now.

Exhibitors have merged their interests in a great many cities with the result that all the theaters are in the control of one man or one group of men. In many other centers they have formed booking combinations. All to force the producer to accept rental prices arbitrarily fixed by the exhibitor.

Why do not the producers take action—not talk—to destroy this danger, the greatest menace to the picture industry!

At present there are a few so called competitive points where the exhibitor is required to pay more than the true value for pictures to partly make up for the producers forced underselling in other towns. This is unfair to that exhibitor and is unsound business.

Pictures should be sold everywhere for what they are worth—no more and no less—and to enable the exhibitor and the producer each to make a fair profit on their respective investments.

At present there are exhibitors in dozens of large controlled cities getting pictures at a mere fraction of their value.

This serious situation is well known to all producers and in my opinion, it is only the vanity of the heads of the larger producing companies which permits this condition to exist and will permit it to continue until it strangles them. It seems to me these executives are sitting back, each thinking they will weather the storm, and that all their competitors will go bankrupt, when they will then single handed stamp out this evil.

Another important element is the cost of distribution. Why should there be ten offices in each of thirty cities with thousands of employees selling the same kind of merchandise to the same customers? Others have already made suggestions to remedy this.

The cost of distribution can be reduced one half and the saving applied in reduction of film rentals.

All of these unsound conditions can be remedied if three or four distributing companies, or more if others choose to join, distribute as one.

Joint distribution would put an end to the dictation of prices by exhibitors. If a sufficient number of pictures were in the hands of one distributing agency, exhibitors who persisted in their present strangling methods would soon find themselves facing a shortage of good pictures and they would then be willing to deal on a fair basis.

A joint distributing organization should agree to supply pictures to all exhibitors throughout the United States on a percentage of the theater's gross takings, the percentage to be fairly arrived at by an arbitration committee composed of exhibitors and producers. Such percentages must allow each exhibitor a fair profit and also permit each producer a fair, even though proportionately smaller, return.

What I have here expressed will probably bring an avalanche of protests and reproaches from producers, exhibitors, artists, directors and everyone connected with the industry but I am stating my honest belief.

Mine is not a cry of personal distress. In fact, I feel that with warm personal friendships of many leading exhibitors and with powerful cooperation of Mr. W. Hearst, Goldwyn Cosmopolitan better able to cope with the situation than some of the other companies.

The Goldwyn Pictures Corp. is stronger today than ever in its history. Its pictures are good and exhibitor's demand for them greater than in former years. Sales have never been so large. Financial condition is sound.

I have been asked why, if these facts, Goldwyn stock is quoted so low. My reply is that I am buying up the Goldwyn business and the stock market. Our accountant (Price Waterhouse & Co.) last year shows that the book value of Goldwyn stock is forty dollars per share excluding good will. Nevertheless the fact remains, we are not getting adequate rentals for our pictures in a great number of territories.

Old Contracts Stand

“Enemies” Situation Straightened Out—Meeting Called by T. O. C. C. on Friday Morning

Charles L. O'Reilly yesterday held a meeting of exhibitors holding “Enemies of Women” contracts at the Astor for Friday at 11 o'clock, which a settlement plan will be announced.

It is understood that Nathan Burkan, attorney for the Cosmopolitan Company, will attend and explain that the company will recognize the old contracts closed by Famous Players in it was thought the picture would be distributed through Paramount. This is conditional in view of the fact that Cosmopolitan feels exhibitors should make further concessions on price. The picture is much more than originally designed. Exhibitors will therefore be asked to either increase the number of playing dates or increase the rentals.

The matter was taken up by Will Hays about two weeks ago, following a visit of O'Reilly to the Hays office, when the entire matter was brought into it. It is believed—or hoped, at least—that this arrangement as it will be explained by Burkan, will finally dispose of the matter.

Lord's Day Alliance Announces Plan—Finds Pews Deserted and Theaters Crowded

The Lord's Day Alliance is out in the open as an advocate of “blue” Sundays. It has announced a campaign to bring about Sunday closing.

The Alliance has been investigating the Sunday theater situation and declares that attendance at Sunday picture shows is many times larger than attendance at churches. An up-state survey of 573 churches showed a total attendance of 27,727 or an average of 48 people at each church. In one up-state City, on one Sunday evening, two theaters had a total attendance of 14,100. The remaining twenty eight theaters in that city were not even included in the survey. In Washington, a survey showed 7,000 people attending 40 churches and 50,000 at 40 theaters at the same time.

Leaders Won't Talk

Many Important Executives Decline To Talk About Godsol's Joint Distributing Plan

There was a general reluctance evidenced yesterday on the part of executives in the distributing end of the business to comment on F. J. Godsol's plan for a joint distributing machine that would reduce operating overhead and as he puts it, “put an end to the dictation of prices by exhibitors.” Godsol holds that “if a sufficient number of pictures were in the hands of one distributing agency, exhibitors who persisted in their present strangling methods would soon find themselves facing a shortage of good pictures and they would then be willing to deal on a fair basis.”

Adolph Zukor, Hiram Abrams, Carl Laemmle, E. A. Eschmann and Samuel Goldwyn, declined to make any comment. Harry M. Warner promised a statement later. At Associated Exhibitors, Arthur S. Kane and Jack Woody were both away. Sydney S. Cohen of the M. P. T. O. said he might talk about it later on, while W. A. True of the T. O. D. C. and Elmer Pearson of Pathe could not be reached at their offices.

One executive who is very well posted declared that Godsol was

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

The Arch of Triano, fronting the Coliseum, one of the ancient beauty spots, conceived by the famous architect, Apollodoro of Damascus. The profile represents conquests in the Orient of the Roman Generals. It was completed in the year 79 A. D.

For the first time in history this masterpiece of antiquity appears in a film. It is seen as a background in George Fitzmaurice's production of "The Eternal City." Presented by Samuel Goldwyn. (Not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures).—Advt.

"Messalina" Here

Speaking of conditions in Italy, he said yesterday:

"I came to the United States to attend to the sale of 'Messalina' after the re-editing and titling to answer the requirements of the American market. I have many plans regarding future productions but do not care to discuss them at this time. American pictures in Italy are well liked particularly from the technical point of view. Conditions in Italy as to the production of motion pictures are on the way to improvement, after a period of stagnation which has been beneficial to the industry because it served to eliminate the spurious elements."

The production of "Messalina" was sponsored in a more or less official manner. The King and Queen of Italy evinced considerable interest while it was in the making. The story occurs in the year 12 A. D. when the Roman Empire was in the height of its glory. Guazzoni rebuilt the Arena, the Forum and Rosstrum in Rome for many of the scenes. A chariot race plays an important part in the development of the story. "Messalina" has been purchased by Pathe Freres, Ltd., of London for Great Britain.

right and that the day of a joint distributing machine, at least so far as the actual physical handling of the product was concerned, was not far off. He said the transition was inevitable.

W. W. Hodkinson, W. E. Atkinson, Joe Brandt and Billy Brandt did, however, voice their ideas. Hodkinson declared that co-operation was vital in the business if it were to survive. He declared:

"There must be absolute co-operation between the different factions and factors in the industry because the nature of the business is such and it is so closely related in many ways, that it cannot long continue to stand the punishment inflicted on it by a lot of persons advancing their own interests regardless of others or the industry as a whole. If the industry has not within itself, the vision to see this fact clearly, the wisdom to devise practical methods of co-operation with which to change the condition and the integrity to stick by equitable plans, in my opinion, it is at a point of perishing as set up today and my recent article in Collier's Weekly clearly sets forth the lines which my experience indicates it will follow in gravitating from the so-called theatrical into the non-theatrical field, leaving high and dry the interests now concerned with production and exhibition of pictures along the ruinous lines pursued at present.

"I was never more optimistic than at the present in believing that the industry can work together, but I have felt and do feel that it will only do so under pressure, and that the sufficient pressure is now at hand to force a proper set up within the industry."

W. E. Atkinson of Metro said: "Our product for this season has been arranged in such a manner that it was not necessary to take any steps in curtailing production. There is nothing that I care to say about joint distribution. It has been tried before but has too many ramifications for a successful carrying out."

Joe Brandt, of C. B. C. said:

"There isn't any doubt in the world that the present day high cost of production calls for drastic remedies. But I do not agree with Mr. Godsol's suggestion that this remedy can be met by a plan of joint distribution. In that plan I see danger, in that it would inevitably tend to discourage the competition that is so necessary in the film business as in any other. If all pictures were distributed and sold through the same channels, they would be accepted on practically the same reliable basis. With this in mind, there would be no incentive for producers or directors to do the unusual thing in production—and this would eventually sound the death-knell of the industry. Uniformity of rental price would bring uniformity of pictures. Every picture must be judged individually and bring its own price; every exhibitor must stand on his own feet."

Billy Brandt said:

"It's about time high-powered film executives would stop issuing statements of that kind to the daily press. It's doing more to hold up the campaign for the admission tax repeal than anything that I know of."

In The Courts

Riesefeld has applied in the court for an injunction regarding the Rialto Prod., Inc., the Film Exchange, and the Erich Co. from making any use of films he made prior to 1921, "Funny Face Comedies," in marionettes are used in connection with cartoons by Marcus. Riesefeld alleges that he gave the exhibition rights to the films to Rialto Prod., but that he could not sue the contract if Rialto could not meet its financial obligations. He claims that without his consent the films were transferred to the Rialto Co., which refuses to account for the films to him. He claims that they are deposited with the Rialto Co., which refuses to give up on the ground that Rialto has given directions not to be duplicated if they are to remain in control of the films.

Robert Yudkin has sued Leon D. Charles Penser and Penser's attorneys in the Supreme Court for 10 percent of the proceeds of the Willard-Firpo and Leonard fights. He alleged the defendant agreed to give him the rights if he would desist from getting the rights for the bouts, and would aid them in marketing the films for the mutual benefit of the parties. The complaint alleges that the defendants have received at least $14,000 from the Willard-Firpo films and $35,000 from the Leonard-Tandler match, but they have paid him only $700. He asks an accounting.

At Broadway Theaters,
Capitol

"Little Old New York" makes its re-appearance on Broadway this week at the Capitol. Due to the length of the feature, an overture selection and a prelude and tableau are the only other units on the bill.

Cosmopolitan

"Under The Red Robe," is the feature.

Rialto

The orchestra this week plays as the overture a medley of popular war melodies specially arranged for Armistice Day. This is followed by the first of the two installments of "Around The World In The Speejacks." Ennio Bolognini next renders "Serenade" and "Liebesfreud" on the cello. The feature, "Pioneer Trails," closes.

At Other Houses

"The Hunchback" continues on at the Astor as well as "The Temple of Venus," at the Central; "The Covered Wagon," at the Criterion, and "Scaramouche" at the Forty-Fourth St., "David Copperfield" is in its second week at the Cameo; "Little Old New York" is again seen on Broadway, now playing the Capitol. The Rialto and Strand both house holdovers, the former running "His Children's Children" which played the Rivoli last week, and the latter "A Woman of Paris." "The White Sister" remains at the Lyric.

Yesterday's meeting of the T. O. C. C. was marked by three addresses: one by Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert, a second by Dr. Ettinger, head of the public school system of the city, and a third by Sydney S. Cohen who received a prolonged ovation and some cheers when he was introduced by O'Reilly. Hulbert spoke about the value of motion pictures as did Dr. Ettinger. Cohen delved into National M. P. Day and touched upon the burden carried by exhibitors in the form of admission and seating taxes. He said that following Motion Picture Day, which falls during American Education Week, the M. P. T. O. planned enlisting the active support of Dr. J. J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education in influencing Congress to act favorably on Secretary Mellon's suggestion to remove the admission tax.

O'Reilly took a slap at block bookings and Famous Players for its method of handling "The Covered Wagon." He explained to Dr. Ettinger that pictures of that kind should be released at once so that they could be seen at popular prices in neighborhood theaters by school children, but that instead of that it was held in high-priced theaters for one or two seasons and then released generally.

Stars A "Freeze Out"

Abrams Accuses Four Companies of Exerting Pressure—Opposed to Godsol Idea

Allegations that four producing and distributing companies are attempting to "freeze out" competition by methodically constituting restraint of trade and present curtailment plans are the methods these companies are using to recoup losses due to inefficient production were made yesterday by Hiram Abrams in an interview in the N. Y. Tribune. Abrams, who refused yesterday to mention the names of the companies he referred to, said:

"The public's desire is constantly being frustrated. My representative was told by a distributing company controlling theaters in forty cities that they were 'not interested' in buying the next releases of Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin. They hope to use such methods to hold the stars out of public interest and forgotten."

By producing companies owning their own distributing services and controlling the theaters in many of the small cities and towns over the country constitute the only menace to the motion picture industry to-day. These companies force the exhibitors to take the inferior pictures to get better ones, thus dictate conditions holding independent producers out.

To prevent this we are selling pictures at a loss in some communities, which must be pro-rated among the picturegoers. Some cities and their theaters are showing only their favorite stars, and a reflection of displeasure is shown at the box offices."

The present distributing system, urged by J. Godsol, was attacked by

Revenue Officials Watching Exhibitor Tax Reports—Penalties Under the Law

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—While no new rulings have been issued by the Treasury Department covering delinquent returns filed by exhibitors reporting admission taxes, officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau have received notice that some of the practices which have become common must be stopped.

The law now provides a penalty of twenty-five per cent of the tax in cases where a return is filed later than allowed, but the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is vested with authority to compromise or even entirely lift this penalty, if investigation

Call On Hays

Exhibitors Want Him to Help Organize National Movement Regarding Repeal of Admission Tax
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

French Lick, Ind.—The two days' session of exhibitors came to an end yesterday. While the formation of a new central western exhibitors body was discussed at length the chief topic was the manner in which the proposed repeal of the admission tax should be put through.

Lobby gossip has it that Will H. Hays will be asked to take charge of the situation, and through him to have a national committee formed, a member from each state, to aid in a concerted effort to bring about this highly desired legislation. From what was said this idea has the unanimous support of all present.

The question of a Central States exhibitors' organization was discussed. The discussion developed the fact that Steffes of Minnesota, Dennison and Richey of Michigan and others did not feel the time was ripe and indications are that no organization will be formed although arrangements for closer co-operation between the five central west states will be perfected. An unusual feeling of harmony marked the meeting and all speakers urged the maintaining of closer relations with producers and an abandonment of the antagonistic attitude of organizations.

Exhibitors attending the convention included:

Al Steffes of Minneapolis, H. M. Richey and J. R. Dennison of Michigan, Jake Wells of Virginia, Joseph Rhode of Wisconsin, H. A. Cole of Texas, Judge Handy of Kansas and Ludwig Siegal, Glenn W. Reynolds, J. T. Dittman, Ben L. Bervey, G. E. Johnson and Julius Lamb of Illinois. Those from Indiana attending included G. G. Schmidt, Frank Rembusch, A. C. Zaring, E. H. Fears A "Freeze Out"

Abrams as only a further step in consolidating the position of the "trust." Inefficiency in production methods, not salaries, is to blame for the heavy losses suffered by some companies, Abrams holds, but rather than admit this the actor is being made the "goat" through salary reductions. The stars are entitled to all they can get for their services, he said. Their box office drawing power is what has built the fortunes of the big producers.

Such an actor as Thomas Meighan, says the Tribune interview, is underpaid, in Abrams' opinion, because his individual drawing power fairly demands a greater share of the profits.

"Three of the best pictures I ever saw," said Abrams, "were made by George Arliss at less than $100,000 each. This was due to careful consideration of costs, avoidance of waste shots and costly sets, and efficient, well-planned direction in cutting out the minor details which swell the cost of the average picture to a great extent."

Replying to both the statements issued by F. J. Godsol and Jesse L. Lasky, Richard A. Rowland said in the Morning World yesterday:

"I can say that I am in accord with Mr. Lasky's assertion that there will be no curtailment of production, but there will be a curtailment of waste.

"There is no gainsaying the statement of Mr. Godsol, that the high cost of players and directors is due to the scarcity of competent persons to fill these positions. But with proper preparation before making a picture, we believe it is still possible for producers to keep their expenditures within reasonable limits."

"The Spanish Dancer" Demonstrated

POLA NEGRI in "THE SPANISH DANCER" has now been shown in enough key centers to give an accurate and adequate demonstration of the picture's actual box-office value. Below are given the true reports from ten different theatres in ten widely scattered demonstration points, selected at random. They tell a convincing story.

TOWN	THEATRE	BUSINESS	OPINIONS OF THE CRITICS
NEW YORK	Rivoli	Opened to 64 more admissions than "Manslaughter," the record-holder, and played two capacity weeks.	"Will make millions of dollars. The old, flaming, glorious, gorgeous Pola Negri."—Tribune.	"Pola Negri returns to the mood of her superb 'Carmen.' Far better than her previous American pictures."—Herald.
CHICAGO	McVickers	Broke record at opening and held steady for two big weeks.	"Big, bracing, romantic story, beautifully plotted and rich with dramatic situations." —Herald-Examiner.	"Provides entertainment in generous quantities and is assured of success. Better than previous American pictures." —Evening American.
SANDUSKY, O.	Plaza	Equaled figures of "Manslaughter," which holds house record.	"A great picture, with a story that stirs imagination and leaves clean and wholesome reaction." —Star-Journal.	"Deserves the term 'super-production.' Pola Negri's best role since she has appeared on the screen."—Star-Journal.
KANSAS CITY	Newman	Remarkable business despite very bad weather and fall festival competition.	"Exceptionally good picture, well acted, well directed. We take off our hats to Pola."—Star.	"Infinitely better than Pola's other American pictures. Lavish picture, full of luxurious settings."—Journal-Post.
ST. LOUIS	Missouri	Did $21,438.29, breaking all house records. Biggest Sunday opening in history of St. Louis.	"By far the best of Pola Negri's pictures. 'The Spanish Dancer' is a sure winner."—Star.	"Will rank as Pola's greatest achievement. Abounding with thrills and romance." —Globe-Democrat.
PITTSBURGH	Olympic	Most sensational success this theatre ever had. Sidewalk overflow for first time.	"At last Pola Negri has a picture worthy of her talents. Her best picture since 'Passion.'" —Karl Kitchen.	"Could have been shown at advanced prices, for it is a 'super-special.'" —Karl Kitchen.
DETROIT	Madison	Absolute capacity hit during entire run.	"In every sense a fine picture that will please with acting, color and beauty."—Free Press.	"Miss Negri can set this down as her finest picture, not excepting 'Passion.'" —Times.
WICHITA, KAS.	Miller	Excellent business. $3,700 in four days.	"Pola is coming back. The picture is highly colored, gorgeous, imposing."—Beacon.	"The last word in gorgeousness. One of the best pictures of 1923." —Eagle.
HALT LAKE CITY	Paramount-Empress	Despite raised admission, was forced to stop ticket sales several times by crowds.	"Gives full play to the most dramatic actress of the screen, Pola Negri."—Tribune.	"Pola does the best work of her career. Romantic, dashing drama. A million dollar setting for the jewel of the screen." —Telegram.
NEW LONDON CONN.	Crown	Tremendous business at opening. Crowds turned away throughout engagement.	"Far above anything Pola Negri has done in America. More than a spectacle; tells real story." —Day.	"Pola's interpretation superbly done. Nothing she did in 'Passion' surpassed it."—Day.

and so the story goes throughout the entire country. Never has a picture been so clearly proven a hit. Prints of "THE SPANISH DANCER" are now available for you at Paramount exchanges.

Checking Up Returns

shows that the delinquency was the result of unforeseen circumstances and not deliberate on the part of the taxpayer.

As a result of the latitude allowed the Commissioner, officials of the bureau yesterday told the representative of THE FILM DAILY the penalties assessed against exhibitors do not run into any great number and are imposed only where it appears the delay was avoidable.

However, while the commissioner is permitted to release exhibitors from penalty in this respect, he has not such authority to in the case of the five per cent penalty for non-payment of tax. In many cases where this penalty is assessed, the return is filed promptly but payment is not made within the specified period, often the taxpayer being without the necessary funds at the time and willing to pay five per cent for the privilege of postponing payment temporarily. These two regulations are all that apply to returns of admission taxes, and there is no change under contemplation at the present time.

The reasons for imposing penalties, however, will be broadened somewhat so as to eliminate some of the evasions which taxpayers, not necessarily in the moving picture industry, have resorted to. The penalty for late filing, for instance, will be imposed in cases where returns are accompanied by unsigned checks, necessitating their returns to the taxpayer, if the check, properly signed, is not received until after the close of the period in which returns are to be filed, whether the failure to sign was the result of carelessness or deliberation.

Similar other practices, which may be methods of evading prompt filing and tax payment, will also be subject to penalty. There is no disposition on the part of officials of the bureau to make tax reporting more arduous than necessary, it is emphasized. The exhibitor who has a death in his family, or sudden illness, need not fear that a severe penalty will be imposed if his return is a day or two late, if he can give a good reason for his delinquency and show that it is not deliberate. Only those who deliberately seek to foil the proper administration of the law will be penalized, it is stated.

Consolidated Chain in Mid-West Brought Into Court—Lack Ready Cash

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Indianapolis—Fred A. Sims has been named receiver of the Consolidated Realty and Theaters Corp. Following the appointment of a receiver in what was termed a friendly suit, R. L. Martin of Chicago, president, declared none of the theaters would close. The petition was filed by the Hatfield Electric Co., which claimed $1,000 for equipment.

A. P. Kester of Sheridan, Ind., is secretary-treasurer. Martin took the place as president when F. H. Grunberg Sr., suffered a breakdown in health. Martin formerly was secretary-treasurer. Consolidated is holder of the title of most of the common stock of the Evansville Realty Co., which owns the Sonntag Hotel and Victory theater in Evansville and property in various cities. The corporation owns and operates the Liberty in Terre Haute; the Murray and Murette in Richmond; the Capitol in Clinton; the Pantheon in Vincennes, which was recently opened under new management; the Orpheum in Fort Wayne and the Strand in Kokomo. It holds a ninety-nine-year lease on the Park theater property at Capitol Ave. and Washington St. here, and a business site in Fort Wayne and a tract of land near Anderson. The reason for the receivership is a claim that the income is sufficient to pay current obligations.

Suit Filed in Ft. Wayne (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Fort Wayne, Ind.—A suit asking receiver for the Consolidated Realty and Theaters Corp., Chicago, filed in Circuit Court by Mrs. Caroline C. Schmidt, owner of a building at 821 Calhoun Street. She alleges that the company failed to make payments in accordance with a contract signed May 21, 1921. The company is insolvent, or soon will be, according to the complaint.

"Without a moment's hesitation we declare 'A Woman of Paris' the finest piece of filmery of the year. Marvelous!—Well, that is not half enough to say about it. The subtleness of humor, and grimness of tragedy, all prove the genius of the artist."—Irene, N. Y. Daily News.

"Artistically considered, the most satisfactory drama witnessed in the New York theatres."—Burton Rascoe, N. Y. Tribune.

Dear Friend:-

I want to say a few words to you with regard to PONJOLA. It is very seldom that I have much to say about the products coming into my various houses, but I want to say that PONJOLA was one of the biggest successes that has ever been in the Capitol Theatre. The business has gone way beyond my expectations, and there is no doubt in mind, but that PONJOLA will be one of the outstanding successes of the year.

Sincerely,

Chicago Meeting

led by Exhibitors Attending French Lick Meeting—For Closest Harmony

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 French Lick, Ind.—Another meeting of exhibitor leaders is scheduled for Chicago in about a month, at which time plans for the closest kind of cooperation will be developed.

It is noted, the exhibitors who attended the two-day session here were of the opinion that the time was not ripe for the formation of a new Central exhibitor body. Whether such an organization will come into being does not alter the fact that at Chicago a harmonious meeting is promised, devoid of political permeated with the idea of forming a real working alliance.

Back; Wins Omaha Suit

Edwin Loew returned from Omaha on Friday where he testified in court on brought by Loew's, Inc. against Wilfred Ledoux for the possession of the Empress theater. The case was to be turned over to the circuit by agreement but Ledoux instead sold it to the World Film Co. The action brought in District Court in Omaha was decided in favor of Loew.

"Mabel Normand at her very best" declared Edwin Schallert in the Los Angeles Times, of Mack Sennett's "The Extra Girl," the great Associated Exhibitors winner.—Advt.

French Lick

A group of notable exhibitors, intent of getting somewhere on the fight to repeal the admission tax met several days ago in French Lick. They decided to ask Will Hays to organize the states into a working organization to put this much needed legislation over. Something concrete is expected to happen in this connection in the next day or so.

There has been a widespread effort to help along this battle. Many well intentioned men have tried to pull an oar. That much better results could be accomplished by a concerted, concentrated effort, is undeniable. If the various state exhibitor organizations, the M. P. T. O. and individuals start doing things a lovely mess will result. A house divided against itself must fall. There should be one movement, one organization, to put this job through.

DON'T FORGET THIS

Every exhibitor; everyone interested in the repeal must bear this in mind: The admission tax will not be repealed; cannot be, if the Soldiers' Bonus Bill is passed. Many newspapers editorially comment to this effect. That, in a nutshell, is the situation. And this was pointed out in this publication on Oct. 31.

"Commandments" at Cohan Dec. 21

"The Ten Commandments" will have its world's premiere at the George M. Cohan theater on Dec. 21. Cecil B. DeMille will come East early next month to arrange the presentation. Hugo Riesenfeld prepared the music score.

John C. Flinn arrived in town Friday from the coast with the first print of the picture.

Burkan Before T. O. C. C.

Nathan Burkan, attorney for Cosmopolitan appeared before 50 T. O. C. C. members who hold contracts for "Enemies of Women" at the Astor on Friday, and discussed the difficulties existing over the booking of the picture. As noted, old contracts will be observed generally but each case will probably be settled individually. In some instances more money will be asked and in others, extended runs in order to permit the Hearst organization to realize a fair return on its investment.

Rocketts Arrive with Lincoln Film

Al and Ray Rockett, accompanied by Si Snyder arrived in New York from the coast Friday with a print of "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln." They are at the Commodore.

Kent Here

S. R. Kent arrived in town Friday from the coast, one day ahead of his schedule.

Ready for M. P. Day

Parade Up Broadway Locally—Mass Meetings by Exhibitors Held in Many Cities

The M. P. T. O. reported on Friday that following special mass meetings of exhibitors held in Boston, Philadelphia, Seattle, Cleveland, Newark, New York and other points, exhibitor units were all set for National M. P. Day which occurs on Monday.

In New York, the event will be introduced by a parade up Broadway on Saturday afternoon in which the Police Band will play and a number of floats arranged by producers have an active part. Sydney S. Cohen and national officers of the organization have been devoting most of their time of late in lining up various local bodies. They were in Boston last week and from there went to Cleveland. The mayors of New York and Cleveland have publicly endorsed the movement. In Hamilton, O., Fred S. Meyer has arranged a "Go to Movie Week" and in various cities and sections, different ideas have been advanced in order to acquaint the public with the plan.

Metro Issues Warning

David Bernstein of Metro issued the following statement on Friday:

"Someone posing as a representative of Metro Pictures Corp., has been circulating worthless drafts drawn on the Harriman National Bank of New York, bearing the name of 'A. Bernstein, Comptroller,' and has apparently succeeded in obtaining the cash for these worthless drafts. Metro Pictures Corp. never issue drafts in payment of any obligations.

"The public should be cautious and should apprehend any person presenting such worthless drafts."

Chase in Minneapolis

Maurice A. Chase, one of the veteran sales executives of Universal, has been placed in permanent charge of the Minneapolis exchange. The vacancy was caused by the selection of J. E. Rosen, for special sales work.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

This scene shows the Roman Forum, greatest of all ancient reminders of the early activities of that Empire. The Forum contained the temples of Castor and Pollus, the walls of which still stand.

The Julian Basilica also was enclosed within the Forum confines. Just in front of this magnificent specimen of prodigious Italian Might, George Fitzmaurice staged a scene between Barbara La Marr and Bert Lytell, so that the forum is a background for one of the poignant moments in "The Eternal City."—Advt.

In The Courts

Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohan has reserved decision on application of House Peters, for a temporary injunction restraining Charles O. Baumann from publishing announcements to the effect that the plaintiff is under contract with him, and threatening suits against any persons employing him. Peters admits that he and Baumann entered into a contract to cover a period of five years from May 1st, 1923; but avers through his attorney that Baumann under whose management he was to act if the contract remained in force failed to live up to its terms.

A judgment for $1,300 has been filed in the City Court against Edward Small in favor of Edna L. Britton on an assigned claim of Benjamin A. Rolfe. The complaint alleged that Rolfe and Small agreed that the latter would cut and title a German-made film, "Lady Godiva," and give Rolfe half the proceeds. It is alleged that Small collected $3,317 and refused to pay Rolfe anything. The suit was for $1,658.

Supreme Court Justice O'Malley has dismissed a suit against Thomas Healy, the 95th Street Broadway Corp., owner of the land at that corner, and the Kennedy Theaters, Inc., which erected a theater there and leased the property from the 95th St. and Broadway Corp. The suit was brought by Margaret Mayo, playwright, who lent $58,000 to the Kennedy Theaters before it failed. Miss Mayo contended that the lease was executed in favor of Healy, and $65,000 was charged as rent in order that it might be impossible for the Kennedy Theaters to pay it, and Healy would then get possession of the theater property free of the claim of creditors. She sought to collect the $58,000 from Healy and the 95th Street-Broadway Corp., in which he owned the bulk of the stock.

Rochester, N. Y.—The suit of Ralph Mariani, of New York, a musician, for money alleged due him in a contract to play in the Eastman orchestra, will be heard in Monroe County, instead of New York, as a result of a court order for a change of venue. Affidavits by Dr. Rush Rhee and Victor Wagner declare Mariani was discharged last December for insubordination and neglect of duty. Mariani, who was engaged as first horn September 2, 1922, seeks salary from December 27, 1922, under a year's contract which, he claims, was violated. Several other members of the orchestra will testify.

New Association Planned

The Film Laboratories Credit Ass'n will be the name of a new body to be formally launched next Thursday night at the Astor by various laboratory men. Officers will then be elected.

Mullin En Route West

Eugene Mullin, Eastern scenario editor for Goldwyn is on his way to the coast to assume charge there during the period June Mathis will work abroad in connection with "Ben Hur."

"Around the World in the Spee-jacks"—F. P. L.—Rivoli

DAILY NEWS—* * * Certainly provides some of the best movie entertainment ever.

EVENING JOURNAL—The Rivoli also is showing a camera record of the yacht Spee-jacks that cruised around the world. It is a fairly good travelogue although the photography is poor in many spots.

HERALD—They obtained some interesting pictures, but they managed to keep themselves so consistently in the foreground that they shut off much of the view.

MAIL—Also on the programme and far more entertaining than the feature picture is the first of two installments depicting the cruise of the Spee-jacks.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Though Terry Ramsaye has done his best to enliven the film matter with bright subtitles, even he has failed to give much vitality to it. * * * We found the first half pretty dull—both the photography and the content.

SUN—By turns charming and impressive, always vivid and always touching the far away corners of the world with a new viewpoint, these reels are among the very finest ever taken by globetrotters.

TIMES—This production shows some very interesting pictures of the Panama Canal, but the outstanding portions of it are those in * * * Australia. There is a good deal of human interest in this picture.

TRIBUNE—* * * An extremely interesting record of what happened to two young people who took a sail around the world on a 98-foot yacht for a wedding trip.

WORLD—It is at best an average and rather fragmentary travel picture.

"Pioneer Trails"—Vitagraph Rivoli

AMERICAN—On and on, says the subtitle, through barren lands, past snow-topped peaks and over an itinerary made famous by "The Covered Wagon," trotted the cast of "Pioneer Trails," * * * interrupted only by tearful farewells, Indian massacres and calico aprons.

DAILY NEWS—Another Vitagraph which means more attempts at thrill scenes and more old-fashioned gowns. But then, too, it means Alice Calhoun and Cullen Landis and these two members of the huge film force are by no means in the background when it comes to doing thrill stuff. * * * Portrayed by Otis Harlan and Aggie Herring. The picture's really not half bad.

EVENING JOURNAL—Vitagraph did two good things. First, it flung action into "Pioneer Trails" with a bountiful hand, placing a bully good Indian fight right up in the first reel, and then it gave the story a uniformity of the photographic excellence that would be difficult to surpass.

EVENING WORLD—It one had not beheld "The Covered Wagon," one would, we rather imagine, thoroughly enjoy "Pioneer Trails." * * * Almost any film would suffer in comparison with "The Covered Wagon," but Vitagraph * * * and featured players do everything they can to make the stepchild worthy of its grandparent. And they do a pretty fair job of it too.

HERALD—* * * Being an old fashioned Western melodrama with an old fashioned hero, heroine and villain, and an excessively old fashioned plot. It is pretty dull.

MAIL—The picture is replete with thrills, sick-of-time rescues and many dull moments. * * * The film contains some good old "western stuff," with fast and furious riding, a runaway stage coach and gunplay.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—This new Vitagraph picture has all the elements of popular success. The story is well planned and directed; there are odd and unexpected twists of plot, which add suspense, and the characters are clearly drawn.

SUN—* * * Its remarkably swift action, expertly directed without a fumble in the continuity, combined with pellucid photography, make it well worth inspection, for its speed covers a multitude of sinking spells on the part of subtitle and plot.

TIMES—Even the scenes in which the melodrama is introduced are splendidly photographed, and the little cottage * * * is so picturesque that one forgets the triteness of the story. In fact, it is the narrative and the subtitles that are the burden of this production, which far superior to the last two pictures presented on Broadway by the Vitagraph Corporation.

TRIBUNE—No doubt if we have seen it ten years ago we would have marvelled at the perfection of the direction, story and acting, for at that time it would have been a pretty good picture, no doubt. At present it hasn't a thing to recommend it.

WORLD—For years the familiarity of this plot has not militated against its success. The current treatment renders it normally satisfactory, occasionally exciting.

"Under the Red Robe"—Gold. Cosmop.—Cosmopolitan

AMERICAN—This film made me ponder upon the tremendous amount of energy, research and diligent preparation put into such a production. One false note and there would be calamity. There was no such false note.

DAILY NEWS—On the whole, what with its splendid settings and fine support on the part of the cast, the Cosmopolitan has a really good film this time—but still too long. Maybe—maybe they'll cut down on the next.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * One of the rip-roaring, rush-riding, sword swallowing, high-diving, death, defying do and dare romances of the old days when brave hearts.

WORLD—It is frightfully long. Of course, it is. They all are. It is one of the loveliest things pictorially which have been screened up to last night. * * *

We know of none of the French costume play situations not included in "Under the Red Robe." The cavaliers' clash in the ravine. No skimping has been tolerated. It is a big picture. And at times an extremely beautiful one.

EVENING WORLD—But "Under the Red Robe," the newest and most "super" of all the grist that has come from the Cosmopolitan mill, is a "big picture" among big pictures. * * * A gem, but to our way of thinking, a gem somewhat dimmed by the gaudiness of its setting.

MAIL—Set in a background that is lavish at the same time beautiful, a rare combination in the movies. * * * To this reviewer the successor to "Unseeing Eyes" is like a book bound in the costliest leather, brilliantly illuminated but containing a story entirely undeserving of the artistic effort on the part of the publishers.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * "Under the Red Robe" is produced with a sympathetic understanding that makes it not merely a historical pageant, but a warm, throbbing human story suitable for any age and any time. * * * Alma Rubens as Renee never looked as well nor ever gave as finished a performance in her life.

POST—* * * It does seem as if that amount of money should have given much better results. * * * As a whole, it is a slow-moving and tiring picture, with an all-star cast which appeared for the most part not to take a great deal of interest in what was happening.

SUN—* * * Has many things a movie needs good acting, really magnificent photography, a story that begins at a more or less definite point and proceeds with some coherence to a more or less definite, if not strikingly unexpected, conclusion. But it needs * * * the scissors.

TELEGRAM—For "Under the Red Robe" undoubtedly will go down in silver screen history as one of the classics, taking its place with such masterpieces as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Scaramouche."

TIMES—The scenes in many sequences of this film are so attractive that without much else they would be worth viewing. * * * The settings constructed on the studio grounds are ambitious and at times effective, but in instances they fail to give an idea of solidity or massiveness. * * * This picture, like many others, may have outstanding failings, but the costumes, the exteriors and some of the sets make it a production that is satisfying on many points. It ought, however, to be cut to a more wieldy length. This might help the narrative.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—* * * John Charles Thomas, instead of being a stagey baritone, revealed himself as a screen actor of parts, with no suggestion of the artificiality such as one would expect of him.

That, of course, was the kick of last night's presentation, but besides the production was a real work of art. The picture, although in its present form it is much too long, has the essence of high-class romantic melodrama. * * *

TRIBUNE—* * * Although the picture pleases the eye it is as dull an entertainment as we have sat through in some time.

The characters move through a lot of beautiful sets leisurely and apathetically.

Out-of-Town

"The Acquittal"—Universal Hippodrome, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—And this is one a real murder mystery. * * * a first rate mystery melodrama.

"The Bad Man"—1st Nat'l Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—Holbrook Blinn repeats the success which he attained when he played the piece on the legitimate stage. * * * All the elements that go to make up melodrama are contained in "The Bad Man." * * * The picture is noteworthy in its attention to detail.

NEWS—The picture has made a brave uphill fight to conquer the loss of Blinn's voice and the subtitles, picking the most humorous of those lines that were so powerful on the stage, are far more satisfying than you might imagine they would be.

If it were not for the presence of Mr. Blinn at the head of the cast "The Bad Man" would be just an ordinary western film open to criticism because of its slow action.

TIMES—He not only doesn't "fall flat" but gives one of the finest performances we have seen in many months on the screen. * * * All of which bolstered by the fine work of a good supporting cast places "The Bad Man" right up in the front row of good melodramatic comedy for screen consumption.

"The Broken Wing"—Preferred Capitol, Philadelphia

INQUIRER—There's a clever twist to the ending of the story, too good to divulge.

NORTH AMERICAN—* * * stirring feature.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—Few pictures have come this way with better titles than "The Broken Wing." They are brilliant, snappy and exquisitely worded. But this picture has more than titles. It has a fine mixture of thrills and laughs.

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—"The Broken Wing," is another enjoyable screen adaptation of a successful stage production. It has titles that make it unusually effective, for they retain much of the flavor of the original piece.

RECORD—It is a thrilling and unusual story which holds up very well for picturization, and its surprises are genuinely dramatic. There is a good deal of fun in the action, which is funny in itself, but it does not always further the unfolding of the plot and creates the feeling that it has been dragged in forcibly.

"Counterfeit Love"—Asso. Exhibitors New Olympic, Buffalo

COURIER—There is plenty of action. * * * The comedy element is furnished by southern ducky characters and there is real dashing romance.

"The Destroying Angel"—Asso. Ex. Regent, Philadelphia

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—It's an unusual story and well transferred to the screen.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—It should appeal to those who enjoy stories about theatrical people, and that includes most of us.

"Hell's Hole"—Fox Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—A thrilling melodrama. * * * The production teems with action and melodrama and some good comedy.

Monroe, Chicago

POST—A smashing, vivid, quick melo-drama is this picture with the sounding title. It is one of those firing stories which hardly leaves minute to catch your breath after one long scene before you are rushed on to the next, until you begin to think is almost more excitement than you stand packed into this one picture.

"His Children's Children"—F. Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—Considerable spirit has been preserved, but not to make it more than a "movie." In movies go, a fairly good one. In hopelessly inaccurate portrayal of novel would be nothing to get very about.

PRESS—Arthur Train may have more into his novel, "His Children's Children."

But we couldn't find much sense story as filmed in the movie this Allen. * * * As a piece of movie manship the picture is all right, at least ordinarily interesting.

Capitol, Cincinnati

POST—Arthur Train's novel, "His Children's Children," has been transcribed the screen by Sam Wood in a manner which even the most confirmed moviegoer scarcely can pick a flaw. * * * Pa * * * has brought forth a thing of and a joy for a long time at least.

TIMES-STAR—Not since "Only there been such a realistic and gripping sensation of an every-day drama from temporary life as "His Children's Children." * * * The atmosphere is vividly conveys the various characterizations are intelligent acting; and oh, what of an ending!

"If Winter Comes"—Fox Hippodrome, Buffalo

COURIER—But if you did not book, this new Fox film will convince that you should. Thus we unhesitatingly join our brother reviewers of New Chicago and San Francisco, when they picture one of the best of the years.

EVENING NEWS—While soot theme and lacking in the vigorous action which the public has become accustomed to, this William Fox production has many titles to commend it. * * *

With rare faithfulness the novel is transferred to the screen, uncolored and unchanged. The result is a film that strange story in a straightforward

"In the Palace of the King"—Cosmop.

State, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—She (June Marjorie) translated "In the Palace of the King" F. Marion Crawford's novel, and it is another creditable bit of work. * * * the Palace of the King" is too long, is an interesting, well done and tremendously costly picture.

"Jealous Husbands"—1st Nat'l The Chicago, Chicago

JOURNAL—But the chaste and walls of the great Chicago have many other otherwise blue Monday enclaves of greater spontaneity than greeted "Jealous Husbands." * * * for two bits of boys, Don Marion Alexander, who roved adorably through story of excellent hokum.

POST—It takes this story some get under way, and it appears many ideas which are never finished is sketchy and spotty, but many scenes are exceptionally good. * * * it all runs the appeal of the child very splendid work of the two children when it settles down and gets into swing of the melodramatic story yet overlook many of its failings.

"Long Live The King"—New, Baltimore

EVENING SUN—While we have been an ardent admirer of the Coog

Shown This Week in 9 Key Cities

are, in fact—you'll have to put us to sleep. The greatest reason for perhaps the undue length of "Long King," which, in 10 reels, is about five reels too long.

By far the best thing he has done here is afforded an opportunity for genuine acting and a stronger intonation of his part than in any of his plays.

"Main Street"—Warner's Walnut, Cincinnati

We recommend "Main Street" as a corking good photoplay. It is a masterpiece of the genre. Herbert Beaumont has taken uppardonties with "Main Street" or whether he can't take enough, is no concern of us. As a movie, it's good stuff.

ES-STAR—The play exhibits one common to many pictures adapted from the attempt to broaden and emphasize the author's points, the director's or a touch of humor has transformed satire into burlesque.

"Meanest Man in the World"—First National Rivoli, Baltimore

After a little wasted footage earlier reels: "The Meanest Man in the World" works up to a satisfactory climax. Rivoli's new picture has several things to recommend it. Not the least of these is the Yankee Doodle personality of M. Cohan.

VENING SUN—It's good material and well acted. A breezy, up-to-the-minute American comedy put over in a way and with no fold de rols.

There is something wholesome about the picture. There are no cheap effects. It cost a million dollars to produce but while you are under its spell spend a pleasant hour.

"Midnight Alarm"—Vitagraph Victoria, Philadelphia

There is plotting, intrigue, and almost everything else that can conveniently be crowded into an picture. And, withal there are many interesting situations and a most sensational climax.

NORTH AMERICAN—After seeing the picture and realizing that it has been made in the last five years one can only reach the conclusion that it is intended for the screen.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—An excellent picture is "The Midnight Alarm." Alice Calhoun, as waif and grand-daughter is credible; the supporting cast is good.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—It is possible to take this picture seriously, "The Midnight Alarm" is packed and filled with all the melodramatic tricks of the trade.

RD—"The Midnight Alarm" is a picture melodrama of perennial popularity. It stirs the people who still have not unduly sophisticated emotions. The thrills are not unduly prolonged, and the editing is less carefully edited pictures.

"Ponjola"—First Nat'l Park and Mall, Cleveland

Miss Nilsson with her close cropped hair does a com-masculine character. The picture sticks pretty closely to the story. The story isn't altogether new. It has been given enough novel twists to keep it moving along rapidly. It has a good share of romance and sentiment, and is of the highest order, technically.

The film has followed more the original story than is usual. It is an interesting story, well portrayed, how-

Olympia, Boston

SCRIPT—"Ponjola," it may be said from this, is all about a muddle of the sexes. Not the kind of a mud-furnishes such absorbing, if rather cheap, but merely the sort of thing that makes so many movies just fodder.

"Potash and Perlmutter"—1st Nat'l Madison, Detroit

FREE PRESS—The story told is highly amusing for the most part, with just a few scenes of emotional interest by way of contrast, and through it all the wonderful pantomimic work of Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr is just as vivid as on the speaking stage.

NEWS—Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr have done an effective job in transferring the adventures of Abe Potash and Maw-russ Perimutter to the motion picture screen and that simple statement is enough of a guarantee that you will find rich entertainment at the Madison this week.

TIMES—"Potash and Perlmutter" represents a good, clean, wholesome comedy drama, well produced and told as to bring out the best in Glass' play.

"Richard The Lion Hearted"—Allied Karlton, Philadelphia

EVENING BULLETIN—Unfolded with apparent faithfulness to the period, which strikes a strong note of realism, Wallace Beery gives a vivid portrayal of King Richard and sustains the trying role with gratifying results.

INQUIRER—Beery, as Richard Coeur de Lion, the mighty King of England, gives a convincing and vital performance.

NORTH AMERICAN—It has some historical interest, and a certain amount of atmosphere, but it lacks the same debonair and abandoned quality that marked "Robin Hood," which was a tale of the same period. Beery enacts his role in his accustomed finished style, but he seems to be a little forced at times. The story itself is not particularly interesting and the action moves very slowly.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—It is a remarkably fine creation, too, a thing of power and of subtlety. Beery can be, one moment, the almost childish, primitive Richard, who throws his barber into his own bath, and, the very next moment the truly regal, impressive King Richard. Otherwise this picture is of moderate power.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—"Richard the Lion-Hearted" is a production which loses much of its glamor when compared to its glorious predecessor, "Robin Hood," which it resembles in many instances, although never reaching the same heights. The film holds the attention fairly well.

RECORD—Splendid success was achieved in "Richard the Lion-Hearted." The work of Wallace Beery as Richard is one of the finest bits of acting seen on the screen. The action of this fine Frank E. Woods production is speedy, and the story is carried along coherently and dramatically.

"Scaramouche"—Metro Park, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—"Scaramouche" is Mr. Ingram's finest attempt at the spectacular to date. It lacks the polish, the imaginative undercurrent which have characterized some of his shorter and more despoised pieces. It is somewhat uneven, but it is generally convincing, and, during the closing sequences, overwhelming. To attain so high a degree of success on a terrain already so well-trodden as the French Revolution, is no mean accomplishment.

"Six Days"—Gold. Cosmop. Stanley, Philadelphia

EVENING BULLETIN—Packed full with thrills. To Miss Griffith is due great credit for lifting a pretty though improbable plot into the realm of real and stirring drama. Her acting makes the film seem a probable bit of real life happening to a very dramatically articulate young woman.

INQUIRER—Sensation of any kind and particularly the sensation that promises to border upon the risque seems destined to always attract the large majority of the public. This was never more clearly evidenced than in the large crowds which thronged the Stanley. The plot of the story is a cheap one, of the kind that finds a large circulation among current light fiction. The acting falls short of any artistic standards.

NORTH AMERICAN—She makes "one woe to tread upon another's heels," and they come so thick and fast that all semblance of sincerity is lost and hilarity is the result. Corinne Griffith is the heroine and is fairly acceptable in her many emotional moments. Frank Mayo did not seem to be the best choice for the leading man.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—The acting and the plot construction of Elinor Glyn make "Six Days" a production containing more thrills and romance than any six days in real life imaginable. The story really isn't an old one at all, but contains new situations and novel angles.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—All the Glynonian touches are apparent in "Six Days." Elinor Glyn's latest production. Much high society in the usual furor of bridge parties and innumerable closeups of a weepy individual misjudged by every one but loved passionately by a "he-man" an honest-to-goodness, dyed-in-the-wool English peer.

RECORD—Corinne Griffith had the principal feminine role in "Six Days." As Laline Kingston she won instant approbation of all who saw the excellent production. "Six Days" strikes a note of realism such as few photodramas attain.

"The Thrill Chaser"—Universal Randolph, Chicago

TRIBUNE—The plot of "The Thrill Chaser" is just as foolish as it can be. Farce—the thing—from beginning to end. It has, however, a number of laughable situations and subtitles; much "movie" atmosphere and considerable good work done by everybody concerned.

"The Social Code"—Metro Wizard-Parkway, Baltimore

EVENING SUN—Won't somebody please write a funny story for poor Viola Dana? There oughta be a law passed making it a crime to bury this little comedienne in anything more serious than a bubbling comedy. We wouldn't write her a story like "The Social Code" which flickers concurrently at the Wizard and the Parkway. This sort a stuff is all right for Pauline Frederick and the "heavy" girls, but not Vi.

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L. Fenway, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—Is by far her most engaging effort since she left Germany. It finds her once more in a romantic part, where her pantomimic virtuosity seems neither overstrained nor cribbed and confined. Mr. Brenon's direction of numerous carnival scenes in Madrid is especially noteworthy.

"Tea With a Kick"—Asso. Exhibitors Metropolitan, Baltimore

AMERICAN—It is all very, very sad; more than a bit disturbing.

"Three Ages"—Metro McVicker's, Chicago

AMERICAN—"The Three Ages" has many moments which approach the uproarious. The chariot race, for instance, showing the "frozen-faced" comedian employing a dog team brought a near-typhoon of laughter.

HERALD-EXAMINER—It is very funny. "The Three Ages" overflows with gags and wise cracks.

JOURNAL—His still countenance continues to be the merriest thing in his pictures, and I am wondering at the moment if he broke his rule and laughed at "Three Ages" when he saw it complete in his own projection room.

TRIBUNE—It provides a few cozy, fire-side smiles, but for me the "kick" was missing. A lot of persons laughed a lot and may you be one of those who thoroughly enjoy it.

"Times Have Changed"—Fox Garden, Baltimore

AMERICAN—"Times Have Changed" tries to be so many things at the same time that it leaves the onlooker confused and a little indignant. They've placed William Russell in a hodge-podge mix-up.

"The Unknown Purple"—Truart Modern-Beacon, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—It turns out to be a moderately thrilling tale for the screen, even though it falls far short of its measure as a spoken play. The lighting throughout is excellent; in the eerie passages especially so. The settings are safely removed from realistic likelihood, yet artistically suggestive.

"The White Sister"—Inspiration Chestnut St. O. H., Phila.

EVENING BULLETIN—Could be divided into a dozen pieces, till all vestige of plot was lost, and yet remain a beautiful series of pictures. Not that the plot is not sound enough, but it is overshadowed by a picturization that really puts this work in the class of pictorial rather than dramatic art.

Lillian Gish and a splendid supporting cast are photographed with an art and expressive power that at times almost make their excellent acting superfluous, so complete, so poignantly beautiful and so meaningful are just the pictures themselves.

INQUIRER—Is a truly notable production and one well deserving the glowing accounts heralding its arrival.

Lillian Gish in the stellar role and in her first Henry King production, has achieved the best work in her career, and has created a part which will be long remembered. It is a role which requires great sympathy and understanding and an exquisite fineness of artistry. Miss Gish has brought all this and more. She has caught the tragic spirit of the novel as it was written.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—"The White Sister" is a story unusual in theme. How Sister Angela solves the tremendous problem of choosing between her great earthly love and her heavenly vows supplies the powerful climax of the motion picture.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—Lillian Gish gives one of the finest performances of her career. The role offers her, with delicate appeal, her poignant charm and pathetic beauty, an unsurpassed opportunity to depict an anguished soul, rent by sadness and misfortune.

Great Northern, Chicago

HERALD and EXAMINER—Miss Lillian Gish, as Angela Chiaromonte in "The White Sister," gives the most gorgeous performance of her career. Though a little too long and leisurely, "The White Sister" will, I think, hold your attention throughout.

JOURNAL—There is something lingeringly lovely about the picture—a scrap here, another there, unimportant scatterings which give an exotic illusion. This touch of exoticism does much to make the tale seem truer. "The White Sister" must be accepted as one of the year's important offerings because of the clearness and definiteness of its story and the expert work of its players. Judged by what it is, and not by what it lacks, it should stand near the top of the list.

POST—Lillian Gish, assisted by a coterie of most capable players, has made this tragedy into a story which will grip you and hold your intense interest. It is handled with dignity and reverence, but the entire dramatic appeal of the story is based on a nun's "marriage to the church." It is always a gamble as to how the public will receive the depiction on the screen of the sacred rites of one particular religion.

TRIBUNE—One of the most exquisite photoplays ever screened. The power, the beauty, the realism, the pathos of it must strike home. A high note of ecstasy runs through even the most painful moments of the film. You are never depressed, though. She (Lillian Gish) is lovely throughout and does "bits" of most excellent acting. Ronald Colman as her lover, is immense.

"A Woman of Paris"—Unit. Artists Capitol, Detroit

FREE PRESS—It is just a simple story, but Chaplin has made of it a screen classic that holds attention to the very end. It moves along swiftly to the final fadeout, with no tiresome padding to make it the required length. Technically, it is, well nigh perfect, although there are little flaws that the over-critical might mention.

French Lick

"I. N. R. I."

Probably, without doubt, the finest film ever made, depicting the life of Christ. Reverend, magnificently produced, culminating in the suffering of Christ on the Cross, producing an effect which will move the most hardened picture goer. A splendid conception.

MAKING THE GRADE

Lillian Gale. Well known in trade paper circles. Said she was going to get in on pictures. And did. Appears in "The Way of a Man," Pathe. As a hardened woman of the plains. Carrying a gun big enough to choke a horse. And smoking a pipe. Fine character stuff. Should have no trouble in keeping on. And in.

HOW IT WORKS

Some of the smart boys had it all figured out. How could Kenneth Harlan play the lead in "The Virginian." Which cost Preferred a lot of money. They couldn't see him. But he does it. And mighty well, too. Looks like Bill Hart when Bill was a couple years younger. Has that same steely eye. Makes a mighty fine Virginian. Should help put it over. Picture too long. This type of material never should run eight reels.

REGARDING RUDOLF

Once again Valentino is in the limelight. Williams has him signed up for five pictures. Very pretty. But over at Famous they say nothing has been done to change the status of events. Which means the Sheik has some time to wait. Before he can star. For Jaydee. Or anyone.

CECIL'S SIX

DeMille. Says he likes the following. Best of all pictures. The Birth of a Nation, Joan the Woman, Cabiria, Male and Female, Intolerance, Robin Hood.

Modest. Only includes two. That he made himself.

BLAMED FOR MORE

"Musical America's" investigation. As to the cause for the decline of interest in the oratorio in this country. Finds one outstanding reason—among the five given by choral conductors—the movies.

Is there anything else going wrong for which the movies aren't to be blamed?

SWAN SONG SINGING

Charlie Chaplin writes to Quinn Martin. Of the New York World. Saying in part:

"* * * Once I had a day vision. I saw at my feet in a huddled heap all the paraphernalia and trappings of my screen clothes—that dreadful suit of clothes—my mustache, the battered derby, the little cane, the broken shoes, the dirty collar and shirt. I felt as though my body had fallen from me and that I was leaving behind an eternal seeming for a vast reality. That day I resolved never to get into those clothes again—to retire to some Italian lake with my beloved violin, my Shelley and Keats, and live, under an assumed name, a life purely imaginative and intellectual; but the instinct to be other than I really am, which is universal, is too strong in me and I went in for just one more picture—the last; like the drunkard's eternal last drink and Patti's eternal farewell."

Does this mean that Charlie is through with comedy?

A SENSE OF HUMOR

Joe Heim has quit exhibiting in Danville, Pa. Sold to Comberford. Regarding which Joe writes: "Have staged a little battle here. With malice aforethought. Instead of a battle between an individual and a chain, it will be a battle between a small large chain."

JACK MOVING ALONG

Jack Stebbins did so well for John Zanft. With the Fox St. Academy of Music. That he was sent to Oakland, California. To run the fine big Fox house there. And they do say he's running good. In a real way. Atta boy.

HOYT'S IDEA

Harry Hoyt. Now with First National on the Coast. Making pictures. Has a real thought. "Pictures," says Harry, "are made of Americans the greatest story tellers in the world. They begin with the young people telling their parents what they saw at the movies. And then the older folk get the habit. This has developed in our people a latent sense of story appreciation. Their minds have become keener—more analytical. Producers do not seem to appreciate this. And to meet this growing understanding, scenarios must be written accordingly."

There's a thought, Mister Producer. Heed it.

JUST A SIDELIGHT

One of the reasons for high production costs. A producer was given a bill by a Hollywood studio for $300. For typing a scenario.

Must have used a diamond studded, platinum finished typewriter.

JOINT DISTRIBUTION

Needed. According to Godsol of Goldwyn. Who suggests that producers and distributors act. Instead of talking. To get off the controlled town block booking ideas. Of some exhibitors. Of course some oppose his ideas. Naturally. But if ever wise counsel was spoken. It was when Godsol pointed out that by a more economically right distribution idea, and a real percentage plan, the industry would get somewhere. On that he's dead right. Make no mistake about it.

Second—"How was what?"

Hiram (Shifts to the next foot and bites his cigar. Nudges closer.)

First—"How was the picture?"

Second—"Oh! the picture. You mean 'Rosita.' Yea. Well, I liked the prologue much better."

First—"Umph. But you can't book the prologue."

Hiram—"But you can book the picture."

(Car reaches ninth floor.)

Come in to see us boys."

Economics Bureau Shows Films Special to THE FILM DAILY
 Washington—The Bureau of Commercial Economics of which Dr. Charles H. Holley is the director is now turning 25,000,000 feet of film and buying new material at the rate of 100,000 feet per month. The bureau is not a Government body but is organized in cooperation with various governments to exhibit motion pictures which show processes of industry in those countries. The films are free and are often held open with the projection from specially equipped mock-ups. Despite the large amount of material in circulation, the Bureau is buying new material since it cannot acquire more than fifty per cent of its requirements. Industrials made private by manufacturing companies desired provided the production elements that are considered of general public good.

Newspaper Opinions

NEWS—All those sacred traditions of the screen established by the Griffiths, the DeMilles, the Neilans and other prides of the motion picture directing field are shattered to smithereens by the first serious effort of Charlie Chaplin as a director. "A Woman of Paris" is the most original and unconventional film story ever produced. * * * The most striking feature about "A Woman in Paris" is its ingenious simplicity.

TIMES—Some of the finest directorial touches—some of which Griffith might be proud—are contained. * * * Charlie has given to the screen a clever, unusual picture in "A Woman of Paris."

"Woman Proof"—F. P.-L. Strand, Cincinnati

POST—Tom Meighan adds little to his laurels in "Woman-Proof." * * * This is a story by George Ade, who insists upon ringing in a subtitle every few feet. And the Adesque humor is not so rib-tickling as it may have been once.

"Woman-Proof" has an impossible plot.

Baby Peggy's First

Baby Peggy's first picture for Principal will be "Captain January," by Laura E. Richards. It goes into production on the 21st on the coast with Eddie Cline directing.

Phil Reisman Honored

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—With Theodore L. Hays, acting as toastmaster, 40 ex-changemen tendered Phil Reisman a banquet as a farewell token before assuming the post of general manager of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of Canada.

TIMES-STAR—Ade has one rather promising idea for his central theme, but it is apparent that he was hard pressed in stretching it out over eight reels of feature-length picture. * * * The picture, despite its defects, is mildly entertaining. But it isn't substantial enough for the star, either in action or characterization. * * *

State, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—Though the plot is original, the sub-titles far above the average, and the acting generally good, much letterpress is required to carry out the intervals between amusing incidents and fill in many blank and uninteresting feet of film.

Reviews of the Newest Features

Priscilla Dean in "White Tiger"
Universal—Jewel

Whole... CLEVER CROOKERY THAT IS ORIGINAL THOROUGHLY INTERESTING; CERTAINLY KEEPS GUESSING ALTHOUGH QUOEMENT IS RATHER APPROPRIATE.

In a role very much on the order of what she generally has; characterization effective and well done.

A small supporting company well selected types and capable performers. Raymond Griffith very coming to the fore; all he does do is tone down a nervous tendency to jig around too much; Wallace Beery always a dependable; Matt Moore not very conspicuous.

Story... Crook story with a twist rather than usual; is original and quite absorbing. Has many interesting situations and certainly keeps a suspense, the only unfortunate thing of which is a weak climactic finale that fails to support this great suspense. Tod Browning, both producer and director of the piece concentrated his entire effort on the story and his direction on building toward the climactic putting in bits of detail to keep them guessing, and other touches, all of which promise a great surprise dependent for the climax. So it is bound to be disappointing when the ending comes about casually without much excitement. The ending, you don't know how; how she recovers, you don't know; and Miss Dean, the heroine, at Matt Moore, her rich admirer, is not altogether a satisfactory ending to such a good story.

Box Office Angle... Where they like the crook theme, they'll be satisfied with "White Tiger." It has a suspense creating qualities necessary to give them a thrill and they like to be kept in doubt, and rely upon this filling the void.

Exploitation... You know whether Priscilla Dean's name draws to the box office. If it does, her name and the title of the best Universal release. It is sort of a story they'll expect to find her in, and should give satisfaction. Also use the names of Wallace Beery, Raymond Griffith and Matt Moore. Tell about the wax museum scenes and show a trailer of the important episodes.

Direction... Tod Browning; all very good except that climax should have had more force.
Authors... Tod Browning
Scenario... Charles Kenyon
Photography... William Fildew

B. P. Schulberg presents
"The Virginian"

Preferred Pictures Corp.

As a Whole... EXCELLENT PRODUCTION, GORGEOUS LOCATIONS BEAUTIFULLY PHOTOGRAPHED, SPLENDID ACTING, ALL A BIT INJURED BY TOO MUCH FOOTAGE THAT DRAGS STORY—SHOULD BE CUT.

Cast... Kenneth Harlan gives a splendid performance in the title role; Florence Vidor a charming heroine; uniformly good cast that includes Russell Simpson, Pat O'Malley, Raymond Hatton.

Type of Story... Drama of the west, from the well known novel and play.

Director Forman has been so painstaking in his work that it is unfortunate a really worthwhile production should suffer the handicap of extreme footage. The picture will have to be cut considerably to speed it up sufficiently to hold the attention. In its present state it will not hold them all the way. Forman holds his scenes interminably and has gone in for far too much detail, even though much of it is highly commendable. He reaches an anti-climax about three quarters way through and from this point particularly the story drags. There is an absence of action and they'll surely expect action in this story.

Box Office Angle... Will undoubtedly be big drawing card. The title will surely bring them in. When properly cut the picture will send them out satisfied. Production values are extremely high and you can talk extensively on pictorial appeal.

Exploitation... Plenty of good possibilities in it. You have a title that will attract. They may recall the Dustin Farnum picture of some years ago and be anxious to see the story done again. This current presentation is by far a better made picture and can be depended upon to delight them from a pictorial viewpoint. Preferred's press sheet suggests many excellent advertising stunts one that is especially good, that of a teaser campaign in the way of silhouettes of great Virginians, one to be printed each day in your local newspaper. This can be handled in numerous ways, offering prizes for answers, etc. Display stills to give an idea of the beautiful locations. Use the names of Kenneth Harlan, and Florence Vidor prominently.

Direction... Tom Forman; very good but picture runs way too long.
Authors... Owen Wister and Kirke La Shelle.
Scenario... Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton.
Cameraman... Harry Perry
Photography... Excellent
Locale... The West
Length... 8,010 feet

"Under the Red Robe"

Producer: Cosmopolitan
Distributor: Goldwyn

As a Whole... WHEN THEY HACK FOUR OR FIVE REELS OUT THIS SHOULD PROVE A MIGHTY FINE PICTURE. IT'S PRESENT FORM MILITATES AGAINST ITS VALUE AS ENTERTAINMENT. JUST A SERIES OF BEAUTIFUL SHOTS IN THIS COSTLY PRODUCTION.

Cast... Long list of people, rather well known on stage, but not overly important to fans, except for Alma Rubens, who has many beautiful close-ups. John Charles Thomas the concert singer, robust in figure, and does a lot of Fairbanks stunts—not so successfully. Ian MacLaren not as weak a King as the story calls for; Mary MacLaren as the Queen means nothing. Mantell not sympathetic as Richelieu.

Type of Story... Another of those romantic affairs with lots of gorgeous sets and scenery, with men in armor, splashes of courtiers and court costumes with swords and daggers, and another of those plots against the King. They've shown this same sort of plot about four or five times so far this season. This is like all the rest—the King in danger, the rescue and all that goes with it. Public pretty well tired of it by this time.

Box Office Angle... Wherever the Hearst papers circulate you can expect a goodly amount of publicity and advertising to help this latest of Hearst productions go over. Where this condition does not obtain you had best be careful. It's too long and draggy for words in its present form, although when it goes on the road it will probably be materially cut. It ran over two and half hours—not counting the intermission period—at the opening. It's just another big pretentious costly costume production. That's all. No names that mean enough to put it over from this angle.

Exploitation... Stick to the title. Your old timers will remember it. Get a lot of photos and stills and dress up the lobby. Some of these may bring them back. Get a trailer showing the thrilling cliff scene where the dumb servant hurls a soldier over, going down with him; and another shot of the combat between Gil and the Prince and his followers on horseback in the river bed. If these won't bring them back nothing will. Talk of the gorgeous production.

Direction... Alan Crosland; shot far too much footage. Production wears, story drags fearfully.
Author... Stanley Weyman
Scenario... Bayard Veiller
Cameramen... Harold Wenstrom and Gilbert Warrenton
Photography... Magnificent
Locale... France during Richelieu's time
Length... About 13,000 feet.

"Flaming Youth"

First National

As a Whole... BILLED AS "A STARTLING EXPOSE OF THE WOMAN OF TODAY," "FLAMING YOUTH" IS ALL THAT AND MORE; WILL UNDOUBTEDLY DO BIG BUSINESS.

Cast... Colleen Moore featured in a role which she does exceptionally well, probably the best thing she has ever done; all particularly well suited types for Warner Fabian's characters. Myrtle Stedman good as Mona; Elliott Dexter splendid as Dr. Bobs and Milton Sills a satisfying Carey Scott.

Type of Story... All about the way modern girls live but shouldn't. A presentation of the much discussed novel which gained fame because of its daring treatment of the modern girl. No doubt the film will crawl equally well although those in search of a sensation may find the film version tame in comparison. Nevertheless all of the "kick" hasn't been eliminated, and under the careful supervision of John Dillon there is still enough pep to satisfy lovers of jazz entertainment.

The picture has been made nicely and the story handled better than one would imagine was possible in view of the situations.

Box Office Angle... Will draw capacity business no doubt. Just a glimpse at a suggested poster will be enough for you to know that they'll come in. It promises: "A swimming pool party that will startle you,"—"a spicy expose of ultra-modern society by an author who didn't dare sign his right name—the truth, bald, naked, sensational." That should be a winner, but of course, not for the family crowd.

Exploitation... Just a few lines like those above will be all you'll need to bring a long line to your box-office. The title itself, already well advertised through the popularity of the book, will bring a crowd. Count on your flapper delegation to advertise the showing for you. They'll whisper about the book being naughty, it will be passed around, and there will be a mob on hand. Word-of-mouth advertising is what will put this over.

Colleen Moore gives a really interesting performance as Pat. They'll like her. There's nothing genuinely offensive in the picture, but you may have to do a little considering if you cater strictly to family trade. Anything in the way of jazz will exploit the picture attractively.

Direction... John Francis Dillon; handled story nicely; it runs a little too long.
Author... Warner Fabian
Scenario... Harry O. Hoyt
Cameraman... James C. Van Trees
Photography... Very good
Locale... City suburb
Length... 8,434 feet

What's Wrong in The Business

Can't Boost Prices

W. W. Hodkinson Says Public Won't Pay—Favors Theater Classifications

Any move to increase admissions to offset waste in the business is doomed to failure, according to W. W. Hodkinson who thinks, on the contrary, that increased quality in production is necessary in order to maintain even the present prices. The hope of increased revenue to support the picture industry is wider circulation at present or lower prices, rather than any endeavor to force the public to pay for all of the waste that the present competitive condition in production has forced on the industry.

Hodkinson thinks that there must be drastic changes in the business if it is to continue to be the leading entertainment of the American people. He is of the opinion that an occasional film can run in so-called legitimate houses at regular prices but he has no faith in the idea that this can be generally accomplished at this time. He declares:

"The combined industry can probably furnish enough pictures of really special quality to support, in each large community, a house charging regular theatrical prices of admission provided the pictures are shown only in those houses, but it would take the combined efforts of the industry, with the open hand extended to new producers, to encourage additional worthy things from new sources to get an adequate supply of really superior things to carry through such a policy. Such a general co-operative condition in the industry would permit not only the big house with the big productions to become established as an institution, but would provide for the establishment of several other classes of houses which would greatly simplify the present problems of censorship and other such complications as to what to do for the children.

"It is undoubtedly true that only by the producer and exhibitor agreeing on the principle of percentage booking, on an equitable basis, can future progress be made in this industry. We are still a long way from our goal however, while the exhibitor so generally rebels against the acceptance of the percentage principle. However, he is not to be blamed on this account, because percentage up to this time has meant to him, that some factory producer unloaded on him all of the bad pictures he made, or pictures of indifferent quality, at a flat price based on production cost under wasteful system, while he was asked to make guarantees and share above these guarantees on anything of unusual quality.

"Therefore, he is not to be blamed for having a biased viewpoint as to what percentage really means. We will first have to educate the exhibitor up to the fact that percentage means equitable percentage. As long as the producing organizations speak of formulas which they can apply providing for a split on the percentage, we must expect exhibitor rebellion."

Disagrees With Brandt

B. P. Schulberg Says High Star Salaries Not Responsible For Present Difficulties

B. P. Schulberg, of Preferred declares that his experience as a producer does not coincide with the recent statement made by William Brandt, that the difficulties now being felt by the industry can be traced to

An Assortment of Ideas

FIVE interviews appear on this page. Each concerns some fault in the business today. W. W. Hodkinson talks about admission prices and percentage; Cecil B. DeMille, B. P. Schulberg and Sol Lesser about star salaries and Max Graf on the million dollar picture and why, according to his mind, the exhibitor frowns upon them.

Salaries Legitimate

Says Sol Lesser in Denouncing Stories That Stars Receive Gigantic Figures—Says This is Untrue (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—In speaking about star salaries, Sol Lesser states that the stories of gigantic figures are entirely untrue, and in this connection says:

"The motion picture business is like any other legitimate business. It must be conducted on a sound basis at all times, and fabulous amounts paid to the stars would not make for soundness, in view of the other money outlays incident to picture making. Picture players are paid exactly what they are worth, and their value is determined by the law of supply and demand. This makes their salaries entirely legitimate.

"The report that Baby Peggy signed a contract with me for Principal Pictures, at a yearly salary exceeding one million dollars, is entirely unfounded. No company could afford to pay such an amount to any one star—if it wanted to remain in business.

"These reports of unheard-of salaries being paid the stars are doing the motion picture business no good, and in fact are destroying the popularity of the players themselves. Stars making their own productions receive great returns in money, but it must be remembered these amounts do not represent salary, but earnings on their own money invested in the pictures."

the enormous salaries paid to stars. Relative to this, Schulberg has this to say:

"I do not doubt for a moment Mr. Brandt's discovery that on one production cost sheet he found salaries constituted two thirds of the expense. But I do feel that the picture he mentions must have been an unusual one, the exception, not the rule.

"In my own experience, salaries average ten per cent of the cost of producing. At this rate, I think almost anyone will admit that to put the names of players who are proven successes into a picture is added insurance against failure, not extravagance by any means. That, at least, is good sound business.

"In my mind, the biggest difficulty seems to be in expenditures made to serve the purposes of a selfish or conceited director or producer who puts thousands of dollars into a picture that will never register when it reaches the screen. He puts it there feeling that he can get more for a picture that costs him $500,000 than one that costs him $100,000.

"How then, could a salary of from $1,000 to $2,000 a week for a period of from three to four weeks, affect the total cost of a production when a set which, costing $50,000 or $60,000, later is cut out of the picture entirely?"

"The Exclusive 10%"

Max Graf's Ideas on Big Pictures—His Arguments On Why Exhibitors Don't Want Them

Max Graf, of Graf. Prod. just in from the coast offers an interesting angle on the million dollar picture which he says caters to an "exclusive ten per cent" of the theaters, and the exhibitor reaction toward them. He says:

"Statistics show that about 90% of the theaters in the United States have less than a thousand seats. Thirty-five per cent of these houses are not open more than four days a week. More than half of the entire number charge less than 25c for their top admission price. The average theater overhead expense, exclusive of film rental, equals about 50% of the entire box office receipts and under the present system of operating, the average theater shows a profit of little more than 12%.

"Is it better to cater to the exclusive 10%? Has an independent producer got a chance if he caters to that 90% and takes his chance in getting in the 10% class between the big productions? Only 29% of the theaters showing pictures have orchestras and less than half of them have pipe organs. It takes a big musical setting to put over the sort of pictures the industry has become so vitally interested in of late.

"This 90%, I believe, are not interested in the big pictures. They have to give two performances a night to make their houses pay at the admission price they are now charging. To give but one performance a night they would have to double their prices. These big pictures would cost them not less than twice or three times what their present productions cost and to meet this it would be necessary for them to charge from four to six times what they are charging at present in order to make what they are making under the present system."

"When I study production cost I can't help but feel that most of the high-salaried players today earn every cent they make. They couldn't demand the salaries they do if they didn't bring that much in at the box-office. And there's no use comparing the screen stars with those of the legitimate stage. The latter plays to one small audience at once, the former can reach many, many thousands at the same time.

"Just as the earning power of the grand opera singer has been multiplied by the introduction of the phonograph record into the music world, so has that of the screen star increased because of the very nature of the medium with which he works.

"The salary question is one phase of picture making that seems to me to have a thorough economic justification."

At the Rialto and Rivoli

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., makes his debut Sunday at the Rivoli in "Stephen Steps Out." The second and concluding installment of "Around the World in the Speejacks" is also on the bill. William S. Hart in "Wild Hickok," is the week's feature at the Rialto.

Salaries Will Dr

Thinks Cecil De Mille—Says In Will Cut Losses from 25% 10%

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Cecil B. De Mille in an interview in the Examiner, "Salaries will be less. Under salaries, alone, are not responsible for the temporary inflation of the industry. But they are an important item, and they must come down. I think the producers are of one mind on that point."

"By salaries, do you mean of the actors or of the technicians, such as writers, cameramen, electricians and other employees?"

"There may be individual instances where other employees will have to take a cut, but it is the actor, especially that the reorganization affect.

"And there are several other instances in which the industry will have to get itself on a sounder basis—a basis as will appeal to the banks and conservative business men. For years it has been regarded as a 'pickings' by merchants and who have had business dealings with producers and directors. That has changed, and the 'pickings' will be quite so easy as of old. The vage of discarded sets, etc., we can reduce our dead losses 25 per cent to between 5 and 10 per cent by a more careful utilization of the material remaining when sets are dismantled."

"Our Hospitality"

Buster Keaton in Metro

Whole....MANY AMUSING
MENTS IN KEATON'S
OND FEATURE AND A
ST RATE COMEDY ILL CLIMAX BUT THEY CUT AT LEAST TWO LS AND IMPROVE THE TURE A LOT.

More or less of a family affair.
er is starred, as usual, in the role heir who goes forth to inan estate but finds only a awaiting him. Keaton retains amous mobile countenance but er, Jr., who makes his first urance, doesn't promise to fol-in his Dad's footsteps. He s willingly, a cute baby sure aw "ah's" and "oh's." Mrs. on (Natalie Talmadge) plays site her husband, and Buster's r, Joseph Keaton, is the ener on the 1830 train.

Type of Story....Comedy that's oc-ally satire on the well known theme so popular with pros-
s. The theme has several ate original comedy sequences urnish many genuinely funny nts, such, for instance, as that g with the 1830 train and the team engine. This is probhe feature's biggest laugh get-
The shooting episode in which emy tries in diverse ways to the son of an old antagonist the way, is lacking in humor rags the picture considerably point. The closing sequence, Buster makes his escape in cular fashion, including his dashed down the rapids to lls and his miraculous escape, pes a first rate comedy thrill drings the feature to a good usion.

Box Office Angle....The star's name ll certainly bring a crowd but, le something is done to bring ughs close together they're to go out disappointed. And ould be unfortunate because is a lot of first rate comedy ss in "Our Hospitality" but scattered. If this fault can medied the picture will get

Exploitation....Tell them this is Keaton's second feature
y. If you played "The Three and it went well, you'll know well how to go about this nd whether or not you can them with it. Perhaps the st talking point, outside of an, is the fact that his wife, e Talmadge, and his year old by Buster, Jr., appear in the pic-also Buster's father, Joseph an. Depend upon the "fan"

"The Leavenworth Case"

Producer: Whitman Bennett Distributor: Vitagraph

As a Whole...A MYSTERY MUR-DER STORY THAT CON-TAINS GOOD SUSPENSE, AND A WELL CONSTRUCTED
PLOT. HOLDS THE ATTEN-TION CLOSELY ALL THE
WAY. HIGHLY MELODRA-MATIC AND SOMEWHAT
STAGEY AT TIMES.

Cast...Generally well chosen for their respective roles, with the possible exception of Paul Doucet who by his exceedingly nervous demeanor almost gives the solution of the plot away early in the film. A bit of comedy relief on the part of the two negro servants would have lessened the tension considerably. Seena Owen, Martha Mansfield Bradley Barker and Wilfred Lytell handle the principal parts in satisfactory manner.

Type of Story....Picturization of the well-known mystery story by Anna Katherine Green. Opens with the discovery of Leavenworth, a wealthy old man, shot mysteriously in the back of the head, behind a locked door. Suspicion fastens on each one in his household in turn, resting finally upon one of his nieces, whose stained handkerchief is found. The mystery deepens as the story develops and succeeds in keeping the audience almost constantly in suspense. A highly melodramatic climax with the murderer accidentally falling off a roof in a final fight with the hero sustains the tension until the finish.

Box Office Angle....This may be considered somewhat too "heavy" for good entertainment by some, but on the other hand it contains a large element of mystery and sufficient suspense to hold the interest continually. The plot is well-constructed and the novel has been closely followed. Production values average. It will undoubtedly find favor with those who like detective stories or mystery melodramas.

Exploitation....The title, the name of the authoress, and the names of Martha Mansfield, Seena Owen and Wilfred Lytell should be your best talking points. The mystery element should be played up and to this end you could give a brief outline of the facts of the case in a throwaway with the caption
"Who Killed Leavenworth?" or
"Who Do You Think is Guilty?"
"See if your solution is correct at the blank theater on—." A lobby display of scenes from the picture should be enough to interest.

Direction....Charles Giblyn; sustained suspense well but allowed the players to become a bit too theatrical at times.

Author....Anna Katherine Green
Scenario by....Eve Stuyvesant
Cameraman....Not credited

"The Barefoot Boy"

Producer: Mission Film Corp.
Distributor: C.B.C.—State Rights.

As a Whole....HAS ALL THE EARMARKS OF A GOOD AU-DIENCE PICTURE AL-THOUGH THE STORY IS THE REGULATION HOKUM WITH THE IMPROBABLE HAPPEN-ING OFTEN THROUGHOUT
THE DEVELOPMENT. WILL SATISFY THE "FAN" CROWD.

Cast....Frankie Lee capable youngster who gains the audience's sympathy in the prologue; John Bowers a satisfactory hero in the main story, with Marjorie Daw a pleasing heroine, although she hasn't a great deal to do, nor is she well photographed. Others are Sylvia Breamer, Raymond Hatton, Tully Marshall, Virginia True Boardman, Otis Harlan, Gertie Messinger.

Type of Story....Old fashioned meller type of a familiar order but nicely produced and with a good amount of audience appeal at that. Deals with the hard knocks dealt to the barefoot boy hero who leaves his home town, only to return a rich man, full of revenge for those who mistreated him in his youth; of course he remembers his mother's words "to do good for evil" and eventually forgets all about his revenge in his love for his childhood sweetheart. The story is well developed and the interest nicely sustained throughout. It probably won't lessen the feature's entertainment value that the theme contains situations generally conceded to represent so-called "movie hokum."
It still goes big with a majority of picture goers and since it does, they might as well have it. They'll be entirely in sympathy with hero and bitter against his enemies.

Box Office Angle....Many exhibitors can use this one to advantage. A big majority of picture patrons still favor the popular old fashioned brand of meller. "The Barefoot Boy" is a splendid one of this type and can be relied upon to give satisfaction, for a "fan" crowd particularly.

Exploitation....Should not be difficult to handle. The title is attractive and easy to advertise attractively. Have a youngster, in tattered clothes, distribute throw-aways containing information about the picture and announcements of the showing. Since the story was suggested by John Greenleaf Whit-tier's poem, you might readily secure the cooperation of local teachers and thereby gather in a good crowd through publicity in the schools. Make a specialty of matinee shows and offer prizes for the best essay on John Greenleaf Whittier. This is a picture that makes first rate family entertainment. Tell the folks to come and bring their children.

As a Whole....A HIGHLY MELO-DRAMATIC TALE OF THE EARLY WEST; EXCELLENT LOCATIONS AND PRETTY GOOD ACTING WITH PLENTY OF EXCITEMENT
BUT FAR TOO MUCH FOOT-AGE.

Cast....Generally pretty good. Harold Miller a likeable hero and Allene Ray a very sweet-looking heroine, who will be liked. Bud Osborne, the villain, a good man for the part. Lillian Gale and Chet Ryan get some comedy-character work over. Others include Florence Lee, Kathryn Appleton, etc.

Type of Story....A sensational western drama taken from the novel of the same name by Emerson Hough.
Of the "murder, battle, and sudden death" variety.

It will also be released as a ten-chapter serial and as such will not run too long. However, in its present form there is considerably too much footage, and your audience may tire of seeing the numerous tragic and exciting events if they have to see so much of them. Nevertheless, it is the sort of picture that will go big with your western-loving crowds. Deals with adventures befalling a convoy of people who go west, and also with the early days of the California gold-rush.

Box Office Angle....After this is cut, you can book it as a feature with the knowledge that your excitement-loving western fans are going to be well satisfied. If you want to wait for the serial version, it should also please in this form. The fact that it is an Emerson Hough story is a big talking point in its favor, and certainly there is an abundance of action for the folks who enjoy this sort of entertainment.

Exploitation....Your folks will know that Emerson Hough is the author of "The Covered Wagon" which has been playing over eight solid months on Broadway, so feature his name with "The Way of Man," and you'll probably have no difficulty in getting them in. If you want to bring out the fact that this is somewhat along the same lines, a prairie schooner could be driven through the streets as a bally-hoo.
Or a group of men dressed as Indians could parade. A trailer of the Indian attack, the fall of the wagon off the cliff or a scene in Fort Mc-Dowell should excite interest. Don't overlook the possibilities of a tie-up with local bookstores who are at present selling the novel. An attractive window could be arranged with a placard announcing the playing date of the film and the name of your theater.

Direction....George B. Seitz; good.
Footage all right for a serial, but much too long for a feature.

Author....Emerson Hough
Scenario by....George B. Seitz
Cameraman....Verne Walker
Photography....Very good
Locale....The West
Footage....Approximately 9,000 feet

"Modern Matrimony"

Selznick Distributing Corp.

As a Whole.... MUCH IN THIS THAT IS GOING TO INTEREST THE AVERAGE PERSON BOTH AS A MATTER OF ENTERTAINMENT AND ACTUAL FACT. HANDLES PROBLEMS OF NEWLY MARRIED COUPLE IN THOROUGHLY AMUSING FASHION. GOOD CLEAN COMEDY NUMBER.

Cast.... Owen Moore and Alice Lake first rate as the honeymooners; both well suited to parts and get them over very satisfactorily. Mayme Kelso a typical would-be society mother and the popular idea of a mother-in-law. Others Mayme Kelso, Frank Campeau, Kate Lester, Victor Potel, Snitz Edwards and Douglas Carter.

Type of Story.... Comedy-drama of domestic life showing the trials and tribulations of newlyweds trying to get started at housekeeping. The girl is a society belle and the fellow, a clerk but she's game to make a go of his meagre income until her mother decides that it's too meagre. Some of the best laughs in the picture come early, when the couple go apartment hunting. A lot of folks are going to appreciate this sequence, especially those who have any idea of the housing situation in the larger cities. There's more truth than poetry in many of the gags. The picture offers sure-fire comedy entertainment that will please everyone that cares to be amused. It's clean and wholesome. First rate family picture.

Box Office Angle.... Especially good. You'll want to show your folks this one because you don't have the chance half often enough to give them clean, amusing comedy of this order.

Exploitation.... There are any number of first rate stunts that will help you put this one over. You shouldn't have any difficulty securing cooperation from local stores. Get a furniture store to put on a display. You furnish the signs to read: "Prospective brides and bridegrooms, Attention! Select your furniture here. Free tickets to 'Modern Matrimony' with every purchase." Lingerie shops, realty concerns, in fact any tie-up that you can arrange, will help to get them interested. Have a couple dressed as bride and groom riding about in an open car, with the customary decorations. Use Owen Moore's and Alice Lake's names in your announcements.

Direction by.... Victor Heerman; did a very nice piece of work on this. There were plenty of opportunities to ring in bedroom farce but he's stuck to clean comedy business and made an Al comedy entertainment.

Author ..... Victor Heerman
 Scenario ..... Sarah Y. Mason
 Cameraman ..... Jules Cronjager
 Photography ..... Very good
 Locale ..... New York
 Length ..... 4,960 feet.

"The Dancer of the Nile"

Film Booking Offices

As a Whole.... EGYPTIAN SETTING MAY SERVE TO HOLD THEIR ATTENTION ALTHOUGH THEME NEVER WARRANTS THE TROUBLE THEY HAVE GONE TO TO MAKE THE PRODUCTION; NOT LIKELY TO BE TAKEN SERIOUSLY. A POOR ENTERTAINMENT ON THE WHOLE.

Cast.... All look very much out of place in mummified make-ups and very unreal although a footnote in one of the titles hastens to advise that the Egyptians actually wore false wigs and beards. Shows forethought at any rate. June Elvidge and Carmel Myers run each other close seconds for scant attire. Malcolm McGregor too good a hero for such business as this. Others Sam DeGrasse, Nellie Anderson, Paul Weigel.

Type of Story.... Deals with the loves and hates of an Egyptian princess. A lot of things in this that are more than likely to be laughed at, especially the sub-titles that make Puritans out of the Egyptians. The theme is not liable to be given serious consideration even by the more genteel audiences. It's very poor picture entertainment generally speaking, and certainly not deserving of the trouble to which director Earle put himself to make it. There are numerous spacious settings and many of them attractive in spite of obvious artificial backgrounds.

Box Office Angle.... Where they have exceedingly liberal imaginations and like romance highly flavored with atmosphere and decorated with chiffoned dancers and pretty sets, "The Dancer of the Nile" may possibly be considered. Its appeal is extremely limited and if your folks are at all critical, they are not apt to accept this offering in a pleasant spirit. The production will hardly suffice to put it over.

Exploitation.... Exhibitors catering to family trade, or people of conservative and refined tastes, will hardly do well to risk their wrath by showing them this one. The artistic angle is not sufficiently worth while to get it by on that score. You might play safe by seeing the picture for yourself, if you have any doubts.

The recent popularity of "King Tut" might be capitalized by telling them he plays an important part in "The Dancer of the Nile". A man dressed to represent the ancient ruler might attract considerable attention going about advertising the showing by distributing throw-aways.

Direction by.... Wasted far too much time, money and effort on unworthy material.

Author ..... Blanche Taylor Earle
 Scenario ..... Wm. P. S. Earle
 Cameraman ..... Jules Cronjager
 Photography ..... Good
 Locale ..... Egypt
 Length ..... 5,787 feet.

.. "The Dare-Devil"—Ben Turpin—..
 Pathe

Laughable Burlesque

Type of production.... 2 reel comedy

This is a laughable burlesque on the hard life of a movie double—the double of course, played by the cross-eyed funny man. Harry Gribbon plays the over-worked director who would willingly risk his life and those of his staff for the sake of a reel of film. Madeline Hurlock and Irene Lentz are also in the cast. The action deals with the stunts that Turpin has to perform when doubling for the leading man, and the laughs will undoubtedly be forthcoming from any audience.

"The Soilers"—Hal Roach—Pathe
Funny Burlesque

Type of production.... 2 reel comedy

This is a really amusing burlesque on Rex Beach's "The Spoilers," and will be appreciated to a greater extent where that feature has been seen. The famous fight is there and many of the other details that will be remembered. Where they haven't seen the original they won't be inclined to appreciate the burlesque but the action itself is amusing. Stan Laurel is the star and as "Canister" certainly tears up James Finlayson as "Smacknamara" with "his two bare hands." If you haven't played the feature yet and can get this comedy to run after it, your folks will enjoy it doubly.

Cast Puts It Over

Type of production.... 2 reel c

Good direction and cast help great extent in putting this on. The idea is not a new one and consists of the amusing and somewhat embarrassing situations arising a young man masquerades as in an effort to escape the police goes to his best friend for shelter the friend is forced by circumstances to tell his family that he has been married—to the masquerade boy. Bobby Vernon is excellent the role.

VALUES

By DANNY

The chief difficulty of production once they have turned out something that the world says "good." Then their ideas soar. They think up in the millions. You need an anchor to keep your feet on the ground. Several striking instances lately. "The White Sister" notably. It has turned down an offer from England that staggers. Incredible that it was not accepted. Yet Duell feels he will get more. First National places exhibition value of about two million on "The Eternal City." Why? Chaplin $1,500,000 (or thereabouts) on "A Woman of the Year." They haven't figured out the value of "The Ten Commandments" yet over at Famous. They are looking for a larger Burroughs.

Much of the trouble of the whole scheme of things lies right here. The minute they find a good picture—a real picture—values are just another aeroplane, looking for an altitude record. The exhibitor buys the picture—but makes no money—sours on the distributor and the old eternal row continues. Won't somebody produce a picture at a price that will allow everybody to make money?

It seems Dr. Daniel Carson Gooden has established a record. He has made four productions for Equity. He has used four different directors. Yet has managed to keep each within $250 of the allotted schedule. Equity folks say this is a record. It's more than the old man "blue prints" his production. That's the secret.

There are a lot of producers who "blue print." Most of them are found outside the old line companies. They need every nickel—as a rule. The Halperin boys are living it now. On their Russian story. And there are others. If the old line companies could do this—or what a difference in it would result

New Copyright Law

To Be Introduced in Congress This Winter—Would Mean Protection for Works of Importance
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—It is expected that one of the early bills to be introduced in Congress will be a measure allowing this country to become a party to the International Copyright Union.

Such a statute is important and is looked for by authors who naturally seek to protect their works in foreign countries. In Canada, a new copyright law becomes effective on Jan. 1 which would leave Americans without any protection there.

M. P. Picture Day Today

Under the guidance of the M. P. T. O., National M. P. Day will be observed today. Exhibitors who have signified their intention of participating are pledged to turn over twenty-five per cent of their receipts to the national treasury, and from this fund, the expense coincident with the fight for the admission tax repeal will be borne. On Saturday, a parade along Broadway served to bring the event to the attention of the public.

Blames Inefficiency

For Industry's Troubles—Marcus Loew in Doubt About Types of Pictures for Next Year

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cleveland — On the occasion of Marcus Loew's visit here to see how "Scaramouche" was going over, he was interviewed by the Plain Dealer. Loew charged that "inefficiency, lack of brains, jealousy, every director trying to outspend the other fellow, every player trying to get a higher salary than his friends and too many producers either willing to let costs mount or unable to stop them" were responsible for the troubles in the business today.

"The greatest menace to the industry," said Loew, "is inefficiency. We consider ourselves fortunate if we are 50 per cent efficient. And that means waste, terrible waste. We are young, that is true. Nearly every young and big business finds itself in just the same position we are in now. Not many years ago you will remember that the automobile business suffered just as we are suffering now.

"I don't mean to say that all directors are inefficient or that all are trying to outspend each other, or that all players are too grasping, or that producers are outbidding each other in production costs. Too many of them are. That's the trouble.

"But don't worry. There'll still be pictures. I know that Famous Players has closed down until the first of the year, but that doesn't mean much. They have plenty of pictures to keep them going until their new

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Here then is the Roman aqueduct and the ancient roadway known as the Appian Way. This aqueduct was destroyed before the year 300 A. D. and just beside the remains, there stands an ancient, but romantic cottage. All vine covered and sequestered amongst aged cypress trees. This was chosen for a series of scenes in George Fitzmaurice's production of "The Eternal City." In each scene the aqueduct stands out a mighty reminder of the greatness of Old Rome. A modern romance in a setting of antiquity. Produced by Samuel Goldwyn, (Not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures.)—Adv't.

New Copyright Law

The new bill, prepared by Register of Copyrights Solberg, puts the United States for the first time into the Berne Convention or International Copyright Union, under which all works having copyright in the United States will have instantaneous copyright in England, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and all other civilized countries of the world that are already members of the convention.

It is the purpose of the bill to preserve the status quo of copyright otherwise and leave the amendments to a general revision of the copyright code, which is generally agreed by all classes involved, should be taken up immediately after this country's entrance into the International Copyright Union.

Up to the present time the United States has been debarred from entering the union by the so-called manufacturers' clause refusing authority for copyright of any work not printed in type set or plates made in this country and also bound in this country.

A number of meetings have been held by attorneys of those companies belonging to the Hays organization on the question of copyright. They are understood to favor the entrance of the United States into the Berne Convention.

often enough to make their service a complete one. They estimate the cost of the salesman visiting the small town at $20 a day and point out that this expense must be added to the price which the exhibitor pays for his pictures. The estimate that a saving of twenty-five per cent can be effected by booking through the mail. The preliminary campaign is in the nature of a test only.

"Fun from the Press" is distributed through Hodkinson where inquiry brought forth the fact that the plan is being tried with the regular feature output of the organization. Four territories have been selected for the experiment and if it is found feasible, the idea will be extended to other parts of the country.

Sales managers who were questioned about the plan agreed that it was not a new one and that most of the national distributors had tried it before. One stated that if handled properly it could be made successful, while another whose organization probably handles the greatest number of bulk bookings in the business declared it had been tried and found decidedly wanting.

Cutting Salaries

Players, Next Step in Industry's Revolution, According to Hollywood Dispatch

The Associated Press in a Hollywood dispatch describes the slashing players' salaries as the "second step in the revolution of the industry commenced under the advisory direction of Will H. Hays."

The dispatch calls the "moral made, the clean-up of the screen producing more wholesome plays" was started two years ago the chapter, and says the new movement is an "economic mopping up." In this connection, the A. P. carries a list of salaries as they stand today as compared with two years ago:

What's The Answer?

A Square Table Discussion Between an Exhibitor, a Distributor and a Producer Fails to Find It

Frank Newman who operates houses in Kansas City; Fred Cubberley, who knows the territory around Minnesota and the Dakota's as well as any man alive, and Abe Warner of Warner Brothers made a trio around a square table at the Astor yesterday, and tried to figure out the answer.

"I don't know," said Newman, "we have had a lot of the big pictures in Kansas City, and for some reason the people don't seem crazy to break in to see them. This applies to practically all that have been shown there."

U. S. Supreme Court Reverses Lower Courts on Binderup Case

Important Decision Supports Exhibitor's Claim That He Was Forced Out of Business by Combined Conspiracy of Omaha Distributors—Sought $750,000 Damages

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—The U. S. Supreme Court yesterday reversed decisions of the lower courts in the case brought against Pathe Exchange, Inc., by Charles G. Binderup, charging that he had been forced out of business as an exhibitor in Nebraska as a result of a conspiracy among producers and distributors who refused to furnish him with product. Decisions against Binderup had been handed down by the Federal Court for the District of Nebraska and by the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals which held that there was no conspiracy. These courts upheld Pathe's claim that, inasmuch as the films were shipped from New York to their agent in Nebraska before being placed in distribution, they were not in interstate commerce.

The Supreme Court held, however, that even though the films in question had not passed out of possession by the company until after their delivery in Nebraska, they were, nevertheless, in interstate commerce when they crossed the New York State line.

Counsel for Binderup filed a petition for a writ of certiorari for the Supreme Court to review the case in October. The action sought to secure damages to the extent of $750,000.

The Supreme Court once denied the petition of Binderup to review his case which has been hanging fire for several years. A writ of error was then filed by Binderup's counsel and in that way, the original denial of the Court was lifted.

these big costume pictures broke in with 'Cameo Kirby' and cleaned up. I think that's the answer. We're getting too far away from what the public-that-like-pictures want, and have been trying to give them pictures that only highbrows want. Pictures are amusement for the masses. Don't fool yourself on that. And if we could get our business down to a point where we could go back to a 25 cent admission it would be the candy."

"You're right," said Newman, "dead right. When we charged a dime at the Royal we made more money than ever since. But as competition developed we had to have the usual things, music, acts, presentation, and you can't give this sort of entertainment and make money, even with a 55 cent admission."

"Give the people who like pictures the kind of pictures we know they like," said Cubberley. "That's the answer. Those pictures need not cost a half a million, or even half of that."

"True," said Abe Warner, "we've got a dog picture 'Where the North Begins,' that is proving that. Yet we have gone ahead and made pictures that cost close to half a million because we think the public want these better and finer pictures."

"Well," said Newman dolefully as he arose and proceeded to break up the party, "they don't seem to be breaking our doors down to see those better and finer pictures."

"You're right," said Cubberley.

Decision Reversed

Omaha several years ago, to recover three-fold damages in the sum of $750,000 for injuries due to an alleged illegal combination and conspiracy and combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

It was claimed that the respondents, with the motive of destroying the petitioner's business, and securing control of the industry, refused to lease, sell or deliver to the petitioner any films upon any terms or conditions whatsoever at any time. The petitioner alleged that he was unable to secure films from any other source and that, by the acts of the defendants, his business of conducting theaters was totally destroyed.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that the business involved in the suit did not constitute interstate commerce.

In the Circuit Court two judges were of the opinion that the transactions described did not involve interstate commerce and upon that ground the judgment in favor of the defendants was affirmed. One of the judges in the Circuit Court of Appeals dissented upon the ground that the transactions described did involve interstate commerce.

William M. Seabury who has been actively connected with the case declared yesterday that while he had no direct word from Washington relative to the decision, it was his opinion that, despite the Supreme Court's reversal, there would be a retrial of the case in Omaha.

Madden Would Maintain Tax

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Representative Martin B. Madden, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, while in favor of Secretary Mellon's tax reduction plan would maintain the amusement tax. In this connection, he says:

"The theater tax I call a luxury tax, which I think we ought to maintain whether a bonus is passed or not. In the event of the enactment of bonus legislation the maintenance of this tax would yield $70,000,000 a year, and if this did not cover bonus demands additional luxury taxes could be levied which would apply to those who contributed least to the war and made the most out of it."

Officials at Davies Premiere

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington — Tom Moore gave "Little Old New York" an auspicious opening at the Rialto last night with the entire mezzanine reserved for members of Congress and various other officials. The audience was one of the most representative that has ever attended a Washington picture theater.

Jacoby Here From Berlin

George Jacoby, head of the Ortlid Film Co., of Berlin is in New York in connection with a contract between his company and Luxor Pictures for cooperative production with American stars and directors. He and Sig Schlager will probably go to the coast in December.

The figures are correct with the exception of two known salaries. Lewis Stone's salary is in the neighborhood of $2,500 and not $1,000 as stated, while that of Wallace Beery is about weekly and not $1,500.

"Producers frankly admit," continuing in a dispatch, "that they have no quarrel with the non-contract players over salaries; the increases were due to uneconomical production. Directors bid against each other and the actors merely were the beneficiaries."

"In the majority of cases, one director has increased salaries earnings have wisely used."

"There are fewer than one dozen whom producers list as leaders, and they are considered idols of the public. Even though the total is decreasing, producers' development tends toward featuring itself."

It is understood the Los Angeles correspondent of the Associated Press has been commissioned to write a series of articles covering the present situation.

QUESTION

By DANNY

Does the public want the "bigger and better" pictures? No. Not a bit. Figure it out for yourself. You read—could have—what Frank and Fred Cubberley in yesterday's issue. How "big" pictures weren't getting over as they should. In other words the public wasn't now take a glimpse at from one of the leaders. attended the French Lick tag. Last week. And writes:

None of us seem to realize it is simply an economic condition. People have less money to spend and there is a lull in the picture business. They do not seem to appreciate the appeal at the present time. People are picking their entertainment.

It would have been a good idea if the producers could have listened to what the exhibitors had to say. For example, the long programs. The picture houses complain that the pictures are so long they can only get one turn over at a time and if they fill their theaters, it is not enough to pay expenses. If we had five and six reel pictures we could fill theaters twice an evening for at least one and a half and they would be profit in it."

Why not, then, for a change, quit "bigger and better" picture? Get back to what the public moving picture public—wants? The high brow critics. Not the trade. But the great masses of American people—Mary, who makes her own dishes. And she sinks. And puts on her hat and goes to John. "Come on; you, kids, and we'll see a picture." The masses who made pictures possible. The masses whose dimes made the dollar extravaganzas possible. The masses who made possible the riot of tremendous, costly, loss-of-profit pictures.

Binderup Action Now Comes to Trial
—May Come Up in the Spring—
Film Clubs Not Hit

The Supreme Court decision covering the Binderup case against Pathe and the members of the Omaha Film Board of Trade created a lively topic of interest in the business yesterday. It was pointed out by an attorney who has been active in the case on behalf of the distributors involved that the original action was never tried in Omaha before the Federal Court there and that, in his opinion, the Supreme Court's decision means that the case must come to trial on its merits in Omaha where the suit was first filed.

This attorney declared that at the time of the first action, the presiding judge stated that, granting all of the allegations made by Binderup were true, he still failed to see how there was a cause for action in the suit. It was on that ground, it is alleged, that the action was dismissed only to be affirmed later by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The next step in the matter rests with Binderup, according to this attorney.

Allen Holubar Dead

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Allen Holubar died yesterday morning as a result of a recent operation. He was taken ill shortly after starting work on "Human Mills," for Metro. The picture has not been completed. He is survived by his widow, professionally known as Dorothy Phillips.

Allen Holubar was born in 1889. He played in stock for some time and in 1914 joined Universal for whom he made a number of pictures. He later made several pictures for First National and was then engaged by Metro to direct a series of four. He was at work on the first when taken ill. Included in his pictures are "The Heart of Humanity," "The Right To Happiness," "Once to Every Woman" and "Man-Woman-Marriage."

Plan Two More in Chicago

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Jones, Linick and Schafer will build two new theaters, one in the loop to seat about 5,000 and a 4,000 seat house in the suburbs. The firm points to this as sufficient proof of the fact that they do not intend dissolving. The Orpheum, Rialto and Lyric are operated by J. L. and S., their other theaters being under lease to outside interests.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

To give you an idea of the magnificence of the picture that you saw yesterday, another view is here shown of the bridge and the castle of St. Angelo.

Many statues adorning the bridge are broken; so damaged by armies which used the broken pieces to throw at the enemy.

You will actually see this masterpiece of beauty in George Fitzmaurice's production—"The Eternal City" which Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures), will present through First National.—Advt.

torney who added that, although on the face of it the Supreme Court decision presumably was a victory for Binderup, it really meant that the highest court in the land had decided that the Omaha court was wrong in dismissing the motion as it had.

The litigation has been costly. It was stated yesterday that the distributors' defense committee, so called, had retained two young attorneys at one point in the litigation to make a tour of South-central Nebraska gathering testimony to be used in the event that the action came to trial.

One query around town yesterday was the effect of the decision on the F.I.L.M. Clubs as they now operate under the uniform contract, the exhibitor is pledged to abide by whatever decisions the joint arbitration board may make. In the event, that the exhibitor does not do so, there are certain things that the exchange-men can do to punish him. Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft, a firm of prominent attorneys worked for some time on the clauses of the uniform contract and were paid a neat retainer to render their interpretation of it. They decided that there was nothing in it that would violate the law in any manner and it was only after their opinion had been made that the uniform contract and the F.I.L.M. Clubs were made operative.

Charles B. Hoy stated yesterday that the Omaha Film Board of Trade never operated under the Hoy Reporting Service plan.

Chicago Educator Finds—Says Percentage of Suitable Pictures "Approaches Zero"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Mrs. Charles E. Merriam, chairman of the Better Films Committee of the National Congress of Parents and Parent Teacher Association, in a statement published in the National Screen, says the number of films suitable for family shows is so low that it approaches zero. She maintains:

"I wish to call attention to the few films which can be endorsed for the family. When you bear in mind that, at the start of our review three years ago, we could endorse one-half of the output, and that in the past year we could endorse one-third of the output, and that the per cent is so low, that it reaches zero—we must surely conclude that there is a great problem confronting us, and if you will."

It appears an excerpt from a statement made by Will H. Hays about a year and a half ago, in which he above all, perhaps, is our duty to the youth. * * * We accept the challenge in the righteous demand of the American mother, that the entertainment and amusement of that generation be worthy of its value as the

San Francisco—Articles of incorporation for a $1,500,000 company to include virtually all of the theaters in Fresno and a number in Oakland and Sacramento, have been filed, according to Gavin McNab, chief counsel for the enterprise.

The new corporation will go under the three names of Fresno Theaters, Inc., Oakland Theaters, Inc., and Sacramento Liberty Theaters, Inc., McNab said. The names of the incorporators were not made public. The head office of the company will be in San Francisco. It will operate both picture and vaudeville theaters.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Sacramento—Incorporation of the Liberty Theaters Co. has been filed with Secretary of State, the papers indicating the merger of three theaters, the Liberty of Sacramento and one each in Oakland and Fresno. The combined capital is $1,024,000. The directors are A. D. Duncan, E. B. Smith, and F. M. Moore of San Francisco, and E. L. Brune of Berkeley.

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Fresno—Fresno is to have a new theater as a result of the organization of Fresno Theaters, Inc. Plans for the building were announced here today by Frank Purkett, manager of the Kinema and president of the new company.

He denied statements made in San Francisco that all theaters of Fresno are to be acquired by the corporation. Only the Kinema, among the present playhouses, is affected, he said. Other companies affiliated with that headed by Purkett, have been organized in Oakland and Sacramento, with a total capitalization of more than $1,000,000.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Here is a panorama of the Ancient Roman Forum where in olden days gathered the clans, and where every moot question in "The Eternal City" was discussed.

There can be seen still standing the remains of monuments of all periods which in themselves tell the story of "The city without beginning or ending."

This scene is a background for several situations in George Fitzmaurice's production—"The Eternal City," produced by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures), through the First National.—Advt.

most potent factor in the court case.

"Please keep this quotation," she continued "in mind and scan over the movie advertisements with me today, the new films are just being released: Elinor Glyn's Days and Three Weeks, The Common Griffith's The White Rose, The Merry Round, (advertised as a story of the viciousness of Vienna before the war), Affairs of Lady Hamilton (which shows illicit love affair between Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson), Flaming Youth, West of the Water Tower.

"The community does not allow like The Common Law (which teaches marriage is old-fashioned), in the library—but the community does allow producer to take this book and film our boys and girls to see, and it is so beautiful, that any silly girl will think that it is more beautiful than any she ever saw. Whose fault is it that she emulates this? Why, the community of course, and that means you and me.

"Take the case of Flaming Youth West of the Water Tower—said to be of the rankest books published in 10 years. These films are just released. producers have made innocent scenarios these books. But what happens to the and girls who see them? Statistics in libraries and book stores show that ever a book is filmed, the sale of that jumps by leaps and bounds. So these and girls will be sent back to read the books.

"Shall we stand idly by and permit destruction of the morale of our youth continue? The producers have shown insincerity of cleaning up their own dust.

Newspaper Opinions

"Wild Bill Hickok"—F. P.-L.
Rialto

AMERICAN—This time the stellar William S. Hart undertook to take his own measure, and did it gently but determinedly in the picture called "Wild Will Hickok." * * * It was a beautiful fit. It neither sagged nor bagged.

DAILY NEWS — The film concludes abruptly and unhappily for everybody. But, as we said before, Bill's back big, minus nothing of yesteryear, plus a little something and if you like feuds and fights with a tiny taste of sentiment and a historical background, we're not going to say you won't be glad Bill's back.

EVENING JOURNAL—William S. Hart celebrates his return to the screen after a long absence by burning up enough gunpowder to light a trail from the northeast corner of Broadway and Twenty-third Street to the centre of the intersection of Western Avenue and Hollywood Boulevard, and half-way back.

EVENING WORLD—If you were numbered among the legion of Hart admirers before he "retired," then you'll like him in "Wild Bill Hickok." We were and we did.

MAIL—It's grand old stuff this "Wild Bill Hickok," * * * and is done in the best style of the palmy days of the movies when men of the West did their talking with their guns. And how those guns do speak. There's a bullet in every foot. * * * It is chock full of hokum and we are glad to report that those who saw the film yesterday did not take it seriously, but laughed during the most tragic moments. The picture really is a good comedy, although the producers never meant it as such.

MORNING TELEGRAPH — "Wild Bill Hickok" is a strong film full of action and fire. The character sketches are definite and real, and the picture is calculated to give all those who like their drama swift a genuine thrill, and those stirring days in the West never fail to have their appeal.

POST—But it is full of action and heroics.

SUN—Hart has lost nothing of the flexibility of his trigger fingers during his recent retirement from the screen.

There remains always Hart, and his serious face and his educated guns. Than which there are none more so—if you like that sort of thing. And there is, on the whole, very little doubt that you do.

TELEGRAM—It is an absorbing story that he tells, and he keeps the movie fans on the go from the start to the finish of this best Bill Hart film play.

TIMES—To us he is just about the same as he was, except that his acting, compared to modern screen celebrities, appears to belong to an old, old school. * * * It seems to us to be a film of the popular vintage of 1913, in spite of the fact that it was made in 1923 after Mr. Hart had taken a holiday of only two years from the screen. Time hangs heavily on one's hands while viewing this tame photoplay.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It's an appropriate vehicle for Hart's re-entrance into prominence, not forgetting his "paint" pony, Fritz, and his support is capable throughout.

TRIBUNE—Those who love Bill Hart will love the gun play, but will cry out for a happy ending.

WORLD—As a "Western," "Wild Bill Hickok" is thoroughly acceptable, although it does seem that these obvious melodramas of the regulation Hart type are making their last struggle for existence.

At the Rialto and Rivoli
"The Light That Failed," will be the feature at the Rialto next week. The Rivoli will house "To the Ladies."

Celebrates 500th Performance

Yesterday marked the 500th performance of "The Covered Wagon" at the Criterion. The picture opened in March, and is expected to play until the Summer.

Fitzmaurice to Talk

George Fitzmaurice has returned from a vacation trip to Havana and will address the A. M. P. A. today on production in Italy. Samuel Goldwyn will also be a guest of the organization and Harry Reichenbach, the barker.

Feinman Recovering

Al Feinman is recovering from a rather serious infection of the leg contracted while he was in England for the Warners'. The poison spread through his system and caused a temporary blindness. He is now recovering.

Over "Nervous Wreck" Final Filed—Seeking $150,000 in Damages

Law suit threatened by Owen against Harold Lloyd charging wronging of "The Nervous Wreck," owned by Owen Moore from a play by E. J. Rath, was filed Friday in Supreme Court. The papers charge "Why Worry," the latest Lloyd stage play and seek $150,000 damages.

Plaintiffs are Harold Lloyd, Harold Lloyd Corp., Pathe Exchange Inc. and Hal Roach. The defendants include Owen Davis, Wallinger and Lewis and Gordon, authors of the play. The plaintiffs value the film rights in "Nervous Wreck" at $250,000 and allege they have been damaged to the extent of $150,000. John C. Lloyd's Eastern representative could not be reached on Friday afternoon.

Cohen Issues Call

Open Meeting Scheduled for Washington on the 30th to Discuss Tax Situation

Sydney S. Cohen has issued a national call for as many exhibitors as possible to attend a meeting at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, next Friday at which the tax situation will be discussed.

Cohen explained on Friday that the meeting will be open to all those who may care to attend. He hopes to have those attending agree on one course of action so that when Congress meets shortly, the exhibitor interests can be presented in a united manner.

The Washington meeting was decided upon at the recent directors' confab in Rochester.

Sam Berman Back from Up-State Trip Reports Congressmen Are Receptive—Business Spotty

Sam I. Berman executive secretary of the M. P. T. O. of New York returned from a 10 day trip on Friday during which time he worked almost entirely on the tax repeal situation. He declares that the sentiment is favorable for the lifting of the nuisance taxes.

Berman found business spotty. In some cities where towns are over-seated, the competition for films among exhibitors has caused prices to go up while admissions are of necessity kept at a low level. This is telling at the box-office.

New York

"Stephen Steps Out, Jr."—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—The young man got away with it all very well indeed. I liked that way of ending the film very much indeed. In fact, I hope that Doug will avoid growing up as long as he possibly can—if only to eschew that tiresome finish.

DAILY NEWS—Young Doug is going to be a heartbreaker later on, when he allows girls into his pictures.

"Stephen Steps Out" is a good enough bit of material—but the Richard Harding Davis-ness of it sort of loses its effect in the movies.

EVENING JOURNAL—His first starring picture is "Stephen Steps Out," an excellent choice on the part of Paramount.

EVENING WORLD—If Papa Doug isn't mighty careful he's soon be referred to as a block off the young chip, so far did Doug Jr. worm his way into the hearts of the customers at the Rivoli yesterday.

But "Stephen Steps Out," young Doug's first film venture, is a right smart fillum; one designed to please and one that did please. At least it pleased us, and that's all we can answer for.

HERALD—The impression that he made on the Rivoli audience yesterday was a most favorable one. Everybody seemed to like him, and you can scarcely blame everybody for that. "Stephen Steps Out," in itself isn't very much of a story. It has been put together awkwardly, and there are many moments when the tenuous thread of its narrative is snapped. It isn't particularly logical and it isn't unduly exciting—but it is pleasant all the way. There is a spontaneity to it that is lacking in many more coherent pictures.

MAIL—A rattling good comedy. The boy is particularly fortunate in having such an excellent vehicle for his debut on the screen. The picture swings along in a most refreshing way. The story is told in a simple manner and retains much of the mock heroic of Davis.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Young Fairbanks proves to be a personable youth, unaffected and earnest, with a quick, responsive smile, which strongly resembles his father. There is nothing forced or constrained about the boy's work. In his first work for the screen he is altogether delightful. Famous Players has given him a fine production and an excellent cast and pleasing material.

POST—But, for a first attempt, it is a good one and a promising one. It is to be hoped in the second production of this fourteen-year-old youngster that there will be no imitation of his father's actions; the boy is well able to stand on his own winning personality.

SUN—And right away the point should be made clear that young Fairbanks has a most winning personality and looks more whole souled than a squad of leading ladies.

But it would seem he will make his chief appeal in future not through imitation of his father's skyrocket, jumping-jack methods, but through straight acting. The story is a mildly enjoyable adaptation of "The Grand Cross of the Crescent," which gets its yarn a bit entangled through too long a winding up at the start. Once it gets under way, however, it proceeds at a fairly lively clip.

TELEGRAM—It is a typical Doug Fairbanks role brought down to the level of adolescence.

TIMES—"Stephen Steps Out" is a jolly light comedy, slumping unfortunately in a few sequences to pathos. Young Fairbanks is supported by a good cast. The sequences in Turkey are amusing, as are also those in the college before the boy flunks in his studies. The poor part of the story is where the old Professor and his wife are seen going over their dwindling bank balance. If this had not been overdone, the comedy would have been quite good throughout.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., made his metropolitan debut as a picture star yesterday at the Rivoli, and it wasn't particularly auspicious.

The vehicle is an old school type of story written along the lines of numerous others turned out by Mr. Davis. It is trite and commonplace, lacks novelty and moves along at the pace of a Chatauqua meeting.

TRIBUNE—It proved to be far more entertaining than we had fancied a picture could be written around the pranks of a schoolboy here and in Turkey.

WORLD—It is one of the very truest and best cinema comedies of the year, and it proves that the boy is a natural actor of fine pantomimic ability. It is clean. It is sane. It is altogether good.

Out-of-Town

"Big Dan"—Fox Hippodrome, Baltimore

NEWS—Big, clean but exacting, the lovable Dan O'Hara is well acted by Charles ("Buck") Jones, who holds our sympathy and admiration, but at times approaches the dime-novel hero.

"Cameo Kirby"—Fox Hippodrome, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—A melodrama of the old school, which holds the interest throughout because it is filled with action, romance and that "never-know-what-he's-going-to-do-next" feeling. The story is cleverly complicated, but never confusing, and the film has been given a careful, accurate and colorful production. A well dressed, high class melodrama of the old school, is "Cameo Kirby."

Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—Every once in a while a new picture is produced that has a charm which makes the spectator want to see it a second time. Such a picture is the Fox screen version of "Cameo Kirby," at the Washington theater.

This production is excellent and a real contribution to the motion picture art.

NEWS—It is very good movie entertainment even though William Fox has desecrated his artistic soul by helping the piece to a liberal amount of hokum. John Gilbert is the star of "Cameo Kirby," and he is mentioned without fear of contradiction that John is becoming quite an actor.

TIMES—When you have looked and peered at picture films with their expensive trimmings, fine subtitles and the like, it's a relief and a pleasure to stroll in on one that is the "goods."

"His Children's Children"—F. P.-L. Howard, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—It has all the requisites of a perfect film—drama, humor, pathos, and a great cast, featuring in the principal roles.

GEORGIAN—Is splendidly adapted to the screen. Bebe Daniels heads the all-star cast and the petite brunette was never better fitted in her life. "His Children's Children" will be a popular picture.

McVicker's, Chicago

AMERICAN—"His Children's Children" gives the impression of imparting its normal without being preachy. It exposes clearly, but with intelligent reserve, the frivolities of the members of a wealthy family. Readers of the novel, particularly, it would seem, will like the picture. They will marvel at the perfect casting.

HERALD-EXAMINER—makes an excellent picture, just as vivid as the written word and, at times, somewhat more plausible.

Certainly it was rich material for the movie camera.

JOURNAL—It is one of those mad whirling photoplays. The players do really noble work. Miss Daniels goes on improving with every part, and Dorothy Mackaill will bear watching.

TRIBUNE—"His Children's Children," furnishes another proof that, with the proper handling, a novel can be brought successfully to the screen. An excellent cast, under the able direction of Mr. Wood, brings out all of the high lights of the original story.

"Daytime Wives"—F. B. O. Palace, Buffalo

Times—is in some measure a problem picture and it treats of the relationship between men and their feminine employes. It handles a delicate question in a daring, clean manner.

Victoria, Philadelphia

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—"Daytime Wives," is unusual in that it minimizes the emotional display which might so easily be injected into a production of this kind. There is real drama in this picture and it is more convincing than the average.

RECORD—Save in the suggestion of its title it is not a new idea and changes innumerable have been rung upon it in the "movie" world.

"Desire"—Metro

Delmonte, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—It is a society drama of the highest type and embodies engaging entertaining qualities along with tense dramatic action.

POST-DISPATCH—The picture "Desire," is a sentimental and not too probable story. There are some fine settings, notably the open-air wedding scene.

TIMES—Another photoplay that capitalizes on the tried and true elements of the successful photoplay, with the old situations and the happy ending, is "Desire."

"Drifting"—Universal

Rialto, Atlanta

GEORGIAN—All combine to lend charm to the scenes of enchanted magic and unflagging interest of this photoplay.

"The Eternal Three"—Gold. Cosmopol, Detroit

NEWS—Marshall Neilan has not struck upon a new idea in bringing "The Eternal Three" to the screen but he has taken the familiar triangle formula, given it several distinctive touches and placed the leading roles in the hands of a cast that hardly could have been improved.

Karlton, Philadelphia

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—A drama which is very serious most of the way then, reacts humorously on the last lap, is "The Eternal Three."

NORTH AMERICAN—Neilan certainly never will add any jewels to his directorial crown if his productions are going to be like this. As a matter of fact this picture is hardly worthy of a beginner in the director business.

Its principal fault lies in the face that it is woefully miscast.

RECORD—The photodrama bears the marks of the Neilan craftsmanship and is handsomely set.

"The Fair Cheat"—F. B. O.

Regent, Philadelphia

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—"The Fair Cheat," is a slender story made interesting by clever balancing of incident and comedy.

"The Fighting Blade"—1st Nat'l

Stanley, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—provides an excellent setting for Barthelmess' talents in costume. As for Barthelmess himself he is every bit as interesting and charming as he has been heretofore. There is a certain romantic and debonair quality about him in this, which is new, but which suits him very well.

PUBLIC LEDGER (EVENING)—A romance with Richard Barthelmess as the handsome hero might be set in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth or any other century it would be worth seeing.

John Robertson directed the picture, and probably he is to blame for the fact that one wonders for about fifteen minutes what the picture is all about. Once Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Mackaill appear, one doesn't care.

RECORD—Barthelmess has a fine role in "The Fighting Blade," interpreting in his usual smooth and excellent manner a swash-buckling youth of the days of Cromwell. A fine array of actors in a production full of life and power.

"Flaming Youth"—1st Nat'l Grand Central, West End Lyric Capitol, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—"Flaming Youth" in spite of its sensational theme, is one of the genuinely best pictures ever made. In its very frankness lies its strength, has strength, and this reviewer, for believes it has. "Flaming Youth" is a picture to be avoided, but one to be providing one remembers its moral rather than its unpleasant truths.

POST-DISPATCH—The story is a slight. The settings are sumptuous, the "sensational" features are mostly in advance notices.

STAR—"Flaming Youth," can only be called hot stuff despite its desp effort to be thrillingly wicked.

TIMES—No, it is not sensational. There are a few scenes, supposedly portraying mad revels of society. There is much of a moral, and the picture does need that excuse. There is good plot, and two good love stories in a film—enough to make it interesting and entertaining.

"The Girl Who Came Back" Preferred

Park-Mall, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—The producers tried to make a combination of a crook, a mystery story and a story with a "society atmosphere"—and it all comes off the hopper in a hopeless, jangled jodge.

There is a dreary succession of scenes, and much weeping and wringing hands in this film.

PRESS—Miriam Cooper is starred. Cooper possesses considerable ability, but is quite unable to overcome the ban of the plot in this movie puts upon her.

"The Gold Diggers"—Warner Capitol, Cincinnati

TIMES-STAR—A highly amusing film. Persons who saw the original Hepwood play on the stage are liable to be a trifle disappointed. The picture is as funny as the play.

"The Green Goddess"—Gold.-Cosmop.
The Chicago, Chicago

HERALD-EXAMINER—It is the most successful picture that I have ever seen. "The Green Goddess" is, you know, one of the few in recent years that have been justified; made possible by the singular art, personality and production of the star.

JOURNAL—It is one of the best pictures of the year. The star herself sees to it that she is more in position before the camera is so skilled with artistry as is his appearance behind the footlights.

Capitol, Detroit

FREE PRESS—It is an offering that will thrill at times and grip from first to last, will mystify frequently and hold attention to the last fadeout. It is filled with weirdness that characterizes the Orient, the scenes being laid in India.

NEWS—A faithful and colorful cinema presentation of the veteran William Archer's exciting and thrilling stage melodrama and as in the spoken version of the play, it is distinguished chiefly by the expert acting of George Arliss.

TIMES—"The Green Goddess" in addition to being a mighty fine picture brings back to the screen Alice Joyce. We have seen few pictures that have been given the careful production this has.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame"— Universal
Cox, Cincinnati

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE—In the past two years the screen has not offered as fine an example of its art as we find in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." To us it stands as one of the greatest achievements of the screen. It is a stupendous production.

POST—This Universal production is built to terrify, and so far as the Sunday night crowd at the Cox was concerned, the picture is successful. It is this lack of restraint that would furnish the only avenue for criticism of the production.

TIMES-STAR—It is remarkable chiefly as an impressive and spectacular visualization of an unbelievably brutal period of civilized history, and for the awe-inspiring interpretation of the title role given by Lon Chaney. Chaney has achieved one of the greatest characterizations ever given us in motion pictures.

Belasco, Washington

HERALD—Lon Chaney achieves what is to date the outstanding success of his career in the great production of Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The vital thing about the picture is the way in which interest is kept up throughout. There is never a lag or lapse, and it is one of the best directed seen here in a long time.

TIMES—Universal has made a picture that people will fight to see. Chaney is great. The cathedral is great. The cast, the sets, the photography are great. It's a great picture. Really and truly.

"The Huntress"—1st Nat'l
Strand, Cincinnati

TIMES-STAR—Six or seven years ago "The Huntress" might have been considered an interesting picture. In the light of the present improvement of standards, it represents nothing but dullness and mediocrity.

"If Winter Comes"—Fox
Walnut, Cincinnati

TIMES-STAR—William Fox has not only translated perfectly an idealistic tale into the picture language, but has so interpreted it that the basic reality is driven home, no longer a mere sympathy but a deep conviction.

Marmont's acting is such that one feels no other could have fitted the role. That of Ann Forrest as "Nora" is equally perfect.

"In The Palace of the King"—Gold.
Cosmop. Modern-Beacon, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—After about an hour and half of acting, subtitles, and various other efforts to put the story across, the audience is convinced that "In The Palace of the King" could have been told in about one-half the time and the resulting story would have been about twice as interesting. Emmett Flynn seems to have about as much originality as the average orange.

"A Lady of Quality"—Universal
Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—"A Lady of Quality" is excellent screen entertainment, just the sort of a story that should please 99 per cent of screen fans.

TIMES—"a real, honest-to-goodness picture."

Those of you who saw "The Spanish Dancer" and "Ashes of Vengeance" or "Knighthood" can get a pretty good idea of just what "A Lady of Quality" is like. And when we compare this Universal production to these pictures we are paying it the highest compliment we know how to pay a movie.

"The Light That Failed"—F. P.-L.
Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Notably present in the screen version of Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed" are three things—sincerity, forthright story telling and utterly convincing drama.

POST-DISPATCH—Jacqueline Logan, as the Broke girl, interprets a wide range of emotions. The role of Dick Helder is exceptionally well played by Percy Marmont.

STAR—"The Light That Failed," as Kipling might have written it, but did not, is the feature at the Missouri. It is bootless to dwell on how far the film story misses the point, or points, of the novel, for, after all, the picture is genuinely entertaining. It is a good story unaffectedly told.

TIMES—"a film so outstanding that comparison with other offerings of the week is insolent. When directing and production has attained the point it has in "The Light That Failed," the art of motion pictures has reached fruition. Suffice it to say that we consider the photo play the best of the year, and among the best made.

"Little Old New York"—Gold.
Cosmop.
Rialto, Washington

HERALD—Here is a real cinema achievement. Everything is present that is needed to make a picture of the first magnitude—story, star, settings and supporting cast.

"Long Live the King"—Metro
Grand, Atlanta

GEORGIAN—He is surrounded by a competent cast and the picture is the best in which he has ever appeared.

"Marriage Morals"—Weber and North, Metropolitan, Baltimore

EVENING SUN—Produced by a chap named Will Nigh. You want to watch him. He does things in this film that show him to have that rare and blessed gift—an imagination. What's more, he uses it from time to time with results that are most unusual. The picture is superbly acted.

"Merry-Go-Round"—Universal North Park, Buffalo

COMMERCIAL—"a love story, but a physiological deeply dramatic one, analyzing and mirroring the movements of life and showing some of the justice in bitter tragedies.

"A Million to Burn"—Universal Family, Cincinnati

TIMES-STAR—"the treatment is so full of clever humor that the spectator is free to indulge in extravagant laughter. Much of the success of the play is due to the pleasing personality and clever acting of Herbert Rawlinson, supported by winsome Beatrice Burnham.

"The Near Lady"—Universal
Rivoli, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—"Not only does the picture offer a riot of comedy, but the story is holding and emotional through its simplicity and human touches.

POST-DISPATCH—"There is a rich vein of comedy in the resulting transformation of the German sausage man, his Irish wife and their ambitious daughter. The golf-playing scenes are funny.

STAR—"Gladys Walton is one of the most sincere and refreshing actresses on the screen. In "The Near Lady," at the Rivoli, she again puts every effort into her part, which results in honest comedy and versatility of facial expressions. The plot from a Frank B. Adams story, is typical of that author in delightfully impossible romance, made to seem entirely possible by the star's ability to convince as well as to amuse.

TIMES—"The feature picture is a rollicking laughter producing affair "The Near Lady," in which Gladys Walton displays to advantage her charm and a remarkable array of costumes.

"The Net"—Fox
Liberty, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—"the story takes a sudden turn and the suspense increases two-fold as romance makes its bid for the spotlight, closely pressed by adventure. The ending is splendid and the final fadeout will be a total surprise to you.

STAR—"The Net," a picture of a type popular several years ago. Perhaps its old fashioned qualities are explained by the fact that it was directed by C. Gordon Edwards, who used to direct Theda Bara productions and has his own ideas about what the public likes.

TIMES—"If there is any mystery about "The Net," it is in the way the picture is billed as such. It would be nearer the fact to call it melodrama. There is good acting, several dramatic situations, suspense, laughs and tears—but no mystery.

"Pleasure Mad"—Metro Century, Baltimore

EVENING SUN—"Makes for an entertaining hour. It's the sort of sure-fire stuff that Rupert Hughes delights in revealing to us. There is hardly a new note sounded in its entire length, but this is in no way a detraction.

NEWS—"an extravagant production with an underlying moral and working toward innumerable climaxes and tense situations.

State, Cleveland

PRESS—"Regulation plot No. 4 is trundled out for "Pleasure Mad."

The action is draggy in spots. Only the usual splendid work of Mary Alden in the mother role makes it at all worth while.

PLAIN DEALER—"another story of mother-love.

"Ponjola"—1st Nat'l
Metropolitan, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—"As near to picture perfection as any photoplay that has been seen in this city for many months.

It is a picture that is not going to prove disappointing to those who read the book. Rather are the readers going to like the play even better than the story.

Rivoli, Baltimore

AMERICAN—"There are mine owners, mines and all that sort of thing, with a thrill, a laugh and no end of excellent characterization.

The acting is first rate. SUN—"You'll like "Ponjola." We feel sure of it. The story is different and always entertaining. It has action and often a good solid punch in its scenes. There is a thread of suspense that isn't snapped until the end of the last reel and, what's more, it's a perfectly plausible thread.

"Richard the Lion Hearted"—Allied Randolph, Chicago

HERALD-EXAMINER—"Tis a goodly picture (the subtitles have had their effect on my vocabulary, you see), although no masterpiece. Beery gives us, expertly, the storied monarch in all his moods."

There isn't much story to "Richard, the Lion-Hearted."

"Rosita"—United Artists
Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—"One can't watch Mary Pickford's "Rosita," without comparing it with Pola Negri's "Spanish Dancer."

Comparing the two pictures doesn't harm "Rosita," because it's a better picture. It's better because it has had a better director, Ernst Lubitsch. Of course, it's Mary's picture, too, but a little more Holbrook Blinn's than Mary's. Blinn plays his characterization is excellent.

PRESS—"Even with the aid of a mantilla she (Miss Pickford) does Spanish. That was scarcely to be expected. But those who made the picture a judgment also in the selection of the cast. The settings, turesque and do their part to create a atmosphere. But it is not enough.

The interest in the picture seems to be a good deal after the first half. On without enthusiasm, merely to see a happy ending.

Reviews of the Newest Features

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Stephen Steps Out"

Paramount
As a Whole.....YOUNG DOUGLAS SCREEN DEBUT IN RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' STORY THAT SUITS HIM VERY WELL. STAR A PLEASING QUOTE LIKELY TO BE A PLACE FOR HIM—AND NOT WHOLLY THE GROUND THAT HE'S SON OF DOUG FAIRBANKS, EITHER.

Radiates considerable of his personality and ability to entertain. With the proper material, that will let him be just what Douglas, Jr., should make a star of himself.

...Given a fine supporting company that includes Theodore Roberts, Noah Beery, Frank Curran, James O. Barrows, Fannie French, little Pat Moore.

Story...Comedy; the pranks of college boys always furnishing amusement except to the victim of their jokes, so Richard Harding Davis, when he wrote "Grand Cross of the Crescent," which "Stephen Steps Out" is adapted, had a subject that furnished many good ideas upon which to build a story. It happens to feature star splendidly and with a conception of some revolution-business, which, fortunately has been dwelt upon in great detail, and a thoroughly interesting screen play.

Box Office Angle...Looks as though Douglas, Jr., is going to gather in admirers. You'll please them with his initial effort, "Stephen Steps Out." The picture offers a very good entertainment,—some amusement.

Exploitation...You can rest assured they are not merely capitalizing on a name in presenting Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. The boy promises to follow in the footsteps of his father Doug. He has a pleasing personality although he seems just a little timid about exhibiting it. You can count on his bringing them in. They'll all be interested to see what he can do, and he resembles Doug, Sr., most of the star's name and get interested in his first picture. The story is by Richard Harding Davis, mentioning the title. Give them an idea of the story by saying that it deals with an American college boy who stands for his father "buying a diploma for him. Get your students interested. College paraphernalia will do a lobby attractively.

Richard Barthelmess in "Twenty-One"

Producer: Inspiration Pict.
Distributor: First National
As a Whole.....BARTHELMESS CATERING MORE TO THE BOX OFFICE THAN TO ART IN HIS LATEST; WILL GO VERY WELL WITH MAJORITY OF PUBLIC. STORY RATHER CONVENTIONAL "MOVIE" HOKUM.

Star...Does very good work in regulation hero role; some bits that are going to amuse star's admirers such as his aesthetic dance early in the picture.

Cast...Dorothy Mackaill again star's lead; her performance pleasing; others Joe King, Dorothy Cummings, Elsie Lawson.

Type of Story...Romantic melodrama fits it probably as well as anything. There is the love of a rich youth for a poor girl and their innocent escapade which results in his parents refusing to allow their marriage and her father demanding a money settlement. There follows a mellow twist in which hero leaves home, goes forth to earn his own living as a taxi driver.

"Twenty-One" is not quite the same calibre story as Barthelmess is accustomed to, that is in artistic value. It is more of a conventional variety with all the popular elements of so-called audience appeal. And for the majority of exhibitors it may make more money than some of his pictures that cost a great deal more to produce.

Box Office Angle...Those of the star's admirers who come in expecting to see him in another "The Bright Shawl" or "The Fighting Blade" may be disappointed but, after all, it was really "Tol'able David" that launched Barthelmess, and while "Twenty-One" is quite removed from that picture in box office value, it leans in that direction and should prove thoroughly suitable from the B. O. standpoint.

Exploitation...Barthelmess' name displayed prominently is, of course, your main point of exploitation. Tell them his latest release is considerably different from his recent productions. Let them know a little bit about the story to give a better idea of what it is about. Use catchlines: "Everyone under and over 'Twenty-One' should see Richard Barthelmess in his latest First National release, to be shown at the blank theater on (date)." Launch a teaser campaign by posting the town with ad sheets containing merely the figures 21. Follow it up by getting local shops to offer 21c sales. Tie-up the title in whatever other ways you can.

Direction...John S. Robertson; good usually; beginning a trifle too slow.

Authors...Grace MacGowan Cook and Alice MacGowan.

Scenario...Joseph Lovett

Cameraman...George Folsey

Photography...Good

Locale...City and suburb

Length...6,560 feet

William S. Hart in "Wild Bill Hickok"

Paramount
As a Whole...HART COMES OUT OF RETIREMENT IN ONE OF HIS TYPICAL "WILD BILL" ROLES; PICTURE IS LIVELY AND DULL IN TURNS; WILL LIKELY SATISFY WHERE HART HAS PREVIOUSLY BROUGHT THEM IN.

Star...Back to his old tricks,—fighting, shooting, protecting women, etc. Hart is not quite his old self, nevertheless, although his loyal following may find no fault with his come-back.

Cast...Ethel Grey Terry opposite star. An ample supporting company with regulation western types, including James Farley, Jack Gardner, Carl Gerard, Kathleen O'Connor and others.

Type of Story...Deals with old western frontier days with a slight historical flavoring. Gives Hart the sort of role and opportunities that brought him fame. Whether or not he still retains that position, depends upon how enthusiastically his return is greeted.

There is nothing especially sensational or big about his initial picture, "Wild Bill Hickok," being at times quite interesting and exciting and again rather dull and tedious. The picture moves along at a good pace in the early reels, but after an anti-climax in which Bill shoots up the whole town, it drags badly to the finish. The feature is far too long for the amount of story and can be cut liberally to speed it up.

Box Office Angle...Hart's name used to bring them to the box office. Whether or not it will still draw business will be determined largely by the way they take to his return in "Wild Bill Hickok." If you think it will pay you to find out how he stands with your folks, show them the picture and you'll know what to do with others that may come along. Where the star had a loyal following, you'll probably find they'll be satisfied with "Wild Bill Hickok."

Exploitation...Boost Hart's name and talk about his return to the screen in a story of the days of the western frontier, written by himself. Show them a trailer of the spectacular night battle. They'll get a good idea of the story from this and it will give promise of a typical exciting Hart feature. If properly cut the picture will hold them. At its present length it runs way too long.

Direction...Clifford Smith; satisfactory except that latter reels are too slow.

Author...William S. Hart

Scenario...J. G. Hawks

Cameraman...Dwight Warren

Photography...Good

Locale...The West

Length...6,893 feet

"Anna Christie"

Producer: Thomas H. Ince
Distributor: First National

As a Whole.....POWERFUL THEME VERY FORCEFULLY TOLD AND SPLENDIDLY ACTED; AN EXCELLENT DRAMATIC OFFERING BUT MAY GET INTO DIFFICULTIES WITH CENSORS.

Cast...Several outstanding performances, notably George Marion as "Chris," the originator of the role in the stage play. Marion's portrayal is an exceptionally fine bit of character work, absorbing from start to finish. Blanche Sweet is excellent in the title role and William Russell does, by far, the best work of his career as Matt Burke. Eugenie Besserer is also excellent as Martha. Even the minor parts are very well done.

Type of Story...Drama; from Eugene O'Neill's play. Makes an absorbing dramatic screen entertainment. An unusually strong theme with many tense dramatic moments that are very forcefully presented. In fact the entire theme has been especially well handled to bring out all its dramatic effect. Director Wray has succeeded in bringing the play to the screen without losing its dramatic power and with the aid of the players, makes "Anna Christie" one of most interesting and probably one of the strongest, dramatic themes to reach the screen. In view of certain situations, that of the introductory sequence in particular, in which the heroine arrives to meet her father and explains to the degenerate Martha her past life, the picture will undoubtedly incur the objection of censor boards and to cut it would seriously injure the effectiveness of the theme.

Box Office Angle...Uncertain. If your local boards will approve the picture, appeal to those of your patrons who are interested in strong dramatic themes and who will appreciate the finer qualities of a film such as this,—splendid direction, remarkably fine acting and real dramatic value.

Exploitation...Boost the title, the author's name and the fact that this is a picturization of his stage play, "Anna Christie." Promise several noteworthy performances, mentioning the names of Blanche Sweet, William Russell, Eugenie Besserer, and George Marion, the latter not familiar to screen patrons but it will do to talk about him. His work is excellent.

Direction...John Griffith Wray; did a splendid piece of work here. Certainly gave stage play very fine presentation.

Author...Eugene O'Neill

Scenario...Bradley King

Cameraman...Henry Sharp

Photography...Very good

Locale...About the wharfs

Length...7,631 feet

it over. Some of those interested tried to talk to Dr. A. H. Gianinni of the East River Bank about it. Because the "Doc" does know picture financing. But they were in hard luck. Worse than that. They do say he wasn't even polite to those who approached him. And he can be that way. There are a lot of picture folk who have learned that.

The Godsol idea. Causing a lot of talk. Harry Crandall has some ideas on the subject. Many others have been in touch about it. Including Oscar Neufeld. Of the De Luxe organization. Philadelphia. Who says that the Film Board. Of which he is Mister Pres. Has discussed that idea several times. And hopes that there will be a central shipping, inspecting and transportation organization. Some day. That's just it. Some day.

Incidentally Pete Harrison says a move of this sort would be a violation of the Serman Act. Now Pete. Listen. You stick to reviewing. And stop trying to be a lawyer. Or a Judge.

COULDN'T FIGURE THAT HIGH

George Jacoby. Of Orplid Films, Berlin. Considering using some advertising space in the coming Film Year Book. (Now you know that isn't a bad idea. It's a corking advertising bet. For anyone in this business). But anyway Jacoby started figuring it out in German marks. And after he wore out two lead pencils. And he figured all over a pad of paper he shook his head. "It can't be done," said Jacoby. "That figures 120,000,000,000,000,000 marks."

What a mistake he made!

"JIMQUIN" ON DECK

"Jimquin"—the most komikal cuss who ever stepped in the picture business in the Southwest. Is at it again. Dropped in a few lines. Anent "clean pictures" and Better Picture Service. With which, evidently, "Jimquin" is now connected. Says he:

When a man talks to us now of "clean" pictures the first thing we do is to reach for the trusty musket and phone for the undertaker because there's going to be a killing. For although science has discovered that a bull is really color-blind and that we're all wrong about his touchiness on the question of red rags, most of us are quite sufficiently convinced that he will invariably give a red rag his undivided attention. "Clean" pictures are to us the red rags of the picture business. No bull about it.

When one of those fellows came to Better Picture Service recently and, in tones resembling a maiden aunt presenting a passing vagrant with a hand-out that had been rescued in midair en route to the ash-can, informed us that he had a picture he would like us to look at, ("a nice, 'clean' picture," he formula-ed) we reached for the gun but it happened to be out getting cleaned after a previous murder.

Well, anyway, in a frenzy of charity we agreed to look at it. sad story. Six reels of stuff that should never be offered for sale by the pound. It would be incorrect to class it as "junk" for acquaintance in the junk business assure us that theirs is a very profitable line.

"Clean" pictures! O, what crimes are committed in thy name.

"Clean" pictures. Like that widely advertised brand of stomach somine not only the children but the adults as well are crying, no "clean" pictures but for entertaining pictures.

"Clean" pictures? The woods are fuller of them than of trees. They clean all right; clean of rhyme or reason; clean of story, interest, a human appeal and everything else except that good-bye forever overh

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS"

You just cannot help thinking about this picture. Or talk about it. If Dec. 21 wasn't so close at hand one might be tempted to praise it some more. Still the premiere deserves consideration. Universal
As a Whole.....AND STILL AN-OTHER GOOD ONE FROM GIBSON; STORY IS RATHER NOVEL ALTHOUGH THE
"HOLLYWOOD" ANGLE IS NOT NEW. IT'S PARTICU-LARLY WELL DONE
THOUGH AND VERY AMUS-ING.

Star....Is continually supplied with splendid variation in his different vehicles; this time he's a cowboy who goes to Hollywood and tries to "break into" the movies. Gibson's work is always interesting.

Cast....Billie Dove, William E. Lawrence and James Neill support star adequately in main theme with some of Universal's stars contributing bits to the movie sequence—among them Hobart Henley, King Baggott, Edward Sedgwick (Universal directors), Mary Philbin, Laura La Plante, Reginald Denny, Norman Kerry.

Type of Story....Fine comedy number with star at his best in movie episode where he arrives in Hollywood, prepared to accept a $3,000 a week salary but is satisfied with $3 a day as an extra, playing the part of a Roman foot soldier after having told the casting director he could ride anything that moved.
There's some great comedy in this that is going to satisfy them immensely. The business following in which an Arabian prince hits upon the idea of having Hoot double for him, after having seen the stunt work satisfactorily in the studios, is not quite up to the comedy standard of the earlier sequences, but the picture, on the whole, is thoroughly amusing. The sub-titles are especially good.

Box Office Angle....First rate entertainment. Should please any type of audience. If Gibson already has a following, promise them another dandy. If he hasn't, here's a good chance to get them interested.

Exploitation...Even though you may have played the more pretentious Hollywood pictures such as "Souls for Sale," or "Hollywood," you can still please them with another on the same order, though it isn't done on as large a scale. Nevertheless, there's genuinely good entertainment, and plenty of laughs to satisfy them. Play up the title with catchlines: "Are you a thrill chaser?
See how Hoot Gibson goes about satisfying a desire to become a movie star, in his latest 'The Thrill Chaser.'" Use stills in the lobby showing Gibson in his Roman soldier makeup. Promise a generous array of prominent Universalites, mentioning the names given above.
Tell them they'll see how movies are made in "The Thrill Chaser."

TICULARLY WHERE THEY AREN'T DEMANDING LAV-ISH PRODUCTIONS. JUSTI-FIES RE-MARRIAGE BE-TWEEN ILL-ASSORTED
COUPLES.

Cast....Milton Sills entirely pleasing as Dan Hannon, a big-hearted policeman. Jeanne Carpenter and Marion Feducha appealing kiddies.
Ethel Grey Terry well cast as ill-treated wife. Others include Wilfred Lucas, George F. Hayes, Anita Simons, Clarissa Selwynne.

Type of Story....A series of domestic tangles between husbands and wives in which all the wives get happily re-assorted in the end.
Also deals with the capture of a murderer by the policeman-hero, after an innocent boy has been convicted of the crime. There is a very good fight between Sills and the criminal near the finish which ends in the villain's escape, only to be captured soon after in another anti-climatic way. There are somewhat too many titles and they are often too "talky."

Box Office Angle.....An average neighborhood audience that isn't over-critical or inclined to lean toward "big" pictures too much will probably be well-satisfied with this one, especially where they like the domestic problem theme. There isn't anything new about it, it's just a conventional plot but it may please them. Milton Sills' followers will like his characterization as the big-hearted cop, and Ethel Grey Terry's name may prove a drawing card where she is popular.

Exploitation....Feature the names of Milton Sills and Ethel Grey Terry in all your announcements if you play it. The title also should be featured as there may be a certain percentage of folks who will be attracted by it. There isn't anything very sensational about the picture, however. You know best what will satisfy your clientele and it may be better for you to see this one and decide for yourself whether it has enough to hold them. Numerous catch-lines can be employed, such as "What Makes a Model Husband"?, or, "Should a woman who has been unhappily married once, take a second chance? See 'Why Women Re-Marry' at the blank theater on—Or "Some women marry for love, others for a

PLENTY OF THRILLS IN RUSSELL'S LATEST; STORY
ONE OF THOSE IMPROBA-BLE KNOCK 'EM DEAD
PLOTS WHERE HERO CAN'T HELP BUT COME OUT THE WINNER.

Star....Given many opportunities to exploit his hero tactics; will please a following and likely be judged a great battler from his many fistic victories.

Cast....They're all against hero except the girl, played fairly well by Dorothy Devore. Loyd Whitlock and Frank Beal, Russell's capable antagonists.

Type of Story....Far-fetched meller, the sort that offers plenty of excitement for those in search of it.
The action is wild, to say the least,
with hero and the two plotting against him, taking turns at knockouts. First it's hero who's out, then it's Loyd Whitlock, his chief sparring partner. The story, taken for the action it contains and the thrills provided, will please well enough. It will not, however, stand a critical analysis nor should it be taken seriously.

The plot is of a conventional order as to its basic theme, dealing as it does, with the effort of hero to gain the ownership of a certain valuable mine for his firm, against the strong opposition of competitors who resort to foul means to get hero out of their way.

Box Office Angle....All right for action admirers and the star's following. By no means a pretentious offering, but will suffice where they prefer action and don't mind the absurdities of the situations.

Exploitation.....If you know your folks like these action mellers, you can promise them plenty of genuinly exciting situations, and enough thrills in "When Odds Are Even."
Use a trailer showing any one of the fights or the incident at the finish where the villain does the popular "over the cliff" exit. Where Russell is popular, boost his name and tell them about his work in this.

The title, or substance of the story, are not especially appropriate for stunt advertising, so you'll have to stick to catchlines, trailers, and lobby display to attract their attention. Say: "Suppose you found yourself aboard an ocean liner bound for a foreign port and it meant pay your passage or work for it, and you didn't have the fare, what would you do? See how William Russell handles the situation in 'When Odds Are Even.'"

"Uncensored Movies"—Pathe

Rogers at His Funniest

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

This is probably the funniest picture Will Rogers has ever made. The humor is sometimes subtle but none the less real for that. Those who are tired of the slapstick knockabout comedy and who appreciate an opportunity to exercise their sense of humor will welcome this. Rogers is seen—oh wonder, of wonders,—in a dress suit. He has just returned from Hollywood whither he was sent by his home town to see if all the things they say about the place are true. He says they are—and he has brought with him all the evidence in rolls of film which he has projected before an audience of the home folks who are longing to be shocked. And they are. Rogers has played all the parts himself. A scene purporting to show Valentino as the wicked sheik proves to have Rogers all dressed up in the title role himself. A glimpse into Bill Hart's private life shows Bill being shorn of his several guns by his aged mother who accuses him of "Shooting men again." And so on. This is a real one. Don't let it get by.

"Why Elephants Leave Home"—Pathe

Interesting and Educational

Type of production... 2 reel novelty

As Pathe's advertising catchline puts it, this is "not a sex picture," nevertheless it is a first rate educational novelty, presented in a thoroughly entertaining manner with pleasing titles by Katherine Hilliker. It depicts the manner in which elephants are used as beasts of burden etc. in Ceylon, India and also the manner in which, once in three years, new recruits are caught and forced into service by the natives. The scenes showing the mad stampede of the newly imprisoned elephants will furnish a real thrill, and the film as a whole is one of the most entertaining educational novelties on the market.

"A Dark Knight"—Joe Rock—Grand-Asher

Good Diversion

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Except for the fact that there is somewhat too much footage for the subject matter, this is an enjoyable comedy with Joe Rock starring in black-face make-up. The idea is humorous, too. Joe's girl is giving a black-face masquerade party and Joe in his make-up is on his way to the party when he is mistaken for a colored home-wrecker by a real negro. In his attempt to get away, he is trapped into a marriage by another dark-brown baby and finally lands in jail. Some really funny bits occur in this sequence when he finds his co-worker on the rock pile is the coon who first chased him.

"She's a He"—Century—Universal

Will Please the Kids

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

"She's a He" provides ample opportunity for Buddy Messinger to romp around in girl's clothes and act girlish one minute and hoydenish the next. The action is swift and there are several amusing situations. This should be a number that will find favor with the kiddies in your audience, although Buddy's manners at the dinner table will not serve as a model for them. Buddy is a plumber's assistant. While at work in a wealthy family's home, Buddy is forced by the family to impersonate their daughter as their aunt is about to arrive and thinks them the parents of a young daughter. The rest of the action deals with Buddy's difficulties in female attire.

"A Matter of Policy"—Universal

An Average Comedy

Type of production... 1 reel comedy

Neely Edwards as Nery Ned comes accidentally into possession of an accident insurance policy. Starving, he decides to get hurt so he can collect some money on the policy. The usual stuff ensues, with Ned being just too late to be hurt at every accident. A safe falls but not on him. In despair he puts his hand into a ferocious lion's cage but the lion only licks it. However, at the finish he finally does get run over and then the policy proves no good. The interest is well sustained in this one until the very finish which falls a bit flat.

"The Bottom of the Sea"—Lyman H. Howe—Educational

Literally a 'Hodge-Podge'

Type of production... 1 reel novelty

This issue of Lyman Howe's "Hodge Podge" is just a combination of scenes, some actual photographs and others animated drawings, of things and places and people. The different topics come in quick succession, not giving the audience time to tire or even to know very much about any of them. None of it means very much, but as is always the case with this series it is nicely presented and novel ways of handling the subject matter add greatly to its interest.

A New Book

The Macmillan Co. is publishing a volume by Victor O. Freeburg entitled "Pictorial Beauty on the Screen," with a preface by Rex Ingram. Dedicated to James Cruze, "because the various types of pictorial beauty described in this book may be seen richly blended with epic narrative and stirring drama in 'The Covered Wagon,' a cinema composition that will live," the volume strives to show by means of text and illustrations the ways in which more pictorial beauty can be brought to motion pictures. In commenting on the book, Will H. Hays says in part, "The public desire for pictorial art in the motion picture—that is, the art of composition of objects and beauty of design—which is the theme of Dr. Freeburg's book, comes contemporaneously with consistent effort of the part of producers of motion pictures to develop and achieve it."

A book which producers and directors may read with profit.

Would Oust West Coast

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Fresno, Cal.—Charging violation of lease, L. L. Cory, owner of the Hippodrome theater property, has filed suit in the Superior Court, naming the Fresno Hippodrome Co. and Coast Theaters, Inc., as joint defendants.

Cory claims the original lease with the Hippodrome company carried a clause whereby any transfer of lease was forbidden except with approval. This, he claims, was given at the time the Fresno Hippodrome Co. (Ackerman & Hart) turned the Fresno house over to West Coast Theaters. Cory's present aim is to not only oust West Coast from the theater but also to collect an amount equal to three times regular rental of the theater which is $1 250 per month.

VISION

By DANNY

ix Isman works it out. In article in the Saturday Evening Post. In which he points out that the future holds very large houses; seating 8,000 to 10,000 people. Thereby reducing the cost of admission. The "perfect" motion picture program will be presented. Large seating capacity being possible for the lower cost admission.

It's a great idea. But it will take time to come. Regardless of the size of the house, the motion picture entertainment for the vast masses of people must be within their means. Picture entertainment is mass entertainment. Never forget it.

Difficulty has been that in an attempt to compete with highly subsidized entertainment; such as orchestras and grand opera—exhibitors have lost their percentage.

Strong Drama

Ince has done it. Made "Christie" exactly like the play, for a trifling reel or so of motion. Photographed the show. It is a picture. Strong situations.uff. Just what censors will say in some sections remains to be seen. They are still looking at it with infantile minds. In a few days ago they finally approved Chaplin's "Woman of Paris" helping it. So Ince may as well make up his mind—censorship is unavoidable. But maybe it will be in enough spots to make handsomely. For it is deservedly probably the strongest theme presented in a picture. And it works from Blanche Sweet and Russell as well as George "Chris." Russell steps out endly.

A Misleading Stunt

Perez and Joe Weil of Universal exploitation, sent out fictitious for the Army-Navy football on Saturday, tying it up with "Hunchback" on the reverse side. There appeared photos of star from West Point and Annapolis and one of Lon Chaney as "Hunchback."

Exploitation that discredits rather than constructs hurts.

Harry M. Crandall Comments on the Godsol Statement—Interesting Ideas on Percentage

By HARRY M. CRANDALL
Of Crandall's Theaters, Washington, D. C.

I was very much interested in Mr. Godsol's article that appeared in your issue of Wednesday, Nov. 14. I usually hesitate to answer these articles, for the reason that some producers figure that anything the exhibitor says in answer to their article is a knock rather than a suggestion to try to set the whole industry straight; but knowing Mr. Godsol as I do, I have no hesitancy in answering his, because I know he is sincere and energetic, and although new in the business, is always willing to accept suggestions and quick to see their possible value—and he is one who is going to be heard from in this industry in no small degree eventually.

Having said that of Mr. Godsol, I will make a few remarks about his article.

First, I can see that he understands that something must be done with the cost of production. He also makes a further very good suggestion—that there is a lot of money wasted in dis-

Germany Badly Off

Conditions There Unsatisfactory, Says George Jacoby—Going to Coast

George Jacoby, president of the Orplid Film Co. of Berlin, who is in New York relative to a co-operative producing plan in conjunction with Luxor Pictures, declared on Saturday that conditions in Germany are extremely unsatisfactory. Jacoby will probably go to the coast with Sig Schlager in December.

"Conditions are so bad," he said, "that it is impossible to obtain even a small percentage of the cost of production for the showing of pictures in Germany. German pictures today in order to achieve any degree of success must depend for the large share of their revenue on the foreign market."

"In this respect there are two groups of German producers, one believing that only typical German films should be made and the other believing that German pictures should be made to conform more to international demands.

"In this second group are the directors who are training themselves to make pictures according to the American technique. They carefully watch every American picture of value and I believe that today in cooperative work with American directors, are capable of bringing out pictures that will conform to the high entertainment demands of the American public. These pictures will have the advantage of bringing to the picture going public of America new settings, extraordinarily good acting and new faces.

Take Over Woods'

Chicago Loop Theater Passes to Aaron Jones—Marks and Goldman Split Interests

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Jones, Linick and Schaefer are now in possession of the Woods' theater in the loop. The deal was arranged several weeks ago when Aaron Jones was in New York and then interested Marcus Loew in the project.

The firm takes over the entire building lease which still has ninety-two years to run at a price placed at $1,110,000. The transfer of the theater means no change in policy. "Scaramouche," which is now playing at the Woods' will continue at $2 top.

The resignation of Jones as managing director of the McVickers', a J. L. and S., house under lease to Paramount, does not bear on the arrangement covering it. Jones, Linick and Schaefer will continue to get half of the profits but will not have any say in the actual management of the theater.

Another important move in local exhibitor circles concerns the affairs of Marks and Goldman, who control a string of first-run theaters here. They have agreed to dissolve partnership, with one half of the theater properties going to Marks and the other half to Goldman.

Credit Groups

by C. B. Hoy—State Right-to Be Invited to Meeting
Here Soon

Work is underway to organize the film industry and those business-people affiliated with it into credit groups under the guidance of Charles H. Hoy, who handled credits for the F. I. L. M. Clubs for some time.

Mr. Hoy at present calls for five groups: film laboratories, state righters, distributors and printers, trade papers and accessory dealers. To date, the credit group has been organized in the Film Laboratories Credit Group. It now awaits an election to be held in December. Shortly after Thanksgiving is the intention of Hoy and Charles H. Elliott, who is identified with Hoy, to call a meeting of the righters and explain the work of the plan.

Arrangement with accessory dealers is said to be functioning in a satisfactory manner. The publicity division will hold another meeting shortly.

To Make Pelley Story

Washington—"Idle Hands," a story by William Dudley Pelley, is to be sponsored by the U. S. Penal Department of Justice.

W. Votaw, Superintendent of State Prisons has been advocating installation of a factory in Leavenworth to give the inmates manual work. H. M. Berman of F. B. O. is interested in Votaw's project. In conferring with officials of the Department of Justice, Pelley wrote "Idle Hands." It will be made in the studio on the Coast and it is understood that Mrs. Wallace Reid volunteered services for the female

New House For Loew?

It is understood that the Loew interests have taken over the old Grand Central House at 23rd St. and Eighth St. The theater shows pictures and will be used for a long time. The property was sold a few days ago for $1,000,000. There are many stories in the building which are used by different lodges for meetings.

The above report could not be confirmed at the Loew offices yesterday.

Kunsky Plans New House

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit — John H. Kunsky will build a 3,000 theater in the downtown section. Detroit may have two new first runs, the Kunsky house and the theater planned by Goldwyn, probably in conjunction with Phil Gleichman.

Johnsons Going to Africa Again

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson sail Saturday on the Leviathan to spend five years in Africa filming another animal picture, similar to "Trailing African Wild Animals." From England, they will go to Mombasa and from there to Nairobi.

Dinner Quota Filled

The quota for the Reichenbach dinner at the Ritz tomorrow night has been filled. About 200 well-known film men, including the majority of important executives will attend.

Extend Central Theater Lease

Universal, which originally leased the Central for seventeen weeks, has extended the lease for an additional ten. This means "The Hunchback" will remain there until early March.

Draft the Salesmen

Billy Brandt Would Use Them,
10,000 Strong, to Work for Admission Tax Repeal

Billy Brandt made a suggestion at the F. I. L. M. Club dinner on Saturday night that made an impression at the time. He spoke about the admission tax repeal fight and advanced the thought that the 10,000 salesmen in the business be drafted to work in that direction.

He explained yesterday that he intended arranging for that to be done in New York State through the help of the F. I. L. M. Club to which all important exchanges in the state, including state righters, belong. Following the dinner, Sydney S. Cohen was asked what he thought of the idea, and said it was necessary to secure the help and co-operation of as many people as possible to put over a winning fight.

James J. Walker was the toastmaster. In introducing George H. Cobb, chairman of the M. P. Commission of New York, (the censors) Walker said that he expected to lead the fight for the repeal of the censorship measure in Albany again this year. Marcus Loew spoke about chain buying and remarked that in many instances where exhibitor combinations existed, it was due to the competition created by the sales managers themselves and the hard bargains they made on prices which caused exhibitors to combine. He closed by saying that he hoped the day would soon arrive when exhibitors were organized to a sufficient degree to make their film purchases through one central buying unit.

New Hodkinson Series

"The Painted Woman," starring James Kirkwood and Lila Lee, is the first of a series of four productions, starring this combination, which will be distributed through Hodkinson. They are being made at the Ince studio on the Coast.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

The Temple of Vesta, constructed in the time of the Republic, is of white marble of the Corinthian style, and in its day one of the most imposing structures in all the ancient Italian Capitol. First dedicated to Stephano delle Carrozze and today bears the name of St. Maria del Sole, and in the foreground of a beautiful romantic love scene in George Fitzmaurice's production—"The Eternal City," as produced by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures).—Advt.

Booking Combine in St. Louis

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—An important booking deal has been closed by Fred L. Cornwell, owner of the Delmonte, with Spyros Skouras, Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Co., who control some 18 theaters. Under the arrangement the Delmonte, will play day and date with the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol on many of the Metro releases for which Cornwell holds the St. Louis and St. Louis county rights for two years.

The first was "Long Live the King," which opened at the Delmonte, Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol on Saturday. The new contract replaced one with William Goldman.

Weingarten Back

Larry Weingarten has returned from a sales trip through the Mid-West on behalf of "Long Live the King." He will remain here ten days longer before leaving for the coast.

Theater Robbed of $4,000

The safe in the Mount Morris theater, 116th St and Fifth Ave., was robbed of $4,000 over the week end.

"This Freedom" opened for a three weeks' run at the Central last night. It will be replaced on Dec. 17 with "The Shepherd King."

Burr Starts New Picture

Charles C. Burr placed a new picture in production at the Glendale studio yesterday with Gregory La Cava directing.

Nagel Here

Conrad Nagel and Mrs. Nagel arrived in New York in time Friday to attend the Goldwyn dance at the Pennsylvania.

Conditions Irregular

The monthly survey of the Guaranty Trust Co. reports: "While conditions in industry and trade remain highly irregular, there is little change in the volume of industrial employment or in wage scales, nor the average of wholesale price much altered by the individual fluctuations from week to week." "Altogether, the immediate business outlook is not unpromising, except to those who can recognize prosperity only in rampant expansion."

Close Three Deals

Weber & North have sold "Miriage Morals" and "Don't Marry Money" to Skouras Bros. for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. A. H. Blank, for Iowa and Nebraska and Creole Enterprises, for Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Regrets Airing Industry's Troubles

Regret that so much about troubles of the industry has been sent to the public by the men in industry, was the keynote of a given recently by Arthur S. Friedman of Distinctive, before the House Committee on Public Relations on the occasion of the showing of "Steadfast Heart."

Lunch for Louella Parsons

A number of publicity men will treat Louella Parsons a lunch at the New York American Saturday prior to her joining the staff of the committee, Harry Reback, toastmaster and Bert Adler, treasurer. Reservations can be made through Adler at 6 W. 48th St.

Prison Officials at Showing

The directors of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Reform will attend a showing of "The Winning Boss," this morning.

Is Theater Sold?

Then the Chicago Tribune reported having received telegrams from New York claiming Marcus Loew was one of the new owners. Other messages announced Adolph Zukor and Metro as the purchasers. Finally, the Tribune received a telegram from Lou Houseman, Woods' representative in Chicago, reading as follows:

"At 7 o'clock tonight Mr. Woods called me up from New York and instructed me to deny the transfer. Aside from the fact that the property has not been sold, the price quoted—$1,100,000—is ludicrous as well as ridiculous."

Yesterday, Martin Herman, Woods' general manager declared the theater had not been sold, despite statements to the contrary originally issued by J. L. and S. Herman he did very graciously admit, however, that a deal was under way, but—

Aaron Jones who has been in town for several days managed to check out of the Astor for Chicago yesterday before THE FILM DAILY representative could grab him.

And at Marcus Loew's office, a deep silence was maintained.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

The Palace of the Quirinal, erected in the year 1574 by Gregorio XIII, for many years was the residence of the Popes.

On the right is the Chapel Paolina, and on the left the Hall of the Cuirassiers, while directly in front are the statues of Castore and Polluce.

For George Fitzmaurice's production—"The Eternal City," this magnificent plaza acted as the camera base in several scenes, presented by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures) through First National.—Adv't.

Astor Lease Was Extended

In commenting on the extended run of "The Hunchback" on Broadway, it was inadvertently stated yesterday that the picture was playing at the Central. The theater, of course, is the Astor.

plan to the attention of Will Hays. Certainly he seemed receptive toward the suggestion.

"It can be worked out," he said. "I think the salesmen can be drafted through the effective machine created by the F. I. L. M. Clubs all over the country. There should be a central headquarters for this kind of work, if the plan should become operative. I do think, however, that the Brandt plan might work out insofar as acquainting exhibitors with the proper line of arguments to pursue with their Congressmen is concerned. Salesmen could secure the instructions from their branch managers and then pass on the information and suggestions to the exhibitor."

De Mille to Talk

William de Mille will be one of the speakers at a dinner to be given by the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau at the Cosmopolitan Club on Dec. 28, at which motion pictures will be the chief topic of discussion. Miss Tolhunter will talk on "Motion Pictures and Education"; Professor Dix Ryon Fox the historian for the Chronicles of America series, will discuss "Motion Pictures and History"; Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, "Motion Pictures and the Audience" and de Mille "Motion Pictures and the Producer."

“THE LEAVENWORTH CASE”

A Whitman Bennett Production

MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

Almost at the first flash you find yourself face to face with a seemingly unsolvable mystery and from then on, with no waste footage, your interest is held tensely until the final and thoroughly satisfactory solution. Here is an absorbing and exciting entertainment for all who like a good detective-crime-mystery story—and who does not?

EXHIBITORS HERALD:

“The Leavenworth Case” loses none of its entertainment value through transference to the screen. Its highly dramatic moments have been well retained. The picture is well staged and lighted and full of dramatic interest; the story flows smoothly and works up to a splendid climax.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

No type of story is more popular in these United States than a good detective yarn, and Anna Katharine Green's mystery tale “The Leavenworth Case” is said to be her most widely read and best liked work. Therefore to begin with this picture it can boast of a real plot. It is one that bristles with action—action that begins soon after the introductory reel gets under way and keeps rolling along at a merry pace right up to the finish. The scene in “The Rat Trap,” a sort of third-degree chamber, possesses real thrills. The entire mounting is of a type that stamps this as a high class offering.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW:

From the time the old man is found dead in his sound-proof study till the very end, where both girls are freed of suspicion and the culprit is run down, the film runs along with a smoothness and continuity which will carry its audiences along with it. The production is fairly peppered with thrilling incidents, not the least of which is a hair-raising fist fight on the very edge of the roof of the four-story house from which the villain is finally thrown and killed. The skill with which this situation is handled cannot help reflect itself on the reaction of the spectators, who, we feel sure will be edging forward on their seats.

Newspaper Opinions

"Flaming Youth"—1st Nat'l Strand

AMERICAN—This little lady was so adorable, so picturesque, so cutely pantomimic, so multi-colored in her emotions, and so splendidly eyed, that she was quite enough to make a go even of a devitalized book picture. . . . The cast throughout was remarkably well chosen.

DAILY NEWS—In short, "Flaming Youth," is not quite up to the mark for highbrows, but it's a darn good picture for the rest of us—wholly enjoyable, thoroughly undraggy, admirably acted by an extraordinary cast.

EVENING JOURNAL—. . . Miss Moore deserves a place among the very best comedienne. She is cute, artful, winning, humorous, clever, intelligent, pert and many other pleasant things that properly belong to a girl who can raise chuckles. . . . For about half its length it runs along smoothly and flawlessly. The second half, while not dull, has its moments of heaviness and lack of surety.

EVENING WORLD—"Flaming Youth," which blazed forth as a regular conflagration in book form, is simmering away as a film at the Strand this week. It will probably burn along at about nine-candlepower for the balance of the week and then flicker out.

MAIL—It is an intense drama, well mounted, carefully directed, reaching at times that rarely known place called greatness. . . . The picture has the elements which make for popularity, a happy combination of incidents that have heretofore been overdone in the movies. We enjoyed it immensely.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—. . . a triumph for the producer, the star, the director, the scenario writer, and, in fact, every one connected with it. What probably means more to the producing company, it will unquestionably reap big harvests for the film coffers.

SUN—"Flaming Youth" gets patronage under false pretenses, because the story isn't half as hot as it sounds. . . . So we feel duty bound to tell all those interested in "Flaming Youth"—. . . that its raciest episode is one in which the members of a house party partly strip themselves and plunge into their host's swimming pool.

TELEGRAM—Every bit of the film was absorbing, thanks to the direction by John Francis Dillon. Colleen Moore as Patricia Fentriss is a vivacious and capricious little creature.

TIMES—The beguiling and resourceful tactics of a flapper. . . . are engrossingly portrayed. . . . The censor possibly with an eye on the artistic photography and settings, appears to have exercised unusual leniency with this. . . . Undoubtedly the director has observed box-office regulations in making this rather risqué entertainment which it is safe to prognosticate, will be more than moderately successful. . . .

ALLAN A. LOWNES, GEN. MGR.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—. . . a picture that was snappy, fast and full of sexy stuff. . . . John Francis Dillon directed the picture and handled the production in a decidedly clever manner, his detail being particularly effective.

TRIBUNE—"Flaming Youth" is one of those obvious, preachy, Hollywood-idea-of-New York-society pictures—though on second thought the locale isn't New York. . . . There is just one thing in the picture that flames. This is Colleen Moore. We have become a complete convert and realize now that Miss Moore is one of the actively fascinating young women on the screen. . . .

WORLD—"Flaming Youth" is distinctly old-fashioned. . . . Five years ago this type of picture was at least a novelty. . . . Yet the good is struggling under a deadening burden of the very bad. Since the latter has proved itself extensively popular among the indiscriminating masses who supported shoddy motion pictures it is probable that "Flaming Youth" will prosper.

"To The Ladies"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—Here is a photoplay that surpasses the stage play from which it was adapted. "To The Ladies," . . . is one of the most significant things in film form this season. It is an example seen of what excellent direction and skillful acting may do with an apparently weak story.

EVENING JOURNAL—Score another bull's-eye for James Cruze. The man who made "The Covered Wagon" and "Hollywood" again gives the public a picture over which it can go into ecstasies.

"To The Ladies," adapted from the Kaufman-Connelly play, is as human, as funny and as "different" as the most jaded fan could ask for.

EVENING WORLD—"To The Ladies" was a mighty amusing comedy by Kaufman and Connelly, and it's just as amusing in its film version directed by James Cruze, and now unwinding as the chief film attraction at the Rivoli. If you chance to be thin and wish to laugh on some poundage—drop into the Rivoli and gain a score of pounds. If you are stout and wish to giggle away a few pounds—take a look at "To The Ladies."

MORNING TELEGRAPH—. . . An excellent picture.

SUN—. . . delightfully transferred to its new medium for one very good reason—James Cruze. . . . The picture is notable above everything else for extremely natural touch.

TELEGRAM—That delightful satire by Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly called "To the Ladies" has taken on a new vitality in its film version. . . .

TIMES—Horton is splendid. . . . There are minor comedy situations in this film, but the speech is the outstanding feature. . . . All the players were exceptionally well cast in this most welcome picture. Mr. Cruze directed "The Covered Wagon" and "Hollywood." He was also responsible for "Ruggles of Red Gap," which was adapted from an angle which weakened it. However, Mr. Cruze does well when he hits the nail on the head squarely three times out of four.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—"To the Ladies" as pictured by Famous Players makes a dandy screen entertainment. Its satire is keen and brilliant and at same time easily within the comprehension of the average picture fan.

TRIBUNE—. . . James Cruze made this picture, which is perhaps one reason why it is so good. The every day life of the office. . . . is amusingly portrayed. . . .

WORLD—. . . is another of the season's really amusing picture plays. In the beginning, the story was there, with fresh, keen comic situations throughout, and then the Paramount company showed the good sense to name James Cruze as its director. . . . Really, this is a comedy picture far finer, wittier, more wholesome and more invigorating than most of the stuff you are seeing, and it deserves a big week at the Rivoli.

"The Day of Faith"—Gold-Cosmop. Capitol

AMERICAN—Miss Boardman possesses wholesome beauty and high intelligence and she is a delight to see on the screen. . . .

There is no lack of action. Four homicides, two burglaries, three mobs and lesser items of violence are included.

DAILY NEWS—"The Day of Faith" can very nicely be divided into quarters. When the first quarter is over you wonder where on earth material for the next three-quarters is to come from. But, strangely enough, it comes. It lags and it sags and it drags, but it comes.

EVENING JOURNAL—"The Day of Faith" contains many instances of surging drama and of strongly limned character. In transmuting the novel to the screen, Tod Browning, the director, has not always breathed into the salient situations all of the suspense they warrant, and occasionally he permits the principals to undergo too sudden conversion to the truth.

EVENING WORLD—In our estimation "The Day of Faith," is an absorbing picture; one that "got" us from the main title to the fadeout. It has a splendid idea which is splendidly worked out, both directorially and historically, and the cast is excellent.

HERALD—"The Day of Faith," . . . has borrowed all the slush from "The Miracle Man," but has neglected to take with it any of the sincerity. The result is a picture that is preachy without being convincing; it aims at the emotions of its audience but it is utterly unable to stir them.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—To us it is a forceful, compelling drama, based on one of the greatest of all ideas, namely, faith. . . . "The Day of Faith," is a fine picture—unafraid of being forceful to achieve its points, and aiming to do something more than just amuse.

POST—"The Day of Faith," . . . has little to commend it beyond the fact of Eleanor Boardman's appearance in the leading part. She is a clever young woman. . . .

SUN—Moreover, Eleanor Boardman proves that she has definitely arrived among the list of screen stars by her performance. . . . a gripping picture, regardless of whether you believe in the Rev. Billy Sunday or not.

TELEGRAM—The story is one of unusual significance and moral strength unfolded in terms of intensely human actors and their reactions to one another.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—The Goldwyn feature has interesting story flawlessly acted by an unexcelled Eleanor Boardman. . . . Boardman as the convert and disciplinarian who believes in the principle "My Neighbor Perfect" deserves a place in the list of screen emotional actresses.

TRIBUNE—"The Day of Faith" is a ribbly muddled story about something that is not worth seeing. . . . Go to the Capitol is our advice, picture and draw your own conclusions. . . . would see it over again, but know would do no good. There are enough in that picture to baffle us forever.

WORLD—The new play at the Capitol is a clumsy step in the right direction. It deals with humanitarian creed slogan is "My Neighbor is perfect."

The film makes clear enough what the play makes clear, flounders about miserably in presenting its argument, seeing it, we are still not convinced that certain persons are perfect.

costs, etc., so that the necessary papers might be arranged and the idea brought to a satisfactory conclusion.

Among the interesting developments of the idea was the presentation of certain figures at the last meeting, the sum of which show, that by the combined distributing plan as well as the combination and elimination of the sales forces of the various concerns, the cost of operation would reduce from approximately 6 per cent to approximately 27 per cent and that the net saving of these half dozen operators would total approximately $75,000 a year. This, without regard to probable increased sales which are expected would follow such a move.

Next Week on Broadway

Next week's line-up on Broadway includes "The Mailman," at the Cameo; "In the Palace of the King," at the Capitol; "Tiger Rose," at the Rialto; "Long Live The King," at the Rivoli; while "Anna Christie," is tentatively scheduled for the Strand, although "Flaming Youth" may be held over.

Buys English Films

Fred W. Crosbie of Winnipeg, has been appointed division manager with charge of distribution throughout the Canadian West.

W. W. Hodkinson stated yesterday that there are about a dozen English pictures which his organization has taken over for Canada. They will not be handled by Hodkinson in the States.

"The demand for English pictures," said Hodkinson, "is a live one and it was for that reason that we closed the British deal."

THANKS

By DANNY

For many things that happened. For many that are under way. And the sense of fulfillment are all. Which should have been yesterday important. For many have figured it out and respect it accordingly.

On the matters devoutly thankful for is the anticipation of the overwhelming prospects of this season's which will be materially cut and rear.

But, that there promises to sanity in picture and when this happens it will be well worth giving a try.

As distributors are coming in a better state of mind handling product is worth thinking about the action of the small independent operators in which may be followed by moves in other cities in the next year. So something to be thankful for.

Costume Pictures

Interestingly on the cards for the season. There have been so many reasons that producers get so feelingly when you ask them for next year. Which is the query: what will be the picture made for next year? Not a bit. Too far ahead to get into? Why? Famous and important units will be on the early in the year. And only around the corner.

Goldwyn On The Coast

Charles Loew leaves for the coast Monday. Irving Lesser is to leave at a moment's notice. First National is settling its plans. Lasky is discussing the problem this moment with Kor, Kent and Kane. Lasky goes all along the line. In 10 days at the most all the programs for next year will have been outlined.

Congressmen Won't Bind Themselves on Tax Repeal—Compromise May Be Necessary
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Members of Congress, particularly those from the Middle West, are very reticent about giving voice to their views on the Mellon plan for the reduction of taxes. Most of them declare that it is yet too early to make any statement, because they want to see the House organized, and a definite Congressional program presented before they make up their minds on the matter. Representative Harry E. Hull, of Iowa, in a newspaper statement, expressed the views of many of his colleagues.

"I am for the soldiers bonus first, and for the raising of such moneys as are required to operate the Government," said Hull. "If, after the bonus and the Government expenditures are taken care of we can see our way clear to change the tax laws, I am for a reasonable revision. First of all, I would take off all of the nuisance taxes, and this includes the levy now being made on theater admissions. I would also lower the

Made Available for Chicago Public—Individuals Limited to 10 Shares
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—The largest chain of picture theaters in Chicago, including the Chicago, Tivoli, Riviera, Central Park and Roosevelt, will become virtually a community possession under a plan announced by the Balaban & Katz Corp.

Through arrangements made with the Foreman Trust & Savings Bank, Sheridan Trust & Savings Bank and the Liberty Trust & Savings Bank, persons unfamiliar with stock markets will be able to acquire stock ownership on a partial payment plan.

Purchase will be limited to ten shares for each person, the stock to be bought on the Chicago Stock Exchange at the then prevailing price and held by the banks for the buyer until the final installment is paid a year later.

"The move is one to make the public's sentimental feeling of ownership in a large moving picture theater an actual one," said Barney Balaban. "It is not a case of raising money

Sees Duty On Film

In England—Prompted by Attitude of American Distributors Toward English Productions

"Al" Aronson of Truart just back from England reports that there is considerable discussion in English film circles of the probability of an ad valorem duty upon American productions shown in the British Empire.

"This state of affairs," says Aronson, "is due primarily to the fact that where American producers supply a great percentage of the film shown throughout the British Empire, English producers are beginning to believe that there is definite objection on the part of American distributors to presenting excellent British-made pictures in the United States."

Aronson maintains that among a number of British producers he found

The Reichenbach Circus Testimonial Dinner Proved a Most Enjoyable Event

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 250 of the most important film folk of the East—including a number of notable producers from the West, had a most enjoyable time Wednesday night at the Ritz, at the testimonial dinner tendered to Harry Reichenbach.

As was anticipated, there were a number of unusual interesting stunts which developed during the evening. The chief among these, was the appearance of the waiters garbed as policemen, ballet dancers, convicts and Bolsheviks.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Perhaps the most widely known of all ancient structures and one which most indelibly impresses itself upon the mind of the onlooker is the Colisseum at Rome, built in the year of 79 A. D. It seated eighty thousand people and was the scene of orgies of brutality, the like of which civilization has not known since its day.

The classic picture of its present state is shown above.

Tomorrow will follow more details of the Colisseum and the use made of it by George Fitzmaurice in the production "The Eternal City," presented by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures). —Advt.

New Exploitation Device

Something new along exploitation lines is being worked out by Hopp Hadley. It is a talking lamp which, in addition to giving light, tells the patrons all about "Scaramouche" and its run at the 44th St. theater. The lamp is gold plated with an elaborate silk shade, a new contrivance called the "Hadley Speaker." It is a phonograph arrangement with an electric motor. Hadley makes the records himself and hopes to have them on all big pictures in a short time. The idea is to sell or lease the speakers to theaters and furnish a service of special soft-spoken records.

Newspaper Opinions

"This Freedom"—Fox Central

AMERICAN—Not having read the novel, we cannot say whether it is a faithful adaptation, but from the general trend of the picture, one gathers it is. There are numerous mental struggles, frequent arguments, and debatable situations, all of which, though prolonged at times, are well done.

For the type of picture it is, and for the type of problem it presents, "This Freedom" is done with appreciable restraint. It is well acted, well handled and intelligently treated.

DAILY NEWS—"This Freedom" on the screen is a disgrace to its sister film, "If Winter Comes." You may like the picture. Indeed, we're not condemning it. It's as good as the average, but its predecessor was, oh, so much better!

EVENING JOURNAL—There lies the chief fault of the production, which is well acted and almost perfectly cast. It is too much of Mr. Hutchinson.

Miss Compton gives a pleasing performance and the youngsters in the picture are all little darlings.

MAIL—"A sincerely dramatic presentation of the facts in the case in a way that will stir every person who sees the film. Although without the driving power of "If Winter Comes," the last picture of the author to be seen here, "This Freedom" contains many elements which should insure it the well-deserved success of its predecessor.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The presentation of the story in pictorial form is lucid, logical and exact to a degree. It has been intelligently handled throughout; the scenes follow one another in a satisfying sequence, and the conclusion, while exceedingly melodramatic, is as Mr. Hutchinson wrote it.

From a point of intelligence and good sense in all departments, including the photography, it is to our knowledge the best picture turned out by the Fox organization.

SUN—"In all respects an absorbing picture. It creates, despite variations from actuality hereinafter to be noted, a persistent illusion of reality. And so for two hours the audience sat in rapt attention."

TELEGRAM—"It was indicated that the picture will create no less enthusiasm than the novel."

TIMES—"Denison Clift has had a hard tussle with the theme, and he has interspersed comedy to relieve the lugubriousness of the whole story, which is like "The Famous Mrs. Fair," unrelieved, however, by the picturesque atmosphere of that work."

"This Freedom" is a story interesting because of the Hutchinson phrasing and his original descriptions of persons and place. The settings of the picture are adequate, and the acting of the players is very good.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—From all intents and purposes it failed to impress the premiere gathering. But, as a picture, "This Freedom" revealed a tendency to become tedious through the lack of opportunities for action which inclines toward the opinion that if the story were excellent reading it has lost much in the migration to the screen.

"The Light That Failed"—F. P. L. Rialto

AMERICAN—But the action runs smoothly, and the actors, working under the handicap of bringing to the screen a novel of the force of "The Light That Failed," do as well as could be expected.

EVENING WORLD—"A fine picture version of a fine story. Our advice to all lovers of good pictures is to see it."

Excellent work is contributed by Percy Marmont, Sigrid Holmquist, David Torrence and Jacqueline Logan. The photography is exceptionally fine and the direction well-nigh faultless.

MAIL—This time it has a convincing atmosphere; is well played by a capable cast, and goes on to a happy ending to one unacquainted with Kipling's story if would appear authoritative and entertaining.

POST—"It does not lend itself well to the screen. This is not to say, however, that "The Light That Failed" at the Rialto this week is uninteresting. There are a number of most appealing scenes and it is by no means a dull affair."

TELEGRAM—"has been admirably adapted to the films, and is now retold as an absorbing "movie," full of heart interest."

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—"has messed up the original hopelessly and inexcusably. Somehow nothings right."

So as a picture the film at the Rialto has a good actress in Miss Logan and an excellent dog comedian in the immortal Binkie, done with some touch of greatness by an uncredited wiry pup. Otherwise it is routine picture production with its fate greatly in doubt.

TRIBUNE—They haven't put a happy ending on "The Light That Failed," as a matter of fact, they haven't put any ending on it, which is perhaps the best way.

Percy Marmont has a way of making you forget that he is Percy Marmont. Jacqueline Logan is starred. Miss Logan is delightful. David Torrence we like very much indeed as Torp.

WORLD—The picture is not conspicuously effective. Still, there are scenes in it which command admiration. It is not by any means all dull. It simply is not the big, pulsating, gripping drama which it seems to us it might have been.

"The Mailman"—F. B. O. Cameo

AMERICAN—The plot is melodramatic, the story develops as stories of that kind have developed ever since they were first written, but the entire cast means well.

EVENING JOURNAL—For years and years this writer has been laboring under the delusion that postal employees had fairly safe jobs—hard ones, it is true, but fraught with very little hazard. He bows his head meekly and admits that he has been wrong, for he has seen "The Mailman." Carrying and sorting mail, it develops, is a frightfully dangerous business.

EVENING WORLD—The film is a quiet affair and contains a post office robbery, a rum-running plot, the stealing of Government bonds and shows off the great Pacific Fleet just as true to life as though it were a news reel.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"The Mail Man," F. B. O.'s feature at the Cameo this week, is very good melodrama. The picture is good, in spite of certain things which strike one as being grotesque, such as The Fleet, ten dreadnoughts, chasing a 90-foot yacht. They sink her.

SUN—"People who enjoy motion pictures bristling with melodramatic thrills intermingled with pathos will undoubtedly get a lot of "kicks" out of "The Mailman."

None of the film tricks is overlooked, if our memory serves us faithfully in regard to screen presentations of the school we have previously seen.

TELEGRAM—Filmed on an even more elaborate scale than his previous productions, "The Mailman" ranks as the young producer's biggest production effort.

POST—"The Mailman" is full of thrills.

WORLD—Stirred into the propaganda is a fairly entertaining melodrama of rather crude materials.

Germany Disrupted

Market Gone, Wages High, Production at Low Ebb—Says Former Ufa Publicity Head

Fritz Jacobsohn, formerly director of publicity for the Ufa when that organization made pictures like "Deception," "One Arabian Night" and "Passion," is in New York from Berlin.

He paints a gloomy picture of Germany so far as production is concerned and declared that it was only in distribution and exhibition that his country cut any figure so far as motion pictures were concerned. The reason for this condition, he stated, was due to the inflated condition of the mark and the resultant unsettled economic conditions.

"The day when pictures could be made cheaply in Germany is gone," Jacobsohn states. "Paper marks no longer satisfy labor and help has to be paid on a gold mark basis. Everything concerned with pictures in Germany is inflated. Talk of high salaries paid to artists is the bunk. Henny Porten recently was paid $1,200 for her work in a complete production while Werner Krauss was credited with having closed an unusual deal when he secured $1,500 for one production.

"Ninety per cent of the pictures shown in Germany today are of American origin. I consider the heyday of the German industry gone. Conditions today can be likened to the pre-war period. During and immediately after the war, Germany made progress in the film industry but that is now gone. The market is American-controlled. Foreign buyers don't come to Germany any more because there is nothing in production to interest them. The laboratories in Germany have been hit because the Agfa persists in keeping up the price of raw stock in Germany at any rate.

"This has resulted in a situation where printing can be done on Kodak stock in Paris and in Turin for 40 per cent less than in Berlin. The situation is so bad that the artists are seeking foreign affiliations. Emil Jannings is doing Nero in "Quo Vadis?" which is being produced in Italy.

"There is practically no production under way at the moment because of the uncertain situation. The number of pictures that look important are few. There is an East Indian picture in which Paul Wegener is starred; there is one based on the life of Philip the Second of Spain which Richard Oswald is producing and which has Conrad Veidt in the cast and a third, "The Merchant of Venice," which has an unusual cast composed of Werner Krauss, Harry Liedtke and Henny Porten. Peter Paul Fellner produced it."

Jack Cosman, representative of Agfa in this country, could not be reached yesterday to comment on Jacobsohn's statement.

Bryant Washburn's next for Grand-Asher will probably be "Fogarty's Flivver," by Charles J. McGuirk.

Sees Duty On Film

a strong sentiment for the proposed ad valorem duty and said that it was not surprising in view of the failure of British producers to market their best grade of pictures in America.

"If several of the important leading American distributors were clever they would market the best of the British-made pictures regardless of whether or not they made money from these because of the money they are making through distributing American pictures in England. It would be good sound business."

While here recently several notables of the British film world discussed at length the difficulty of American distribution for British made pictures and indicated that in their opinion conditions were far from satisfactory. The Aronson statement of a possible ad valorem duty was not mentioned by any of them.

It is a fact, however that British producers are far from satisfied with the situation so far as American distribution goes.

rates on small incomes, but I think it is too early yet to make any definite statement."

"I want to see the reduction of taxes, and especially to get rid of the special taxes that everyone sees to be complaining about as soon as we can afford to do so," declared Representative James G. Strong, Kansas.

"I am in sympathy with the recommendations of Secretary of Treasury Mellon, particularly in reference to the repeal of the nuisance taxes," declared Representative T. B. Robinson, of Iowa. "I want to do away with as many as possible of those little special and nuisance taxes which are so irritating. Some of them do not produce enough to justify their continuance, and there are some that curtail business and interfere unfairly with those engaged in industry. I would like to see special taxes eliminated just as far as good business will permit."

Sees a Compromise

According to the Washington correspondent of the New York Times, a compromise on the Mellon proposal for tax reductions and consideration of such legislation as a non-partisan question appear necessary in the opinion of Republican leaders, who have completed an informal canvass of the attitude of members of Congress which convenes Monday.

Sentiment for tax reductions nationwide, the canvass shows, is so determined that revision is regarded as certain along lines affecting the greatest number of taxpayers. The canvass indicates that an overwhelming majority favors the Mellon suggestions for reducing normal tax on small taxpayers and a lower tax on earned than unearned incomes.

These are the only two points which are not subject to controversy. The others—applying the surtax $10,000 instead of $6,000 and lowering the highest surtax from 50 to 25 per cent, and the repeal of amusement and other nuisance taxes—run in the arena of dispute and have few supporters.

The public roars and the critics say ➡➡

"Score another bull's eye for James Cruze. The man who made 'The Covered Wagon' and 'Hollywood' again gives the public a picture about which they can go into ecstasies. As human, as different, as funny as the most jaded fan could ask for."

—N. Y. Journal.

"Fresh, keen, comic throughout. Far finer, wittier, more wholesome and more invigorating than most of the stuff you are seeing."

—N. Y. World.

"A dandy screen entertainment. Keen and brilliant and easily within the comprehension of the average motion picture fan."

—Times Square Daily.

"Surpasses the stage play. Excellent direction, skillful acting."

—N. Y. American.

Ego—Excessive love and thought of self. The habit of regarding one's self as the center of every interest.
 Ambition—To seek ambitiously or eagerly.—Webster.

This is not a winning hand although a straight. Yes—a straight hand to ruin and extravagance and the sheriff if played as though it were a "straight flush."

EGO

A certain amount of ego is all right and ambition is a great thing to possess; but there is a vast difference between "ego" and "ambition."

Legislative Outlook

For 1924 More Worrisome From Taxation Than Censorship—Many States Building Roads

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Washington — A man, probably posted better than any other in this country, relative to the national legislative situation, says:

"Motion picture people need have no great fear of what the various State legislatures will do to them so far as censorship is concerned, when these legislative bodies start meeting early next year. The Hays victory in Massachusetts on the censorship fight has had its effect. There will be sporadic efforts, however, in several states for censorship. The fight to repeal in New York State will again be on."

New Houses for Aschers

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Chicago—Ascher Bros. have taken over the North Central, Lincoln and Belle Plaine Ave. theaters for twenty-three years, beginning Jan. 1. The Aschers will operate it under the name of the North Center Theater Co. and have agreed to pay a percentage rental estimated to average $55,000 annually, or $1,100,000, and to spend $100,000 toward the interior decorations.

The North Central will have 2,500 seats, thus making it larger, by 300, than the West Englewood.

Deal On for "White Sister"

Marcus Loew is dickering with Charles H. Duell for the distribution of "The White Sister." The deal has not been definitely closed as yet.

The ego of some directors will only permit them to think in 7-8-9-10-11 (i. e. 7,000 8,000, 9,000-10,000-11,000 feet) and because some real director with a real story made a justifiable 9,000 foot picture, the ego (not ambition) made the second (great?) director feel it beneath his dignity to make anything less than 10,000 feet—and the third (great?) director's ego (not ambition) can then only think in 11,000 and 12,000 feet—because he believes that 11,000 or 12,000 feet—by its Length alone—stamps him superior to the first great director and the second (great?) director.

Whereas the first, or really great director, with ambition (not ego) tries to surpass his first effort, not in length but in quality

Now—

Mr. Exhibitor: Do you realize the millions of dollars this ego costs you?

Mr. Distributor: Do you realize the millions of dollars this ego costs you?

Mr. Producer: Do you realize the millions of dollars this ego costs you?

Mr. Ego Director: Do you realize that you are slowly but surely killing the "goose that lays the golden eggs?"

Mr. Exhibitor: Do you believe your patrons will continue to pay into your box offices good money to sit through a long drawn out padded feature, that cannot hold one's interest?

Mr. Distributor: Do you believe that the exhibitor can continue to pay you the prices you must get in order to survive, for a long drawn out padded feature that he cannot make money on, nor build up his patronage with?

Mr. Producer: Do you believe the distributor can continue to furnish you the money to produce long drawn out padded pictures—entailing consequent extravagance and waste?

Mr. Ego Director: Do you know that two recent great stage successes, first, "Lightnin" ran on Broadway, New York, 1921 performances; that the curtain went up at 8.20 P. M. and closed at 11.00, with two intermissions of 17 minutes each, making 2 hours and 23 minutes for the actual performance.

And that "The Bat" played on Broadway, New York, for two years and one week, the curtain going up at 8.30 P. M. and the performance over at 10.55 P. M. with two intermissions totaling 20 minutes, making the actual performance 2 hours and 5 minutes.

Do you believe they would have had these long and financially successful runs had they been padded and drawn out to 3 hours (nearly 12 reels) or more in running time? Of course, you don't.

Yet, would your ego permit you to transfer these two great proven successes to the screen under 11,000 or 12,000 feet in length?

Mr. Public: Do you enjoy and are you willing to continue paying to see and sit through a long drawn out padded feature? Answer: Not very much longer.

To You All: The two most popular books in the last few years are "Main Street" by Sinclair Lewis, and "If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson. No circulation figures are published but it is estimated that 350,000 copies of each have been sold. H. G. Wells' "Outline of History," has also probably sold about the same number.

Now, on the other hand, The Saturday Evening Post claim a weekly circulation of 2,410,964 copies. Do you believe that if from cover to cover the publishers ran only one long drawn out padded story, or even an interesting story, that the circulation would remain at 2,410,964 copies weekly? Of course not! Because the great majority of the public want diversified entertainment of a length that will hold their interest.

Mr. Exhibitor!
Mr. Distributor!
Mr. Producer!

Do these facts and figures mean anything to you? Can you see that the public is willing and anxious to pay for real entertainment—diversified entertainment—and sooner or later will pay for "Ego?"

Therefore, let us give real entertainment and save the millions of dollars being paid ego. Let all make money and the red figures into the black column. And, Mr. Ego Director, let us compel you to let live the "goose that lays the golden eggs."

TALKING TO TILLEY

Ever since Frank Tilley, editor of "Kine," left here last summer, he has been chattering. Especially since the shut down of what he said. And how he predicted it. And a few more ideas. Including a constant poke at what we had to say about his ideas. Patience is a virtue. We hope to be virtuous. One tires of mis-statements. Tilley's latest wearies. In his issue of Nov. 15 (just received) he comments on what appeared in THE FILM DAILY. And adds:

"But only last July, criticising what the Kine had said about production cost, Danny declared that our postulations regarding the cost of production were wrong, that the "great American Lie" was the judges, not us, and that he would "bet us anything in the world we were wrong." What about it now, Danny?

What about it? This:

What was said last July, Mr. Tilley, was that your charges of graft, incompetence, etc., were all wrong. What was said last July was that doubtless the American producer knew about what kind of pictures the American public wanted and you did, and that the public would give the answer. At that time it was admitted that production costs were too high.

But so that you will have no misunderstanding on that score we might add, with a degree of modesty, that last March (10 days before July), it was pointed out in this publication that production costs were so high that American producers had evidently overlooked that they were putting more in pictures for this year than had been taken in at the box office in the greatest business year we ever had.

Let's end this discussion once and for all. Excessive production costs are one thing. Charges of graft, incompetence, lack of understanding of what a public wants are distinct from another.

THE LATEST WHITE HOPE

Is Ralph Block, formerly of Famous and Goldwyn. Who is going to produce on his own. Here's hoping. If Ralph can't do it—fine. He is one of the few men—unfortunately there are a few of them—who should be able to help a lot in presenting the right kind of pictures. He has been charged with being a high-brow (whatever that means). But if his angle is a bit different, so much the better. Incidentally regarding the charge of being a high-brow says Block:

"Shakespeare was not a highbrow writer. 'He was the Cicerone and Belasco of his time.' The Greeks wrote of everyday life and Dickens' works have become classics because of their wit and humanness. And that is what we need in pictures—humanness—and this in turn will give us ART in productions."

MIGHTY FINE ADVICE

Says Carl Laemmle:

"Let's quit calling it a 'game' and thinking of it as a business. Let's think of it as one of the most solid institutions in the world of business. Let's talk of our pride in it and of our respect for it, and let's do so at every opportunity. * * *

"The Unknown Purple"

Producer: A. Carlos
Distributor: Truart—State Rights
Whole... REVENGE THEME

MYSTERY PLOT THAT WILL
KEEP BIG WITH THOSE WHO WANT TO BE KEPT GUESS-
ING; INTEREST VERY WELL MAINTAINED THROUGHOUT.
 ... Well balanced and with good performances on the parts of all; Harry B. Walthall splendid as the worker of "The Unknown Purple"; Alice Lake admirable as the faithless wife and Stuart Holmes a reliable villain; Helen Ferguson, Frankie E. Kelly, Ethel Grey Terry.
Type of Story.... Mystery drama; on the stage play of the same name. Story starts off as popular sensational triangle but develops into elaborate mystery story in which unknown person who signs himself "The Unknown Purple", appears to have unlimited powers and operates in an invisible manner through the means of a powerful invisible ray. This element of the story is worked in with increased interest and it proves, as it promises, to be thoroughly absorbing for the most part, mystifying, though never baffling. The director has succeeded in keeping the spectator just enough in the dark to make him wondering what will happen next. There is considerable mystery not explained, such as how the mystery man succeeded in winning the prominence indicated upon his introduction as Victor Crompton. The last the spectator saw of him previously he was behind prison bars. There is a big gap here and a little too much left to the imagination.
Box Office Angle.... For the lovers of mystery drama, thrills and chills, you couldn't offer them anything more satisfying than "The Unknown Purple." Tell them they will see something rather unusual—mystery plots.
Exploitation.... Play up the title and the nature of the story. Tell them the theme is taken from the stage play. Your initial advertising might be more effective if done in teaser fashion. Post ads reading "Have you felt the influence of the unknown purple," "Watch for the unknown purple," etc. Here, the searchlight stunt would be highly appropriate. Flood the sky with purple lights following the exhibition of the proper teaser signs. Change marks in purple will excite curiosity, also. Play up the names of the more prominent members of the cast, especially Henry Walthall, Alice Lake, Stuart Holmes.

"The Day Of Faith"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

FAIRLY CONVINCING BUT NOT LIKELY TO PROVE A
CONCLUSIVE ARGUMENT TO

TION.
Cast.... Very good with long list of capable players such as Eleanor Boardman, Tyrone Power, Raymond Griffith, Wallace MacDonald, Ford Sterling, Ruby Lafayette, Edward Martindel, Winter Hall, Emmett King.
Type of Story.... From Arthur Somers Roche's novel. A rather new angle on the faith theme that is at times rather convincing and very well done although not always conclusive in its argument. The "My neighbor is perfect" theory may look very good on the screen and, according to Mr. Roche, it can be effectively applied to a variety of cases, and in each case as he shows it, successfully, but it isn't likely that the majority of picture goers are going to accept the author's verdict as final. Mob violence occurs twice throughout the picture and although the story appears to transpire in a locale apparently under police jurisdiction, there is no punishment meted out to those who attack and kill two of the "My neighbor is perfect" advocates. There are loopholes and flaws that can be found in the story but those sincerely interested in these new "faith" themes, may find the picture wholly interesting. Strictly it is not entertainment.
Box Office Angle.... A problem play that will appeal to those who like stories that give them something to think or argue about. Not a picture to entertain the average public.
Exploitation.... You'll have to decide this one for yourself. You know best whether you can satisfy your folks with a theme such as this. You might possibly interest local "faith" followers in cooperating with you to interest folks in the film. In this connection it might be well to hold a previous showing for ministers, educators, etc. and get their ideas on it. Play up the names of those in the cast, particularly Eleanor Boardman, Tyrone Power and Raymond Griffith. The title can be used effectively with catchlines such as: "What is 'The Day of Faith'? Find the answer at the blank theater." Mention the author's name.
Direction.... Tod Browning; injected a few good comedy touches, more of which would have been a big help.
Author.... Arthur Somers Roche
Scenario.... June Mathis and Katherine Kavanaugh
Cameraman.... William Fildew

B. P. Schulberg presents "Maytime"

Preferred Pictures Corp.
As a Whole.... PRETTY PRO- DUCTION GIVEN STAGE
PLAY. PICTURE NEEDS
GREAT AMOUNT OF CUT-
TING, ESPECIALLY IN FIRST
HALF, TO SPEED IT UP.
Cast.... Could have been a whole lot better. Everyone tries very hard but they are not the best types for the parts. Ethel Shannon sincere in her effort and at times attractive although her make-up is not good. Harrison Ford a fair hero. William Norris plays the same role which he had in the stage play, that of the gay old Matthew. Others Clara Bow, Wallace MacDonald, Josef Swickard, Martha Mattox, Betty Francisco, Robert McKim.
Type of Story.... From the musical comedy. Offers a pleasing romance that might have been made much more interesting if they hadn't used so much footage in telling it. The picture, at that, can be greatly benefited by liberal cutting. The first half, dealing with the early part of the last century, drags badly. Generous eliminations in this part will speed up the story considerably and give it a sustained interest. The production is very good and Gasnier has not been sparing in injecting the proper atmosphere. It has splendid pictorial appeal. The theme deals with the love of a rich girl for the gardener's son but her father forces a marriage of his own choice. Years later the grandchildren of the two marry. The modern jazz sequence is a trifle gaudy, and the flaunting of a vulgarly attired fat girl before the camera is very poor taste.
Box Office Angle.... Very likely the popularity of the stage play will be a big asset for the picture bearing the same title. You have enough to talk about, and properly presented, with the score from the play, it should prove satisfying entertainment.
Exploitation.... Be sure to let them know that the picture is an adaptation of the stage play. Play up the title and get your local broadcasting stations to offer selections from "Maytime" prior to the showing and from the screen tell your folks about it. The theme song lends itself readily to ideas that will be appropriate for the holiday season. Have a jeweler display a copy of the song and a sign reading: "What will you buy your Sweetheart for Christmas." Other tie-ups will be equally effective. Your girls in old fashioned costumes will attract attention also Direction.... Gasnier; good in every way except that he used far too much footage.
Author.... Rider Johnson Young
Scenario.... Olga Printzlau
Cameraman.... Karl Struss
Photography.... Very good
Locale.... New York
Length.... 7,500 feet.

"To The Ladies"

Paramount
As a Whole.... ADAPTATION OF STAGE PLAY MAKES WHOL-
LY DELIGHTFUL COMEDY
ENTERTAINMENT; GOOD
WHOLESOME AMUSEMENT.
Cast.... Ideal types all the way through. The cast has been carefully selected as to appropriate players for the various roles, and filled by performers of no little ability such as Edward Horton, rapidly coming to the front as an Al comedian; he's great as Leonard Beebe, the backward office clerk hero; Helen Jerome Eddy excellent as his alert young wife; Theodore Roberts just himself and naturally amusing.
Type of Story.... Comedy drama with the humorous business uppermost. Here's a genuinely pleasing comedy entertainment. The kind that is conspicuous because there aren't half enough of them. You could keep on applying adjectives and then not overdo it.
 The theme has originality, novelty and a wholesomeness that makes it especially pleasing. Plus James Cruze direction, a cast already highly commended, you have a right fine entertainment. The laughs are all sure-fire, real and make their mark. There hasn't been anything much funnier than the banquet for which hero Ed Horton rehearses his grand speech, that is to make a lasting impression upon his employer, only to be shocked dumb to find that his fellow worker has memorized the same speech. How his wife comes to the rescue is the reason for "To the Ladies."
Box Office Angle.... Get this one without fail. You don't get the chance, half often enough, to give your folks a wholesome comedy entertainment such as this. Count on their going out delighted.
Exploitation.... Do your best to bring them in. You have a good title to work with. Play it up extensively. Inaugurate a "Ladies Day," or if you use the picture for a run, a "Ladies Week" at your theater. Run catchlines in your programs reading: "Husbands Attention! Do you appreciate your wives? Bring her to the blank theater to see "To the Ladies."
 Theodore Roberts plays the role of a piano manufacturer. You might arrange tie-ups with music shops or piano dealers. Be sure to give the members of the cast the credit they deserve. And of course don't fail to mention James Cruze, recalling his "Hollywood," "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "The Covered Wagon."
Direction.... James Cruze; Splendid in every way. Certainly puts the comedy over.
Authors.... Marc Connelly and Geo. S. Kaufman
Scenario.... Walter Woods
Cameraman.... Karl Brown
Photography.... Good
Locale.... Any town

As a Whole.....STORY NOT STRIKING BUT SERVES SPLENDIDLY FOR THE SORT OF THING THAT MAE MURRAY LIKES TO DO. PRODUCTION ARTISTIC AND ATMOSPHERE INTERESTING.

Star.....Cavorts about in spangles and feathers, puckering her lips for close-ups, and generally displaying plenty of temperament; has a chance to do some real acting in latter reels and does it well.

Cast....Elmo Lincoln's the most outstanding performance, that of an evil Russian. Earle Foxe struggles through a role that's too much for him; Freeman Wood but fair lead for star.

Type of Story....Drama dealing with the effort of Russian peasant girl to retain the disguise of a princess which wins for her the admiration of New York and a rich husband. A dual role in which Miss Murray plays the part of her own younger sister is by far the feature's most interesting sequence and provides for effective emotional acting on her part, wherein she sacrifices herself for the younger girl by protecting her from the Russian brute. The earlier sequences of the story are of a more frivolous nature. They are devoted chiefly to exploiting Miss Murray as the stage idol and giving her a chance to play around at the sort of things she seems to glory in. But toward the close, where she appears as the younger sister, Zita, Miss Murray is far more interesting and shows what she really can do in a dramatic way.

Box Office Angle... You should know best how the star and her productions draw. If her name brings them in, you can rely upon "Fashion Row" to satisfy.

Exploitation.... The star's name and the title of her latest release can be given good prominence. Display a variety of stills in the lobby to indicate the atmosphere. You can promise a picture that is very good to look at. The production is quite artistic. Let them know, through a trailer, of the star's dual role, showing her both as the stage favorite and as the little Russian peasant. A fashion show will link up splendidly with the title. Tie-ups with costume shops and the like would also prove effective. Living models, displaying the latest fashions, in a local department store window, would attract considerable attention. A sign could read: "Let Mae Murray show you the latest in gowns in 'Fashion Row' at the blank theater." Count on this to get the women.

Direction.... Robert Z. Leonard; supplied artistic production and made good use of material except that he devoted too much footage to early sequence.

Authors .. Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin

Scenario ..... The same
Cameraman ..... Oliver T. Marsh
Photography ..... Very good
Locale ..... Russia-New York
Length ..... 7,300 feet.

"The Mailman"

Film Booking Offices

As a Whole....HIGHLY SENTIMENTAL THEME WITH PATHOS AND GENERAL HEART INTEREST PREDOMINATING; COINCIDENCE THE CHIEF FACTOR IN PLOT DEVELOPMENT.

Cast....Ralph Lewis again a public servant, the hero of a tale which exploits the chivalry and poorly recompensed postal service employee; Lewis a capable actor and well able to put the role over convincingly; Johnnie Walker once more his screen son. Others, Virginia True Boardman, Martha Sleeper, an over vivacious youngster, Josephine Adair.

Type of Story.... Drama; written obviously to appeal for its heart interest bits and home influence; one can hardly understand why the kindly Bob Marley should meet with such misfortunes when his big heartedness runs from picking up stray dogs on rainy nights to buying a doll for a little crippled girl whose father neglects her, and, incidentally is the cause of Morley's frequent misfortunes. The kindly Morley doesn't expose the man, however, for the child's sake. The story is richly sentimental. It gushes with it. Probably these themes go big with a certain type of patronage,—those who can weep readily and extend their deepest sympathy to the mailman hero. It's pretty far-fetched and far too convenient in its development to actually retain a semblance of reality, however. Of course the melodramatic events such as the midnight hold-up, the registered mail theft, the threatened death penalty to hero's son, the last minute confession, etc.—it all amounts to big appeal for the right audience.

Box Office Angle..... These Emory Johnson productions are all about on the same order. If you have played any of his previous releases, "The Westbound Limited," "The Third Alarm," "In the Name of the Law," etc. in which Ralph Lewis and Johnnie Walker both appeared, and found that they were successful, you can go right to it on this one. They are box office attractions of their own class.

Exploitation.... Should be rather simple. You should readily be able to secure the cooperation of your local force. Have a postal employee's night and offer prizes. Men in mail uniform can do a house to house canvass in distributing throw-aways. Anything in the way of postal tie-ups will be particularly effective exploitation. Use your mailing list for this one. Boost the title and the names of Ralph Lewis and Johnnie Walker. A trailer of some of the more exciting moments will also get them interested.

Direction Emory Johnson; usually quite all right although coincidence in development might have been made to appear less obvious.

Author ..... Mrs. Emilie Johnson
Scenario ..... Mrs. Emilie Johnson
Cameraman ..... Ross Fisher

Locale ..... Anywhere
Length ..... 7,160 feet.

Gladys Walton in "The Near Lady"

Universal

As a Whole.... STARTS OUT TO BE A GREAT COMEDY BUT LAGS INTO ORDINARY SLAPSTICK HOKUM THAT'S QUITE FAMILIAR. WILL PLEASE WHERE THEY LIKE THIS LOW-BROW HIGH-BROW MIXTURE.

Star.... Well suited and will please her admirers; has the sort of role that she knows how to play and does it very well.

Cast..... Good types and capable; Kate Price and Otis Harlan good as star's Irish mother and German father respectively; Jerry Gendron a fair Valentino variety of hero; others Harry Mann' Florence Drew, Emmett King and Henrietta Floyd.

Type of Story..... Comedy drama with the latter element not prominent. Not altogether a poor story even though the idea has been used before. Starts out to be a fine comedy number, with the initial situation clever and funny. The first reel promises a lot of things that the next four fail to fulfill. They should have kept up the starting pace but instead of keeping the heroine a poor manicurist and allowing her to carry on a flirtation with the son of the rich Van Bibbers, they have her father become a millionaire through his "hot-dog" invention. From this point on there is a comedy combination in which the would-be rich Schultzs try to attain the social level of the rich Van Bibbers. Of course there are laughs in it and it will probably be considered first rate amusement but the opening reel promises such a genuinely original and amusing story that they are apt to be a bit disappointed.

Box Office Angle..... An average audience and the general "fan" crowd will probably concede this to be a good entertainment. They'll enjoy the attempts of Mr. and Mrs. Schultz to climb the social ladder. Your flapper contingent will be thrilled by the romance of Nora Schultz,—Gladys Walton.

Exploitation..... If Gladys Walton is popular with your folks, play up her name prominently and the title of her latest release. Use catchlines such as "When is a lady only 'A Near Lady,'" or, "Fine feathers make fine birds. See Gladys Walton in 'The Near Lady' and you'll know why". Arrange a tie-up with local beauty shops. The star plays the part of a manicurist so a sign might read: "Don't be a near lady. Come in and let us tell you why." Have the shop keeper hand out throw-aways regarding the showing. Other tie-ups can be arranged to exploit the picture, such as a sport goods store display with golf paraphernalia.

Direction..... Herbert Blache; too bad he couldn't have held the starting pace.

Author ..... Frank R. Adams
Scenario ..... Hugh Hoffman
Cameraman ..... Wm. Thornley
Photography ..... All right
Locale ..... Any city
Length ..... 4,818 feet.

"The Light That Failed"

Paramount

As a Whole..... PICTURIZATION OF KIPLING'S STORY OFFERS SEVERAL GOOD DYNAMIC SITUATIONS BUT OTHERWISE IS A VERY DRAGGY THEME, NOT LIKELY TO HOLD THEM.

Cast..... A good one with several capable performers contribute their best efforts to make the picture a success but slow moving story too big a handicap. Percy Marmont effective as the blind artist Sigrid Holmquist a pretty here and Jacqueline Logan an interesting London street girl; David Torrence the fourth in a first quartette.

Type of Story.... Dramatic offering in which great artist strives to complete a masterpiece that will prove him worthy of a certain girl's love before blindness overtakes him; his success and the destruction of his picture at the hands of a vengeful girl who believes the artist responsible for her lost happiness. The early part of the picture moves along at a satisfactory pace and the theme is absorbing in dramatic quality and reaches a high spot in the spectacular ruining of hero's masterpiece. But from that point on, consisting of the artist's affliction, his agony upon the declaration of war and the realization that he cannot be a part of it, well as the breach between him and the girl he loves, the story drags tediously to the very end. Cuts would help. There is little action incident to warrant the extensive footage accorded these latter sequences.

Box Office Angle.... Will best please those favoring dramatic entertainments although the slow moving story may spoil this one for the general public. There is a good production and several interesting performances counteract it, on the other hand.

Exploitation.... You have the title one of Kipling's best known works. Play it up prominently and arrange a tie-up with book stores. Have them display copies of the book and see that your announcement appears in conjunction with the picture. Catchlines might read: "The story of a great love, a famous artist and a great masterpiece ruined by a revengeful girl. See Paramount's picturization of Rudyard Kipling's novel 'The Light That Failed.'" Suggested street signs are one, that of a blind man going about with a placard reading "The Light That Failed," extinguished years ago, has been a blessing to me." Or, A man garbed as an Arab or Egyptian, riding about carrying a banner bearing the title of the picture.

Direction..... George Melford; production good but development much too slow.

Author ..... Rudyard Kipling
Scenario ..... F. McGrew Willis and Jack Cunningham
Cameraman ..... Charles G. Clarke
Photography ..... Good
Locale ..... Sudan and England
Length ..... 7,031 feet.

The Man from Brodney's

Vitagraph

Whole... RICH IN EXCITEMENT AND ROMANCE. ADAPTED FROM GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S NOVEL, ONE OF HIS TYPICAL MYTHICAL KINGDOM ACTION THEMES. WILL THRILL THE MAJORITY.

... Exceptionally strong cast. Warren Kerrigan has a fighting edge of it in the title role; does very good work. Alice Calhoun, Wanda Hawley and Miss Dunlop a first rate feminine trio and others include Pat O'Malley, Bert Grassby, Kathleen Key.

Type of Story... Includes all the sensations and elements of appeal that usually make for a good audience picture. As such "The Man from Brodney's" should satisfy the office. Director Smith has supplied the McCutcheon novel with a thoroughly painstaking and exciting picturization. He hasn't been stingy in injecting realism and thrills. The picture offers a genuinely good entertainment for the larger majority of the picture going public. What a more critical crowd may think, probably won't bother exhibitors very much. If it pleases those they cater to, on the whole, that's all they have to worry about. Of course, these mythical kingdom plots, are always more or less far-fetched and artificial. But there is no denying that director Smith has made a very exciting film. The climax is thrilling and you know you can't go wrong when they bring in a patriotic touch by rushing the U. S. Marines to the American's assistance. The introductory sequences could be much shorter.

Box Office Angle... Action, romance, adventure, thrills, an American hero in a foreign port fighting the waves and dangerously near being conquered when the marines arrive to save him all very good office material. You know how this draws them.

Exploitation... Plenty for you to talk about here. Play up the title and the author's name. Get stores to display copies of the book and announce a George Barr McCutcheon week. Talk about the action and use a trailer showing the marines arriving to aid the American hero. Depend upon this for stirring them back, for one thing. Decorate the lobby with stills and posters, all of which will indicate the action contained in the picture. Play up the names in the cast. There are a number of important names here that will stand advertising, particularly J. Warren Kerrigan. Refer to the production. Director Smith has done things on a rather large scale.

Direction... David Smith; certainly injected plenty of excitement and thrills.
Author... George Barr McCutcheon
Scenario... C. Graham Baker
Cameraman... Steve Smith, Jr.
Photography... Good
Locale... England-Mythical island
Length... 7,156 feet.

"Crooked Alley"

Universal

As a Whole... VERY TRITE CROOK STORY, ONE OF THE BOSTON BLACKIE NUMBERS, BUT CONSIDERABLY WEAKER THAN MOST OF THEM. RATHER POOR DIRECTION AT TIMES KEEPS STORY FROM BECOMING INTERESTING.

Cast... Laura La Plante pretty but role doesn't give her opportunity to be anything else. Thomas Carrigan does a lot of emoting that looks conspicuously unreal. Owen Gorine, a newcomer, who takes himself far too seriously, to the extent that his playing becomes comical. His posture is especially awkward.

Type of Story... Crook story with revenge the keynote. Girl appeals to judge to allow her father, a criminal, to die at home instead of in prison. He refuses and the man who loves the girl plans an elaborate revenge: having the judge's son fall in love with the girl and steal for her. How the cleverness of the son prevents the carrying out of the scheme, ends matters amicably for all hands.

It is a trite plot that never gets away from the beaten path. You know from the start just what to expect, and each step in the development is anticipated. The only real saving grace is a fair surprise twist in the climax when the son discloses that he has realized he was being trapped but allowed the scheme to proceed in order to carry out his own plan. This the director has succeeded in bringing in unexpectedly.

Box Office Angle... About an average feature that will give moderate satisfaction. Can be used adequately for a daily change program and in conjunction with attractive short subjects.

Exploitation... The fact that this is a Boston Blackie story gives you something to work on. Your men and boy patrons will be interested if you tell them this. The picture doesn't deserve special exploitation for the theme, however, because they've seen much better Jack Boyle stories than this. It was adapted from his "The Daughter of Crooked Alley."

Use catchlines: "She sought revenge but found love in 'Crooked Alley.'" Street signs bearing the title and with an arrow pointing in the direction of your theater should attract attention. Use stills of Laura La Plante. She's pretty and your folks will see more of her in coming Universal pictures.

Direction... Robert Hill, fair; hasn't always used the best judgment; some scenes are very awkwardly done.

Author... Jack Boyle
Scenario... Adrian Johnson
Cameraman... Harry Fowler
Photography... All right
Locale... San Francisco
Length... 4,900 feet

"You Are In Danger"

Blair Coan—State Rights

As a Whole... AVERAGE FEATURE WITH FAIRLY CONVENTIONAL STORY AND SMALL AMOUNT OF AUDIENCE APPEAL; WILL SUFFICE AS PASTIME WHERE THEY ARE NOT CRITICAL OR PARTICULARLY EXACTING.

Cast... Well suited and capable; includes fairly prominent names. James Morrison good hero with Mitchell Lewis satisfactory villain. Pauline Starke heroine and Carmel Myers appropriate type as Lewis' opium peddling accomplice.

Type of Story... Melodrama dealing with drug peddling and implicating innocent country lad who comes to the city to make good. Instead his innocent face makes him a suitable tool for the distributing of opium and once in the power of the ring leader he's forced to obey or "be thrown to the wolves." Of course there's the usual happy ending with hero breaking away from villain's influence, the latter's death at the hands of his woman accomplice and hero's reunion with the little country girl.

It's pretty conventional and at no time does the story strike off the beaten path. There's a seance sequence in which hero eventually discloses the fake operations of the medium. This angle may interest picture goers. They're always more or less engrossed in exposures of spiritualists and mediums but there isn't very much of this so the picture can't be played up as an exposure of the workings of mediums. Nor is the dope peddling angle one especially worthy of serious consideration.

Box Office Angle... Doubtful; picture may do on double feature program or with good selection of short subjects. It will not satisfy an audience at all critical. The story is poor and the production without any highlights. And there is little to interest them in except some good names in the cast.

Exploitation... You can't go very far on exploiting this one since there is little in either story or production to warrant your talking about it. Use the names of James Morrison, Pauline Starke, Mitchell Lewis and Carmel Myers. If you think you number enough sensation seekers among your clientele, it's probable they'd come in if you talk about a story dealing with dope peddling, of a country hero roped in and the small town heroine who saves him.

Direction by... W. S. Van Dyke; made no great effort to cover up shortcomings of plot; handled cast to pretty fair advantage.

Author... Louis Weadock
Scenario... Doris Schroeder
Cameraman... Andre Barlatier
Photography... Lighting poor
Locale... Any city
Length... About 5,000 feet.

Short Subjects

"Shadows"—Max Fleischer—Out of the Inkwell Films
Diverting, Delightful

Type of production... 1 reel animated cartoon

Once again the imp from the inkwell becomes involved, this time with the shadows of his own figure. The result is a completely different set of difficulties, chiefly the result of Fleischer's making silhouettes of animals with his figures. These animals annoy the imp and trouble him to such an extent that finally after being chased and crushed he becomes so bewildered that he is glad to jump back into the inkwell. Very laughable, very amusing.

"Scorching Sands"—Hal Roach—Pathe

Burlesques Desert Stuff

Type of production... 1 reel comedy

Stan Laurel takes a stab at the many and varied specimens of the "Desert" pictures, well-known to picture goers of all classes and ages in "Scorching Sands." And it contains some very amusing stuff. Laurel is a guide who wears a fur coat on the desert to keep the heat out. He is guiding James Finlayson, a tourist over the desert and they fall by accident into the hands of a native sheik. After some amusing experiences they finally escape with a pretty blonde also captured by the tribe. Will amuse.

"Wild and Woolly"—Grantland Rice—Pathe

Great Stuff for Men

Type of production... 1 reel sport review

This is the first of a series of subjects called "Sportlights" by Grantland Rice being released by Pathe. It depicts a western rodeo and shows the manner in which wild horses, cows, bronchos, etc. are ridden by the cowboys. Shots of the audience which is composed mainly of Indians and western types are interspersed and provide interesting contrasts. The riding, roping, etc. will furnish thrills galore. This is a reel that will appeal particularly to the men folks.

"Kidding Kate"—Christie—Educa'l
Plenty of Good, Clean Fun

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Dorothy Devore, Babe London and Jimmie Harrison make this comedy bright and amusing, being particularly well-suited to their respective roles. The plot is not particularly novel, but the way in which it is handled makes it entirely enjoyable. Babe London, is the older sister and far too fat for beauty. She, however, is in love with Jimmie who has not seen the family for years. She sends him her sister's picture and then tries to reduce before he comes to marry her. Alas, he comes too soon, so in desperation she makes her sister wear little girl's clothes and bows on her hair. Should please the majority.

by Emerson

Indians, Soldiers, Settlers, Wagon Trains, Battles, Escapes
Love and Adventure in the Stirring Days of '47!!!

No finer, more stirring and colorful story was ever put into a picture than this great work by Emerson Hough

It takes you from a "before the war" fine old Southern plantation out to the mountains and plains of the West that was a howling wilderness. You see startling attacks by Apaches upon the wagon trains of the settlers; you see battles between the Indians and the blue-coat soldiers; you see the Gold Rush; you see a heroine as brave as she is beautiful and a hero who has to go through blood and fire before he can call her his own!

"The Country Kid"—Warner's California, Frisco

BULLETIN—Not since Barry used to appear as the little freckled-faced youngster on the screen has he appeared in a vehicle so wholesomely entertained as this. * * *

CALL—It is without a doubt a role which suits his peculiar talents more appropriately than any other characterization he has portrayed.

CHRONICLE—"The Country Kid" has a good little story, plain and simple, and just the least bit touching.

EXAMINER—Supplied with suitable material, Barry should continue to interest the public indefinitely.

I never have enthused over this youthful actor's "genius." But in "The Country Kid" it has to be handed to him that he not only put himself over the top, but saves a mediocre stereotyped story from completely flopping.

NEWS—"The Country Kid" is a plethora of sentimentality and bathos that should pluck the heartstrings of lovers of Oliver Optic and Horatio Alger and the dear old melodramas of the type of "Human Hearts."

"The Courtship of Myles Standish"— Asso. Exhibitors President, Washington

HERALD—Tremendously thrilling sea scenes that make one wonder how they ever were taken are among the many big features of Charles Ray's great new film. * * *

STAR—The photography is good, the acting is good and the story-making material is good, but there seems lacking an indefinable something which keeps the picture from taking its place as third in the list of super-productions depicting historical American events. As an ordinary motion picture it can be classed as among the best. * * *

TIMES—* * * Charles Ray has in "The Courtship of Myles Standish" placed both his own name and that of his production in the very first rank of the cinema brigade. * * * No finer photography, no better directing, no more capable cast, has been seen in Washington in a long time. Added to the perfect performance of the star is the satisfying work of Enid Bennett as his foil. * * *

"The Covered Wagon"—F. P.-L. Metropolitan, St. Paul

PIONEER-PRESS—"The Covered Wagon" is a big picture and a good picture. * * * Many wonderful "shots" make the film photographically memorable, too.

"Daughters of the Rich"—Preferred Victoria, Rochester

HERALD—Elaborately produced and expertly directed. * * * Forcefully depicts a melodramatic story in so convincing a manner as to keep even the blasé theater-goer on edge and wondering what will come next.

"Enemies of Women"—Gold- Cosmop.

Mr. Smith's, Indianapolis

STAR—What Ibanez's story may have lacked in savoriness has been more than amply made up for through the settings of Josef Urban and the acting of John Barrymore in "Enemies of Women."

TIMES—This story is one of those strange continental affairs of which Ibanez writes with such individual effect.

The picture has been well directed and presented. Much natural scenery has been used. When I first reviewed this picture I found it interesting, both from a story standpoint as well as scenic.

"The Eternal City"—1st Nat'l Eastman, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—Well cast, well directed, scenically beautiful but, as to adaptation, a far cry from the original Hall Caine story. * * * Barbara La Marr, the Donna Roma of the screen story, is especially satisfying. * * * The most memorable feature of the production is the incomparable beauty of the settings in and about Rome.

HERALD—The picture is an education in itself, it is an authentication of all the prints, models and pictures one has ever seen of the ancient city and brings to actuality. * * *

The picture, as a whole, is somewhat of a disappointment. Remarkable from the pictorial point of view, and extremely well photographed, it misses fire in the excellency of its drama. * * * Barbara La Marr, as Donna Roma, does splendid work. But Bert Lytell, well Lytell is just a little overly dramatic.

JOURNAL—This fidelity to actual settings is one of the most pleasing features of the picture. * * * Hall Caine's novel has been considerably modernized. It has, in fact, only the skeleton love story of the novel remains and at least one half of it is devoted to the struggle between the Reds and the Fascisti. * * *

The cast is ever so competent, with the beautiful Barbara La Marr earning stellar honors as Roma Lionel Barrymore, as always, gives a suave and finished performance and Bert Lytell is surprisingly good as David.

TIMES-UNION—* * * may be ranked as a mechanically perfect picture. The photography, the beautiful settings of the scenes that we see made in and about Rome, the interiors, which have a rich harmoniousness and verity seldom seen in film productions, and the spontaneity of the various mob scenes scarcely could be bettered. But, to this reviewer at any rate, it is a picture without a soul, and leaves no other impression than that of a series of beautiful scenes. * * *

This lack in the leading woman is the more to be regretted since the men in the cast are uniformly excellent.

"The Eternal Struggle"—Metro Regent, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—Melodrama made realistic and credible by the acting of Renee Adoree in the leading feminine role and the members of her excellent supporting cast lifts the photoplay. "The Eternal Struggle" out of the commonplace and makes it a noteworthy production.

HERALD—"The Eternal Struggle" is the usual North country story with the added spice of Renee Adoree in the feminine lead. Pat O'Malley as Bucky O'Hara, of the Northwest Mounted, who plays his part with a rather keen humor.

TIMES-UNION—The film is well worth seeing despite some lapses into sentimentality and triteness, which lie rather in the captions than in the action. Renee Adoree is altogether charming. * * *

"The Eternal Three"—Gold- Cosmop.

Newman, Kansas City

POST—If you like daring subjects artistically handled with a beautiful woman mixed up in them, go to the Newman this week. "The Eternal Three" is a strong dramatic story. * * *

Strand, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—And Neilan sets forth his tale with a wealth of circumstantial detail, with an occasional flash of the charming Neilan whimsy—with, also some little bathos, but less than in his recent efforts.

It is a better knit tale than he has achieved in some time.

"The Exile"—Fox Rialto, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—John Gilbert makes the most of the exacting role of Holcombe, which calls for physical prowess as well.

"The Fighting Blade"—1st Nat'l Metropolitan, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—An excellent story, notably directed, perfectly acted, with settings of beauty and dignity and with historically correct. "The Fighting Blade" takes rank with * * * "The Bright Shawl."

Orpheum, Detroit

NEWS—Richard Barthelmess takes another plunge into the costume waters and proves that he can buckle a sword with the best of them.

"Flaming Youth"—1st Nat'l Rivoli, Baltimore

NEWS—I must report that while "Flaming Youth" is an interesting photoplay there is nothing naughty in it. * * *

While inclined to be episodic "Flaming Youth" is another picture of merit. Colleen Moore, in the part of Patricia, does the best work I have ever seen her do.

SUN (Evening)—Colleen Moore does the best work of her career. We've never liked her, but we do now. * * * She's very fine. The rest of the cast is uniformly good. * * * The picture is mounted lavishly.

State, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—Miss Moore is a genuinely fine Pat—just as long as the film permits her to be. Then both Miss Moore and the film get as stupid "as sin"; finally a form of religion is brought in to close the film drama. * * * Somebody has haggled the film. It is not smooth. Some of the titles are as dull and uninteresting as a week old newspaper.

Strand, Milwaukee

JOURNAL—* * * Whatever it was in literary form, becomes a right good picture when translated to the screen. * * *

"The French Doll"—Metro Crystal, Indianapolis

STAR—This new Robert Z. Leonard production is one of the most diverting pictures Miss Murray has made and her dancing is kept within bounds.

"Going Up"—Asso. Exhibitors State, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—"Going Up" is the best thing Douglas MacLean has done since the well nigh immortal "Twenty-Three and a Half Hours Leave." It is a more finished comedy than "The Hottentot."

"The Gold Diggers"—Warners' Ohio, Indianapolis

STAR—Hope Hampton in the role of Jerry Lamar has been properly cast for the first time within memory. * * *

This is a really diverting comedy, with loads of good fun and amusing subtitles.

TIMES—It is just as good fun on the screen, and that is saying a great deal, because the story is a hard one to film.

"The Green Goddess"—Gold- Cosmop. Capitol, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—* * * A melodrama, but it is as different from old-fashioned melodrama as a hut in Borneo is from a mansion on 5th Ave. * * * Practically every detail of the stage play by William Archer has been preserved, and in the matter of settings and atmospheric effects, the movie version is an improvement on the original, owing to the wider latitude of the silent drama.

POST—In "The Green Goddess, * * * Arliss, as usual, is superb. His pantomime is wonderful, and no actor, on screen or stage, can make a gesture, a lift of the eyebrow, a movement of the lips mean more. * * *

There are many thrills. The Indian atmosphere and sets are splendid.

"If Winter Comes"—Fox Walnut, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—As free from exaggeration as it is possible for a photodrama to be without becoming tedious, "If Winter Comes" is a singularly thought-provoking and soul-stirring motion picture.

Alhambra, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—William Fox has achieved the almost impossible. He has given the screen not only a beautiful but a faithful adaptation of a novel. And such a novel!

"In the Palace of the King"—Gold-Cosmop. Century, Baltimore

SUN (Evening)—"In the Palace of the King" is the logical successor to "Robin Hood" from a spectacular point of view. If Doug Fairbanks' picture didn't knock your eye completely out, the film at the Century will finish the job. * * * Emmett Flynn has done well. * * * The cast is easily on a plane with the other artistic attributes of the picture.

Aldine, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—Gorgeous as are the scenery and costumes, the picture falls a bit flat and leaves one with a feeling that the production is lacking in spontaneity. In places the acting of Miss Sweet, as Donna Dolores de Mendoza, rises above average, but even so is not up to her usual standard.

INQUIRER—Emotional acting, artistic splendor and involved intrigue are the outstanding features. * * *

NORTH AMERICAN—There is so much action, in fact, that the story sometimes halts in favor of the action. * * * This is one of the most elaborate costume photoplay productions of many months. * * * One of the best bits of acting is that of Hobart Bosworth as the heroine's father. It is sincere, rugged and impressive. Blanche Sweet is rather sugary and tearful. * * *

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—Recently there has been no lack of such pictures, and this one does not take its place among the best. The settings are good, but the moviegoer is surfeited with such things. However, if one has seen not a dozen others like it, there is still sufficient appeal in these old romantic themes. * * *

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—* * * Is far more interesting on the screen than it was on the stage. Indeed, it is the most successful of the swashbuckling "historical" dramas seen this season. It loses none of the thrill-on-thrill appeal of the Crawford novel and, except that it seems a trifle hurried at the end, is satisfying throughout.

RECORD—The picture is interesting not only because of the accurate reproduction of the scenery and architecture of the time and the beauty of the photography, but its plot is always exciting and full of little unexpected complications, all of which are reasonable and convincing.

"His Last Race"—Goldstone-S. R. State-Lake, Chicago

AMERICAN—Admirers of fine horses will find something to their fancy this week at the State-Lake. * * *

"His Last Race" cannot but be accepted as a second-rate film neither in form or substance or in truth to life ranking with the letter productions.

JOURNAL—There is small sequence to or reason for the events which go around Boomerang, but his race, the first and last of his life, causes as much of a thrill as though all the customers had placed a bet for place on the fleeting animal.

NEWS—"His Last Race" * * * is all right as the filling for a vaudeville sandwich. In the making it was mixed according to an old and tried recipe and it was seasoned with * * * hot stuff. * * *

TRIBUNE—You'll admit the story makes a good program picture. Not a whiz, perhaps—but certainly one the children can witness without plying you with a mouthful of unanswerable questions.

"The Light That Failed"—F. P.-L. McVicker's, Chicago

JOURNAL—The most deeply affecting picture since "The Copperhead" is now at McVicker's, taken from Kipling's novel,

"The Light That Failed," and not, thanks to someone with title changed or plot distorted. The story runs true to the Kipling form, and with its expert acting, should rank as one of the season's best three offerings.

POST—After Percy Marmont's wonderful interpretation of Mark Sabre in "If Winter Comes," I almost dreaded seeing him in another role. * * * But he has done it again, and after watching him as Dick Heller in "The Light That Failed," you are convinced that he will do it again every time. * * * A Kipling story interpreted by such acting is a treat such as is seldom offered to picture lovers.

Stanton, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—George Melford, * * * had pretty well unkipled Kipling before he achieved the nearest approach to a happy ending which even the most radical hollywoodizing of the great Englishman's most tragic novel would allow. Little was left of the book's plot. * * *

INQUIRER—* * * Scored a tremendous hit on its first presentation at the Stanton. * * * Melford has outdone himself in the spectacular "shots" he has provided for "The Light That Failed."

NORTH AMERICAN—The story is a thrilling tale. * * * The outstanding performances are those of Percy Marmont as the artist and Jacqueline Logan as the model. Both of these are marked with intelligence and artistry.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—George Melford has made the new screen-version of it a masterpiece of artistry and feeling. Under his direction Percy Marmont excels everything he has ever done before. * * *

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—* * * An exceptionally fine picture. It may even be said that, while it departs radically from the story, it catches the correct atmosphere from the start.

RECORD—While all that is in the picture may not be exactly according to Kipling, no one need object on that account, so excellent is the production in all its aspects.

"Little Old New York"—Gold-Cosmop. New, Baltimore

AMERICAN—Here is real cinematographic achievement. * * * Everything is present to make a picture of the first magnitude.

NEWS—Drama, comedy, beauty, charm—they're all in "Little Old New York." Furthermore, it has historical value. * * *

This story is delightfully told, the settings (by Joseph Urban) are beautiful and historically accurate. * * *

B'way Strand, Detroit

FREE PRESS—* * * delightful screen story. * * * Certainly Miss Davies has never been seen to better advantage or acted more naturally and effectively. * * * Exclusive settings and fine photography characterize the production throughout.

NEWS—* * * the story has sufficient entertainment value to justify every foot of its length.

In addition to being long and charming, "Little Old New York" has been given a very liberal expense account. * * *

But the story's the thing and "Little Old New York" has one, too. It is a good old-fashioned sort of a story, simply, sugar-sweet and appealing.

Marion Davies' work * * * represents the best bit of acting this little star has done before the camera.

Circle, Indianapolis

STAR—It is a masterpiece of the studios, in advance and above the mine-run variety of pictures. Aside from the glowing entertainment it provides, it is significant of what may be expected of a more highly developed screen. There is much to "Little Old New York" to evoke the glittering superlative.

TIMES—I do not hesitate in saying that Miss Davies is now a real star. If there has ever been any doubt regarding her movie position it is fixed beyond any doubt in her latest photoplay.

The story is as sweet as the sweetest perfume. It gets hold of you and will carry you back to the days of grandmother and grandfather.

Royal, Kansas City

POST—The story of this picture is in itself a treat.

The star of this picture is in herself a treat.

The supporting cast of this picture is in itself a treat.

The direction of this picture is in itself a treat.

Merrill, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—"Little Old New York" is one of the year's biggest and best. Perfectly charming from every angle, it has the most delightful setting of any of the big costume dramas. * * *

Marion Davies is the star and as such reaches the zenith of her career. * * *

"The Lone Star Ranger"—Fox Apollo, Indianapolis

STAR—"The Lone Star Ranger" is a sample of what modern producing methods can do to the old-fashioned Western picture. * * *

Tom Mix is well suited for the role he plays and the large crowds at the Apollo yesterday attested to his popularity.

TIMES—* * * gives Tom Mix one of the best opportunities that he has ever had in a western story. And Mix takes this opportunity and gives a sterling performance of an interesting photoplay.

"Long Live the King"—Metro Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—"Long Live the King" is magnificently staged. The pessimistic idiots likely will tell you that sometimes the story drags a little, but don't listen to them. * * * Jackie has opportunity to display his emotional wares.

Capitol, Detroit

FREE PRESS—* * * He is just as appealing, as wistful and clever as in any role in which he has ever appeared.

As Otto, the little Crown Prince of Livonia, Jackie established himself as an actor.

NEWS—* * * shines more brilliantly than ever, despite the brilliant setting of his play. And it is in his wistful, forlorn moments that the boy's odd genius for acting is most apparent. * * *

The story of "Long Live the King" is a coherent and colorful recital of court intrigue. * * *

TIMES—What an artist before the camera! We're speaking of Jackie Coogan in "Long Live the King" * * * Jackie can give three-fourth of the stars now on the screen, "cards and spades" and beat them to it when it comes to real emotional and comedy acting. Don't miss Jackie in Mary Roberts Rhinehart's story.

Colonial, Indianapolis

STAR—For one thing, that company provided the story with one of the year's most elaborate productions. * * *

But the master stroke was the casting of Jackie Coogan. * * * proves that he is worthy of such a fine production.

Piccadilly, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—Yet with all his royal splendor Master Coogan is still the personification of childlike simplicity, the most unflinching and universal appeal the screen. * * * Mary Roberts Rhinehart is the originator of the charmingly impossible tale. * * * The continuity and subtitles are in perfect accord and are presented in a remarkably smooth sequence.

HERALD—* * * Makes up one of the most entertaining, amusing and well acted motion pictures that the present reviewer has found. * * * All told "Long Live the King" is one of the most worthwhile movies that Rochester has seen in some time.

JOURNAL—"Jackie" Coogan—as lovable, as appealing, as spontaneous, and above all, as keenly intelligent, as ever. * * *

The picture is lavishly staged, too lavishly its length would indicate. A good deal of impressive but extraneous detail is introduced, which serves to break the continuity of the action and to reduce the suspense to a minimum at times. The supporting cast is most uniformly excellent.

TIMES-UNION—Ten reels of Jackie Coogan would be not a reel too many; but 10 reels of magnificent sets and spectacular processions with Jackie mixed in are more than one can sit through with comfort or pleasure. Moreover, they represent a waste of good money. * * *

There are numberless amusing and thrilling incidents in the play and Jackie is given ample opportunity to display his decided gift for comedy and for imitation.

Delmonte, Grand Central, West Lyric, Capitol—St. Louis

GLOBE-DISPATCH—In addition to the splendor, it presents Jackie Coogan a role that is peculiar to his typical kin humor and fun, and that is what the picture is most interested in.

POST-DISPATCH—Here the Wonder of the screen fairly outdoes himself in most picturesque role ever assigned to him. STAR—* * * one in a thousand pleasantly diverting hour or two.

TIMES—Unfortunately, there is enough of Jackie in the pretentious. There is artistry in the plot construction. * * * Give us more of Jackie, and his doubted talents, and sacrifice some of the trappings, the spectacles, the 'mob scene

Columbia, Washington

HERALD—Its settings are magnificent size and splendor, while the investiture mounting is sumptuous to the last degree. ad Long Live King—Rochester . . . . .

STAR—He is a real artist, this little and the greatest tribute to his art is to that it must be seen, for the written fails to describe it adequately.

TIMES—Another triumph for Jackie gan is "Long Live the King." * * * settings are so beautiful, the story so charming and Jackie so satisfying that this duction fairly cries aloud for a better porting cast.

"The Lover Piker"—Gold-Cosmop King's, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—"The Love Piker" is splendidly acted throughout. * * *

POST-DISPATCH—The picture is acted and has some elaborate "high social scenes.

STAR—"The Love-Piker," one image is an old feature done over. At least is a great deal like one that was billed or six, or maybe more years ago.

TIMES—Now Anita comes from our town, and pouts fetchingly. But that's enough to save the film. At least, we convinced the picture was poor, and through it only from a stern sense of duty. * * *

"The Magic Skin"—Gold-Cosmop Lyric, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—Despite the question change of title and the modernization of action, the production retains many of inimitable traits of the great French novel. * * * Carmel Myers gives a clever characterization, while Bessie Love makes a full figure. * * * George Walsh gives an unexpectedly sympathetic delineation of a poet.

POST—* * * and the story makes a movie.

"The Marriage Maker"—F. P. Strand, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—An odd yet delightful terming of reality and fantasy, grace and humor, "The Marriage Maker" is certain to appeal to all who like unusual photoplays.

POST—* * * mildly amusing comedy. Fans may wonder what in the Sam Hill all about.

"The Meanest Man in the World"—1st Nat'l

Karlton, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—All the George M. Cohanisms that ever existed are assembled here, some of them are so awful that the Ben Hur film, "The Shriek of Araby," follows, seems a screen classic by comparison.

INQUIRER—* * * It all ends delightfully with a veiled promise of wedding. Hiram Leeds * * * is played admirably. Car Stockdale.

NORTH AMERICAN—The title role played by Bert Lytel who handles it delightfully comical vein.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—It is a light and winsome Blanche Sweet who returns to the filmfold in "The Meanest Man in the World."

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—Retains much of its original sparkle and therefore excellent entertainment. There is a neat freshness to the picture and a pactness of incident which, coupled with some good humorous subtitles, makes fine romantic comedy.

RECORD—"The Meanest Man in the World," * * * is old-fashioned comedy drama. There is a lot of good entertainment in the picture.

"Merry-Go-Round"—Universal Strand, Rochester

RALD—The settings, particularly those with life among the higher circles in a society, are among the most lavish filmed.

"File-A-Minute Romeo"—Fox Family, Cincinnati

QUIRER—It is a typical Tom Mix, and yet, due to a number of well-touches, it is one of the cleverest in the star has ever appeared.

T—Tom Mix pictures have come to staple a movie product as those of Reid's once were. Many exhibitors are in good for what ails the box office.

A Mile-a-Minute Romeo." at the Family, and his horse Tony get into all sorts of ups, but finally accomplish what they set out to do.

"A Million to Burn"—Universal Rivoli, St. Louis

BE-DEMOCRAT—The theme is far above the average seen in a farce comedy, along with the characters, make for one of the best films of the year.

OF DISPATCH—* * * an amusing and interesting film called. * * *

"Modern Matrimony"—Selznick Palace-Orpheum, St. Paul

REER-PRESS—"Modern Matrimony" is a film topline, with Owen Moore and a lady bearing the principal burden of the story very much like a great many other comedies. As usually happens, it is the Pathe News pictures that the real success is found.

"North of Hudson Bay"—Fox Monroe, Chicago

RALD-EXAMINER—They've got the story. * * * They've got the star. * * * They've got a story. * * * But every stage and movie-like. Many a trick telling can be covered by good acting.

—You who do not especially care for Western pictures such as Tom Mix and Owen Moore, are suddenly going to realize you see "North of Hudson Bay," that Tom Mix is a most fascinating chap and a good actor.

"Our Hospitality"—Metro Palace, Washington

ELD—A veritable feast of fun and merriment. "Our Hospitality" is a distinctly new departure in the field of cinema burlesque.

—* * * Audience that laughed at the fun and shrieked at the thrills through the film. * * * The satirical thread is skillfully woven through the picture that makes the amiable fun of the film. This picture bears favorable comparison with Harland's "Safety Last" in its combination of fun and thrills.

MS—Here we find a well defined plot, a series of gag incidents. There are times when the situations reach melodramatic heights with the complementary at withal, a veneer of fun has been added, it would seem, and it gives a brilliant surface to the whole. About the comedy as we have seen, and yesterday in a burst of applause.

"Oneer Trails"—Vitagraph Central, Washington

—It is perhaps one of the best done interesting motion pictures of the year.

"Pleasure Mad"—Metro The Chicago, Chicago

AL—The story is pure and humil prosperity enters the screen home woods, and the city gets the house-ings go from bad to worse until the brightening out, with a climax in the which is warranted to make the pink with approval.

—It is a good sign for moving picture they make dramas like "Pleasure Mad." * * * The story is the whole thing. * * * since "The Old Nest" has she (Mary Alden) done anything to compare with her work in "Pleasure Mad."

POST—As the plot of this story is superficially sketched you will probably remark that you have seen a number just like it recently—that it is trite and has been used much too often. But as this picture is worked out with all the little homey details making it so true to life that it might be a chapter in your own history or that of one of your friends, you forget its triteness in your interest.

TRIBUNE—Mr. Barker is a clever director, but take it from me he didn't have much to direct. The acting is all excellent, as you will note by the cast, and, in the main, the film is well put on.

Warfield, San Francisco

BULLETIN—In the hands of Reginald Baker this novel has been made a screen achievement.

CALL—"Pleasure Mad" is a great picture. It is more, it is a sermon on the screen, but a sermon that everybody appreciates, everybody enjoys.

CHRONICLE—The picture is worthy of the effort made to boost it. There is no disappointment when one sees it, however high expectations have been raised. This is due largely to the acting of five persons. * * *

EXAMINER—The picture is well made, highly dramatic and full of interest and entertainment. It is a good picture for people to see.

NEWS—Frugal press notices have acclaimed her (Norma Shearer), a coming star of cinema. She is yet to be overrated. Certainly she has equipment for the first magnitude and it is her splendidly expressed work which goes far to make the film a unique success. Much is to be expected of her.

"The Ramblin' Kid"—Universal Fay's, Rochester

HERALD—Unlike many Western pictures with studio atmosphere, it rings true. The settings are genuine—and many of the scenic "shots" credited to Virgil Miller are unusually fine.

"Red Lights"—Gold.-Cosmop. Rialto, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—It's a good mystery.

"Rupert of Hentzau"—Selznick Gifts, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—This production, which is imposing, but not ostentatious, assuredly must be reckoned among the most meritorious of this season's photoplays. * * * A judiciously selected cast, * * * impersonate the principal characters with commendable zeal and dignity.

Garrick, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—"Rupert of Hentzau" fails of success because of its own weight. A colorful story was provided, to begin with. * * * So you have a picture in which the settings are far from impressive, in which the titles are long and wearisome, in which there are occasional bright nuggets but far too wide a streak of rock.

"Scaramouche"—Metro Capitol, San Francisco

BULLETIN—* * * Made an indelible impression upon everyone who saw it.

There is not a disappointing feature throughout the entire length of this screen classic, which will go down in history as one of the greatest, if not the greatest picture of 1923.

CALL—Rex Ingram, youthful director but a genius, has scored another veritable triumph in "Scaramouche." He has made a film play which holds the interest every moment it is on the screen and tells an unbroken story strong in suspense leading to a powerful climax and a happy ending. At the same time it draws a picture of the French revolution and its predominant figures in strokes that are unforgettable.

CHRONICLE—"Scaramouche" lives up to the preliminary praise that has been heaped on it. * * * There are many mob scenes in which it is claimed 10,000 extras are used. They look populous and the crowds are managed with splendid skill.

NEWS—* * * Is extremely picturesque, and Rex Ingram has sumptuously transcribed it to the screen. * * * Has not the sweep, grandeur and unity of "The Four Horsemen," and in its treatment bears great resemblance to Griffith's technique in "Orphans of the Storm." It is not mature esthetically, is of popular taste, and as an "audience picture" amply satisfying.

Rex Ingram in making it for Metro had abundant material in the Rafael Sabatini novel. With a superb cast and his own superlative ability in directing, he could not fail to produce a master work in film; and this new production surely rivals "The Four Horsemen" in importance.

Pershing, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—* * * lived up to all expectations and maintained the interest of the audience throughout its twelve reels. Though one of the longest pictures ever made, "Scaramouche" does not drag or seem padded.

POST-DISPATCH—In many respects it is a great film. * * * Some of the crowd scenes are impressive and thrilling and the settings are massive and elaborate.

STAR—A splendid picture of a gripping book about great times. It is better than the same director's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

TIMES—Without question, "Scaramouche" ranks with the season's best films. * * * There is a grand sweep to the picture, in keeping with the theme. And above all, there is intelligent direction.

"The Silent Command"—Fox Hippodrome, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—* * * Gets off a bit slowly, but it soon shifts into high gear and then the climaxes come thick and fast, packed with thrills and suspense.

The Fox, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—* * * a wholesome and inspiring patriotic picture, makes free use of many views of the Navy and its ships and men and, with these as a background, presents an interesting story. * * *

INQUIRER—* * * An effective and interesting production.

NORTH AMERICAN—"The Silent Command" is billed as "glorifying the American Navy," and it does so with a vengeance. * * * The picture is of the obvious variety, but is not without any number of thrills and suspense.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—"The Silent Command" is a glorification of the United States Navy. It is not only an educational film, but a melodramatic thriller as well. There you have a grand combination. * * *

PUBLIC LEDGER (Morning)—* * * An interesting picture despite all its much-too-obvious hokum. * * * Seldom has a picture had finer photography or more varied and fascinating backgrounds for its action. The acting is of the kind generally to be found in melodramas. * * *

RECORD—It is a picture of excellent photography and with Edmund Lowe as Decatur, Alma Tell as his wife and Martha Mansfield as a "vamp" in the confidence of the conspirators important in the action. Analysis of the tale would show improbabilities and discrepancies, but just the same the picture is a big production.

"Six Cylinder Love"—Fox Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—Amid gales of laughter, * * * "Six Cylinder Love" opened. * * * The settings are tasteful and the cast is splendid. * * * A delightful source of amusement as well as dramatic in its scope.

NEWS—Whatever changes have been made from the stage version, the film has lost none of its humor or glimpses of young love. It sparkles with clever repartee.

TIMES—But everything will enjoy "Six Cylinder Love." And we say that because we have seen it and not because New York laughed at it for more than 52 weeks straight before the footlights.

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L. La Salle-Garden—Regent, Detroit

NEWS—Pola Negri in a return to something like her old European form of "Passion" and "Gypsy Blood" after two very bad American starts.

"The Spoilers"—Gold.-Cosmop. Crandall's, Washington

STAR—It is tense in its dramatic high lights and the entire cast lends splendid support to the principals.

"Stephen Steps Out"—F. P.-L. Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—He is a chip of the old block, and he proves it by the natural way he conducts himself during the picture. Endowed with personality, he portrays realistically a typical American youth.

POST-DISPATCH—* * * Nothing to rave about. * * * The boy may yet turn out to be a great screen actor, but there is little in this picture on which to base any prediction.

STAR—* * * The hopes of the producers of "Stephen Steps Out," have been realized. * * * This is an interesting and intelligent picture. * * *

TIMES—But it is unfair to saddle a youth with so much background. Were he not the other Doug's son he might be hailed as a promising juvenile. As the shadow of his father, he is lacking.

There is plenty of fun in the film, and there is pathos.

"The Thrill Chaser"—Universal Isis, Indianapolis

TIMES—There is a girl in the story who supplies the motive for his eastern trip, and, as in all Gibson pictures, some good riding. Billie Dove makes an ideal leading lady for Hoot.

"Tiger Rose"—Warners' Metropolitan, Baltimore

NEWS—Lenore Ulrich proves to be just as ingratiating on the screen as on the stage. * * * "Tiger Rose," * * * provides eminently satisfactory eye entertainment. * * * "Tiger Rose" is ably directed, with the dramatic interest mounting steadily.

"The Virginian"—Preferred Granada, San Francisco

BULLETIN—Florence Vidor is as charming as ever as the little schoolma'am, while Russell Simpson, Pat O'Malley and Raymond Hatton all have important characterizations.

CALL AND POST—* * * once more proves that the film can more than make up in expression, through its wide sweep of scenic action, what it lacks in vocal tones. For "The Virginian," one of the most popular stage successes of the decade, is given its finest interpretation on the silver sheet.

CHRONICLE—* * * a mighty good picture. Tom Forman has put the quality of humanity into his direction that makes this story a thing to treasure. And Forman has brought out all the best in Kenneth Harlan. * * *

DAILY NEWS—Directed by Tom Forman in rather an antiquated western-thriller fashion. Kenneth Harlan plays the hero and Florence Vidor Molly, the school teacher. The merit of the film lies solely in the excellent acting of Russell Simpson as Trampas, the virulent cattle rustler, as good a portrayal as we have ever beheld.

EXAMINER—* * * well directed and well acted, is proving a magnet at the Granada. Kenneth Harlan is a perfect choice for the role. * * *

JOURNAL—It is an unqualified hit. The Granada audience is not of the type that habitually expresses itself; consequently it was all the more noteworthy the manner in which they registered their approval by their applause during the action of the story and at the conclusion of the film itself. * * * Kenneth Harlan walked away with the honors. In this production he has clinched his title to stellar laurels.

Broadway, New York

AMERICAN—* * * The result is an unqualifiedly good attraction. * * * "The Virginian" is a well-acted, well-presented and well-aimed hit of entertainment. * * *

EVENING JOURNAL—Mr. Forman has made a straightforward film. * * * The photoplay is something about which the producers can well boast.

MAIL—* * * A true representation of the original story, beautifully mounted and well directed. * * * The part of the Virginian was played by Kenneth Harlan. To us Raymond Hatton is the star.

TRIBUNE—So Mr. Harlan may be described as altogether satisfactory. "The Virginian" is about the best thing we ever saw him do. This is an all-star cast which has real stars; for Florence Vidor, Pat O'Malley and Russell Simpson give performances which seem to us flawless.

"The Wanters"—1st Nat'l
Park-Mall, Cleveland

LEARN DEALER This last effort never puts a foot off the beaten celluloid paths. Leading little Marie Prevost doesn't help it much, and even the sleek, handsome Huntley Gordon seems to be laughing at the story.

Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—The picture, "The Wanters," shows Marie (Prevost) at her very best.

NEWS Marie Prevost in her first starring venture, "The Wanters" proved a most pleasant surprise. * * * That she has real screen dramatic ability came as a revelation. * * * The only weak spot is the slenderness of plot in the picture itself.

TIMES It is the "Cinderella" type of story, worked out with new angles. * * *

Miss Prevost, however, is the outstanding member of the cast. Few actresses on the screen today can surpass Miss Prevost in light comedy work. * * *

"Woman Proof"—F. P.-L.
Howard, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—A treat it is for it is one of the best pictures Thomas Meighan has been seen in for some time.

"You Can't Get Away With It"
Fox—Liberty, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—* * * One of the oldest, but one which never seems to lose its power when treated with sincerity. * * * The quality of the acting and the material side of the production count greatly in the picture's favor.

STAR—It is a trifle heavy, but refreshingly different, and is to be commended for its courageously unhappy ending.

TIMES—An improbable story, which has excellent elements nevertheless. The hero is sickening and the plot is puerile.

"Zaza"—F. P.-L.
Miles, Detroit

NEWS—Many liberties have been taken with the story. * * * but it is interesting all the way. Allan Dwan * * * has been careful and intelligent in almost every move. H. B. Warner is excellent. * * *

"But moving pictures can expect considerable trouble in many states from a taxation viewpoint. These will all, however, be local in the various communities, such as Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nebraska, Missouri, and all of the Southern States. All of these states have pretentious road building programs outlined, and there has been so much talk of 'million dollar' pictures, and 'million dollar' incomes of stars and players that legislators have almost made up their minds that the movies offer a prolific field for taxation. In just what manner these taxes will appear is at the moment uncertain. But they are coming, that's sure. Many of the states are getting further in debt, even though the Nation is getting out of debt. That is another reason for probable taxation."

Draw Tax Program

by the Ways and Means Committee which is expected almost immediately to begin its discussions of possible changes in the revenue law. Coupled with the appeal for elimination of the admission tax will be an urgent plea for the repeal also of the seating capacity tax.

The cementing of the breach between the several dissenting exhibitor factions, the healing of which would greatly hamper the organization, was thoroughly discussed and it is believed that a plan has been formulated which will bring together the various factions. Insiders acquainted with the situation are less optimistic than this, however, believing it will be difficult to propitiate certain interests not in sympathy with activities generally of the present national association. However, invitations were extended to those state organizations between which and the national body there has been a great deal of friction. It is known that the Michigan, Minnesota, and Texas units were asked to send representatives to this meeting in Washington.

Because of the probable shortness of the session, it is planned by those here to push their plans, and make every effort to have Congress give consideration to their situation at the earliest possible moment. It is known that there is considerable opposition in Congress at this time to repealing the taxes in question, and it is understood that letters from individual congressmen, referred to at the executive meeting voiced this opposition in no uncertain terms.

Information gleaned by THE FILM DAILY in Washington, shows that the theatrical attendance throughout the country this fall reached a volume greater than at any time during the past two years. Reports of admission tax collections for the month of October, just secured by the Treasury Department from its various field offices, will show that admission tax collections for that month totalled very close to $7,000,000. For the preceding month collections were slightly under $5,000,000 and for October of last year, they totalled considerably under $5,500,000. This data, collected by the Treasury Department; naturally finds its way immediately to those in Congress who are interested in the tax question.

It is expected that these figures will exert a very grave influence on their sentiments.

In the Courts

Figures as to the value of stock in the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corp., owning the Strand theaters in New York, Brooklyn, and Albany, and the earnings of the company, have been filed in the Supreme Court in a suit against Max Spiegel in behalf of David F. Bride and Harold S. Kirby, who assigned their claim to Samuel Pett for the purpose of the suit. Justice Davis approved the report of James W. Hyde, who heard the case as referee, and directed a verdict for $439,134. The judgment is to be collected from Spiegel's stock in the Mark company.

The judgment represents two-thirds of the value of Spiegel's 1,140 shares of Mark stock, which on the evidence, amounts to $366,635; two-thirds of the dividends from 1919 to 1921, or $28,146; interest of $4,665; two-thirds of the commission of $25,000 paid to Spiegel by the Sutphen estate, owner of the Brewster property on which the New York Strand is built, interest of $10,544 on that sum, and the expenses of the litigation. The suit was based on allegations that Spiegel agreed to give Bride and Kirby two-thirds of all he got out of the transaction.

The court found that while the par value of the stock of the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corp. is only $150, the actual value is $251.45, to which is added $70 a share for goodwill of the name "Strand." The testimony showed that average early net profits for the period from 1919 to 1921 were $210,565, and the average net value of the capital and assets of the corporation was $1,755,348.

Judgments for $125 and $124 have been filed in the Supreme Court by Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Dist. Corp. against Sherman Fibbs of Albany on two of ten notes.

William Breit has filed a default judgment for $2,756 in the Supreme Court against Joseph M. Narrons of Utica on a note made to Murray W. Garsson and endorsed to the plaintiff.

The production will be 100 reels in length, and will picture explorations of the Vikings 2000 story centers around the advent of Leif Ericson, called "Leif Lucky," and shows that Columbus visited Iceland before he landed the West Indies in 1492. All scenes will be taken in their original locations in Norway, Iceland, Greenland, except those laid in "Vikland" or Massachusetts. The production, according to Clancy, will have the official cooperation of Norwegian Government. Product will start soon. Johan Bull, art has been engaged to design the costumes and interior settings, and will sail with Ibsen for Norway on Dec. 8th. Clancy will follow as soon as his cast has been completed. Interiors will be made in the Swed Biograph studios, if the light equipment proves satisfactory. Continuity calls for many spectacular scenes, including a battle between Pagans and Christians of Iceland.

TARTING

By DANNY

Everywhere find a few words in Boston. Regarding the proposed distribution plan of the right operators. Naturally, it's not perfect. Far from it. It's like the uniform contract—it's a step in the right direction. And it will be improved as the idea develops. The plans understood to be working look for a like idea in several other points. Before long. And once the idea develops look for a more general attention throughout the country within the next year.

This development is but the beginning. It is almost idiotic to venture predictions in this business. It moves too fast; it is subject to too many changes. But pin this one: within the next 18 months there will be drastic and marked changes in the entire distribution scheme throughout the industry. This applies to the old line companies as well as others.

Among the interesting developments in this distribution scheme is that the state right operators had their business materially affected because of the play date clause in the uniform contract. One of the most trusted independent operators missed this; giving as the reason that the old days while product was contracted for the exhibitor would be talked into playing something else. But the play date clause is not this.

Look for some important news from the Coast within the next week or two. Some very important news.

"The Hunchback"

Laemmle wants to know. Exhibitors feel about running "The Hunchback" at $1.65 top. In view of the production going into legitimate theaters. Says he is confident that the production should be the picture house instead of the legitimate theater if the exhibitor is willing to do this.

It's a real idea. But how many exhibitors dare charge $1.65 top for a picture? That's the question to be answered. No matter how big the picture, how costly the production.

One of the comedy scenes in "The Extra Girl," in which Mack Sennett presents Mabel Normand,—a picture that is enjoying record runs. Associated Exhibitors.—Advt.

False Prosperity

Seen by Whitman Bennett If Productions Become Seasonal—His Reasons Why

Whitman Bennett sees a grave danger in the proposed shutdown in that he feels it would make the production field a seasonal one. This, he declares, would establish a false prosperity at stated intervals during the year and a complete lull during others. He says:

"The thing that bothers me most about the picture 'shut down' is the fact that, watching the conditions for the past three or four years, I have come to fear that the motion picture business is going to become 'seasonal' in the same sense as the legitimate show business. That is to say, I fear that we are going to have a rush of producing every summer—every producer wants to have something on the Autumn market—then a condition of over-production, then, perhaps, a second cheaper producing season in February and March for Spring and Summer offerings.

"The result of such a state of affairs would be most unfortunate. At one or two periods of the year, all the good actors would be working and would get new fantastic ideas about salaries. Then they would 'live on their fat' until the next producing period—or try getting onto Broadway in the legitimate or going into vaudeville. Salaries and all producing costs would be high during the 'producing periods,' and the burden of carrying empty studios would be serious during the intervals.

"The market is now 'over-loaded.' In

May Not Close

Paramount Studios in East May Remain Open With at Least Three Units at Work

The Long Island Paramount studios may not shut down, despite the original intention of the company to close both the Eastern and Western studios for about ten weeks.

Plans are now under way to maintain three units in the East, beginning work in the next few weeks. At present, Tom Meighan is finishing "Pied Piper Malone," and Gloria Swanson, "The Humming Bird." A new vehicle has been selected for Swanson which Allan Dwan will direct. William de Mille will produce "Icebound" in the East and Meighan will start work on a new picture almost immediately. Victor Heerman will probably direct the latter, while Al Green returns to the coast to head another unit for Famous.

It is doubtful whether or not the coast plant will close. It is true that some of the Famous people have been "farmed" out to other producers. This fact, plus the additional fact that the holiday season is on will carry matters over to the middle of January. Jesse L. Lasky upon his return from the coast recently, listed a new series of pictures that the company will next make.

Six Boston Exchanges Hope to Lower Distributing Cost—Want Jim Mullen for "G. M."

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Boston—The Consolidated Independent Booking Offices will be the name of the organization planned by the six New England exchanges who are uniting to lower distributing costs. The companies to be included are, Progress, Eastern Feature Film, Certified, Cadillac, Pioneer, and Moscow.

While the C. I. B. O. has not yet been formed, its sponsors declare they are only waiting to secure the proper man to act as general manager before becoming operative. Efforts are being made to secure Jim Mullen for the post.

In speaking of the aspirations of the consolidated group, Silas Bunce, of Progress, said to THE FILM DAILY:

"The plan is for a more complete distribution at considerably less cost. For instance, we will take the case of Progress. It now costs us forty per cent to distribute our product. Say we buy a picture, pay $1,000 for it and the picture grosses us $5,000. There is $1,000 first cost; $2,000 for distribution and $2,000 profit for us. With the formation of this company we will be able to distribute our product for fifteen per cent. Thus we save twenty-five per cent and that will make it possible for us to pay producers more for their pictures

February, on the contrary, the market is in a condition to absorb more production. In the meantime, everybody loses—perhaps, the exhibitor.

"It seems to me that the large concern can guard against this condition by not producing at any one time of the year. There is no question about the economy of operating continuously economically. The product from the independents will never be great enough to take the market, if the big fellows behave rationally.

"I have not said anything about the making of 'million dollar' productions which are great successes but which never carry money back in less than a couple of years at all. I do not say anything on that because I am so deeply convinced that people who have made those productions are themselves convinced of the fallacy that this evil will cure itself in the future. These productions are not futile in themselves, but have the bad effect of making the public discontented with expensive and less glamorous productions which depend for their appeal on characterization and plot and intelligence rather than on mere lavish spectacle.

Are You Ready?

MUCH against my own desire, I am showing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in various legitimate theatres throughout the United States. I am making a profit on these showings and at the same time I am preparing the way for the exhibitor who will show it later on at popular prices.

The only reason I have chosen legitimate theatres is because the picture simply must have a real run and most exhibitors up to now have been fearful of changing their policy to two-a-day and charging $1.65 top.

Now that I am in the midst of "road-showing" the big production, I find that exhibitors of importance are changing their attitude and are showing a disposition to change their policy, thus cutting legitimate theatres out of the picture business.

I approve of this with all my heart and soul. I have always claimed that pictures belong in picture houses, but with a picture as great and as unparalleled as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", I positively cannot sacrifice it or treat it like an ordinary picture.

Wherever I have found a first class picture house that is willing to change its policy by showing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" twice a day at $1.65 top, I have given it the preference over any legitimate theatre.

I stand ready to do this wherever it is feasible.

I am not pretending that I expect to sacrifice this production. I am satisfied that it is the outstanding picture of the past ten years, one that will last for years to come, one on which I could afford to take my time about booking. I consider it so exceptional, such a demonstrated success wherever it has shown, that I am more than doing my part when I offer to run it in picture houses instead of legitimate houses.

If I get a proper run in every community and at the same time strike the first blow to kill the evil of running pictures in legitimate theatres, I will feel more than satisfied.

Of course, I don't mean that every ticket must be $1.65. I mean that a reasonable number must be sold at that price. Afterward you will want to repeat the picture at popular prices and reap a double profit from it.

There's my story. How does it strike you? If it appeals to you, wire or write me.

...they can in turn make better pictures, thus assuring themselves of bigger profits and thus of larger returns. It's bound to work out that way as an exhibitor will pay more for a good film than for a fair one.

The plan will be to form the C. I. B. O. with a manager from the outside, and salesmen from the outside with no one of us to have any say about the distribution. The six of us will each have an office of our own and retain only our private secretaries, and can thus devote all our time to the buying of better pictures. The manager of the C. I. B. O. will be responsible to the board of directors and everything will be gone over once weekly. The manager is to be responsible for his salesmen and results obtained.

The idea of this is that if Progress sells more films, naturally Progress pays more of the cost of distribution than any other. The cost of operating to be pro-rated on a basis of the amount sold. For instance, if the sales of Eastern come to $2,000 this week, then the C. I. B. O. deducts the cost of distribution say, $250—and sends a check for balance to Eastern. Thus each of us will be able to see at all times who is paying the principal cost and buck up the sales of the ones that are low. Naturally a manager from the outside will be anxious for a big general showing and will push all product. If it is decided that the poor business of any one of the companies is due to poor pictures, then that one will be requested at the meeting of the board to get better pictures in order to secure better general results.

C. I. B. O. will give the little independents the same wide distribution as larger companies like Federated or American Feature, among the independents, or Paramount or Goldwyn among the others, the sum and substance being that with our combined product we will have more than enough features, comedies, scenic and general short subjects to supply the exhibitor with a majority of his program. Instead of going to all six he comes to one the C. I. B. O., and where we now have one, two or three salesman representing us each, we will then have at least six or seven men and will naturally get around to different exhibitors more often."

Southern Enterprise Changes

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dallas—Arkansas and Oklahoma theaters belonging to Southern Enterprises have been removed from the supervision of the Dallas office. Arkansas will be handled out of Memphis by Chas. McIlravey; Oklahoma by E. L. Perry in Oklahoma City, while Al E. Fair remains in charge of Texas, with headquarters in Dallas. As part of the readjustment program, Bruce Fowler who came to Dallas as city manager, becomes manager of the Palace, while Williamson goes into the Old Mill.

Dallas—Famous-Players Southern division which has had Dallas under the district manager in Atlanta has been divided. R. G. Rosebaum is here to establish headquarters for a district taking in Oklahoma City, Memphis, and Dallas. Rosebaum was branch manager in San Francisco before coming here.

In The Courts

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided that Klaw & Erlanger are not entitled to 1,250 shares of Famous Players stock they claimed under a secret agreement with the late Alf Hayman that he would give the half of all he received from the estate of Charles Frohman. Hayman got half the common stock of Charles Frohman, Inc., and traded it for Famous Players shares, but after his death his estate contended that the secret agreement for half his stock, exacted by Klaw & Erlanger, was not fair to the other creditors of the Frohman estate.

The Appellate Division has reversed an order obtained by the Continental Guaranty Corp., acting on a claim of the Baumer Films, to compel Comptroller Craig to pay $8,000 for a film, "Standing Room Only," made for the Transit Commission to show crowded conditions in the subways. The city contended that the $8,000 was not a proper expenditure of city funds, and the court ruled that the question should be decided by a jury.

The Jackson Film Studio Corp. has been sued in the Supreme Court by the estate of John J. Murphy, which owns the studio property at Westchester and Concord Aves, the Bronx, to compel the corporation to pay arrears of rent alleged to be more than $5,000.

Smith Back From Europe
 Albert E. Smith has returned from Europe where he conferred with Rafael Sabatini relative to the signing of "Captain Blood."

Atlanta Worried

Georgia Plans to Increase Exchange License Fees from $100 to $1,000—Bill Up Today
 (Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Atlanta—Local exchanges are perturbed over the general tax act which calls for a general increase in license fees for exchanges from $100 to $1,000 per annum. The provision is embodied in the Lankford bill, which has already been passed by the House of Representatives and is expected to come up in the Senate today. The Thanksgiving holiday period prevented earlier action.

Best In Two Years

October Business Finest Since June, 1921—Admission Taxes Total $6,999,867
 (Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Washington — The heaviest theatrical attendance in more than two years was registered during October, according to figures made public by the Treasury Department showing the tax collections from admissions.
 A total of $6,999,867 was received from the admission tax during the month, an increase of $1,603,406 over that of the same month last year when $5,396,461 was reported. Collections from the special tax on theaters during the month returned $88,758, an increase of $5,455 over October, 1922, when $83,302 was collected.
 The October returns are the highest since June, 1921, when the figures were $7,362,487. In considering the latter total, it must be borne in mind that in 1921, the levy on admissions of ten cents and under was in existence and that in the present compilations, that tax no longer exists.

Gratification was expressed locally yesterday over the October tax returns and the fine business the figures

Kansas May Lift Ban

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Kansas City, Kan.—Indications are that "The Birth of a Nation," after ten years of disbarment, will at last be shown in Kansas. The film was submitted to the state censor board by C. W. Stater, exhibitor, who claims the exclusive Kansas rights, and the film was "passed" with certain eliminations. The film has had a checkered career in the state. It was barred by two administrations, those of Governors Capper and Allen.
 The showing in Kansas has been objected to by R. G. Liggett, president of the Kansas M. P. T. O., whose objections were based on the opinion that it might inspire race prejudice.

Grosses $712,045 in 34 Weeks

"The Covered Wagon," closed a thirty-four week run at the Egyptian theater in Hollywood on Saturday night. According to figures issued by Paramount yesterday, the picture grossed $712,045 in that period or an average of $20,942 per week. The total attendance, in number, reached 695,717. The gross for the final week was $25,133.

at which Arthur C. Bromberg spoke for the exchanges. He declared that the passage of the act would force many of the distributors out of business and smother competition. It is quite likely that another hearing will be held.

In a Washington dispatch published on Sunday, it was pointed out by a very well-posted individual that special legislation against motion pictures might be expected in the South and in Mid-West states because of extensive road-building enterprises undertaken by those State governments. Continued talk of millions spent in production has influenced legislators toward the belief that the picture business offers a rich field for taxation.

indicated. Just what effect this will have on these legislators in Washington, who have a good deal to say with the formation of the Administration's fiscal policy, is in doubt. No stock is being offered in the other Crandall theaters which include the Metropolitan, Central, Apollo, Savoy, Avenue Grand, York in Washington or those in Cumberland, Martinsburg and Roanoke where, it is stated, the issues have been completely absorbed "by large interests" when each house was established.

The re-zoning order was a decision in which the American Express Company's petition for an increase in rates, generally was denied. The commission that the recent fiscal statements of the railroads show that there is no longer a need for increased rates for express companies for transportation. The commission approved the rate of pick-up and delivery but makes no formal order in connection.

The express companies are given three months in which to file objections to the proposed orders, and are designed to become effective March 1.

P. H. Stilson, of Famous Players-Lasker, who is chairman of the transportation committee of the M. P. P., and who has studied for several years such problems as they affect the picture business estimated yesterday that this industry at present, spent $250,000 yearly on express shipping.

COSTS

By DANNY

Who figures them? Who looks into them? Who is to determine whether or not they should mount—as they do in picture making? Did the Packard people plan the new car would they call in the sales department before plunging into the production? Would they know how the market stood for such a car? Why would.

Did a candy manufacturer plan a new brand for $1 a pound would he call in his sales manager to see how the market stood? Before he went blooey at the new brand? He would.

Sales are Sales

Whether of motors or pictures, or shoes. Art may go into the production. Commerce steps in when comes the "lab". And how many managers call in their sales executives when they plan a picture? How many? How few would be better.

Instead the production department runs wild. Pictures are made at a cost that no human agency can make a profitable turn upon. And then what happens? The sales department is eternally cursed and ridiculed. The fact that there isn't room in the market for such a picture—that this could have been determined before it was put into production is never—or rarely—considered.

Sooner or later there must be a change from this silly program. Sooner or later a producer will understand that if the sales manager knows something of his market that his knowledge can be usefully put to work. And the sooner the better. The New Year is only around the corner. Budgets and plans for next year are now being prepared. Perhaps this might be a good time to take this innovation. If not—why sales managers at all.

Still Belongs to Woods

Martin Hermann declared yesterday that the Woods' theater, Chicago still belonged to Al H. Woods, despite telegrams, telegrams and the like to the contrary. Aaron Jones and Mar-Loew were reported the purchasers.

64 Canadian Houses

Controlled by F. P. Canadian Corp.— Valuation Placed at $5,598,518

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—The annual report of the Famous Players Canadian Corp. issued by J. P. Bickel, vice-president, shows that the company controls 64 theaters in Canada. The properties were valued at $5,598,518 as compared with $5,547,099 in 1922, while franchises of the corporation were listed at $8,512,481, which is approximately the same as before. Dividends of $320,000 were paid during the year, the same as in 1922.

Censor Fight Seen

May Be Feature of 1924 Legislature in Albany—Smith May Favor Repeal

A general attack on the censorship law will feature the beginning of the 1924 session of the Legislature, according to an Albany dispatch in yesterday's N. Y. American. Foes of censorship forecast that Republican leaders this Winter will not accept the responsibility of keeping the censorship law on the statute books.

Instead, it was asserted, the Republican chieftains will authorize a "go as you please" policy on censorship, which, opponents of censorship said, meant at least a score of Republican Assemblymen would vote for repeal.

Anti-censorship forces also are banking heavily on a strong message to the Legislature from Governor Smith in favor of the repealer and on combined support of the Democratic forces in both houses.

One of the principal lines of attack, it was reported at the capitol, will be on the requested appropriations for the censorship commission now on file with the legislative budget committees.

Increases in the appropriations requested as well as suggestions for the creation of new positions in the

Texas Exhibitor Sues 1st Nat'l

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dallas—John Sayeg of Ennis is seeking an injunction in the County Court at Waxahachie to restrain First National from allowing his opposition to run "Ashes of Vengeance." Sayeg alleges he is entitled to all of the Talmadge pictures by franchise; that "Ashes" was put on the open market and taken from him although he offered to boost his contract price.

E. A. Eschmann at First National stated yesterday he had heard nothing from Dallas relative to the Sayeg suit.

Rogers Resigns

Charles R. Rogers has resigned as an officer of Mastodon Films, Inc., and the Burr-Rogers Corp., to devote all of his time to Corinne Griffith Prod. and the new Harry Carey series to be released through Hodkinson. Miss Griffith has started work on "Lilies of the Field."

corporation has a bank loan of $1,000,000 in its payable accounts. The report shows the purchase of Allen theater assets gave Famous Players 20 theaters. The Allens, at the same time, had approximately 50 theaters throughout the Dominion. An announcement is also made that Famous Players has secured a controlling interest in Loew's theater, Montreal. The stock of this theater, as well as the stock of nine other affiliated companies, is carried at a nominal value of $1. The assets of Allen theaters, however, are carried at cost. The earnings of affiliated and Allen theaters are not included in the statement.

The statement shows that first preference shares having a par value of $50,000 were issued in part payment of the assets of Allen Theaters, while accounts payable show $90,000 was still owing on the purchase. Famous also sold $1,000,000 first mortgage sinking fund from the proceeds of which the company's indebtedness to the Canadian Paramount Corp., Ltd., was liquidated and payments also on account of mortgages on theater properties which mortgages stand at $675,594.08, as compared with $814,057.01 at the end of the previous year, a reduction of $138,462.93.

Surplus is $123,260, as compared with $114,735 for the previous months. Operating profit was $38, as against $439,192 for 1922. The 1923 depreciation charge was $122,210; for 1922 depreciation was $100,481. Before provision for income taxes, the net profit totalled $736; for 1922 the net profit was $2039. Total assets for 1923 were $4,252,929; for 1922 $14,402,087. Liabilities for 1923 include: 8% preferred, $4,150,000; 8% second preferred, $1,000,000; common stock, $7,500,000; stocks of subsidiary companies not held, $208,681; 6 1/2 percent 20 year bonds, $500,000, and mortgages on the theaters of $75,940. Surplus brought forward from 1921, $146,779, as compared with $114,735 in 1922 and $123,260 in 1923.

"Tiger Rose"—Warners

Rivoli

AMERICAN—So it may at once be said that the filmed "Tiger Rose" is quite worth while. * * * And the producers made no mistake. Little Miss Ulric again makes good. She is a surprisingly mobile and picturesque film acquisition.

DAILY NEWS—She has a good friend in the camera, which shows her up as lovely and large eyed and full of vivacity. * * * After all, maybe he's not. I like Miss Ulric in "Tiger Rose."

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * Something for which the film fan can be thankful, since the star glows as warmly on the screen as on the stage. But it is unfortunate that "Tiger Rose" was the vehicle in which the producers elected to bring her back, for the photoplay is not at all tigerish and not particularly rosy.

EVENING WORLD—* * * Is not the best picture we ever saw, not by a long way. * * * But we don't want to spread the impression that "Tiger Rose" is not a good picture, because it is; an uncommonly good picture; well made, well directed, finely photographed and, in spots, beautifully acted.

MAIL—* * * Is a satisfactory and entertaining adaptation. * * *

Those who saw the play will recall that it contained many gripping scenes. * * * In the film these incidents seem to lack the spirit of reality. * * *

Then, too, the character of Rose is not so effectively developed as on the stage. * * *

Despite these drawbacks the picture holds the interest in the story of the French-Canadian girl. * * *

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Those who witnessed Miss Ulric's debut yesterday welcome her warmly to the screen, and the impression she made is such that it is hoped that now she has been broken in under the Cooper Hewitts, she will continue to spend some time each year under their trying glare. * * *

There are several tense situations with a trap door that are well done and excellent motion picture farce. In fact for the greater part of the picture the audience at the Rivoli was kept pretty well on the edge of their seats.

Barsky in from Hollywood

L. J. ("Bud") Barsky, sales manager of Sunset Prod. is here from Hollywood. He has sold a series of six Kenneth McDonald westerns and a series of eight J. B. Warner westerns to Nathan Hirsh of Aywon for Greater New York; to 20th Century Pictures, Philadelphia for East. Pennsylvania and Southern N. J.; to Progress of Chicago and to Skouras Bros. of St. Louis.

Sells Renovator to Navy Exchange

The Film Renovating Co. of America has sold a cleaning machine to the Navy M. P. Exchange. The apparatus prolongs the life of prints through a process developed by Harry Mackler.

Lubitsch To Speak At A. M. P. A.

Ernest Lubitsch will address the A. M. P. A. at their luncheon tomorrow on "Production Methods in Europe and America." Louella Parsons will be a guest.

Bernheim Leaves for the Coast

Julius Bernheim, director general of Universal City, left New York yesterday for the Coast.

Martha Mansfield Buried

Funeral services were held yesterday at Campbell's Funeral Parlors for Martha Mansfield.

POST—* * * Without a dull moment, and, best of all, Lenore Ulric, * * * does some telling work before the camera. * * * It is one of the finest, small casts that has ever graced any "movie."

SUN—"Tiger Rose" on the screen suffers from the defects of what once were its virtues. It was so good a melodrama that it might be called the daddy of the Canadian Northwest pictures, starting a long train of such plays, but there has been such a blizzard of them that now, when the original progenitor finally arrives in a celluloid state, it appears to have been snowed under. * * * Miss Ulric * * * appears to have lost touch with the screen makeup, for she looks oddly pale for a girl of the great outdoors.

TELEGRAM—The film is as good as a play, and has the added merit of swinging out into a wider sphere of action that the confines of the spoken theater admit.

TIMES—* * * One of those productions that suffer because so many have been made on practically the same subject. * * *

It is a fairly good photoplay, with splendid exteriors and pleasing interiors; but the story lacks the necessary spark. * * *

Lenore Ulric plays the title role, but on the screen she does not picture the girl as deserving her cognomen until possibly the last chapter. * * *

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—The outstanding feature of * * * "Tiger Rose," is the sterling performance that Lenore Ulric gives in the title role. Other than the work done by Miss Ulric there is naught about the picture that makes it stand out particularly as a super-feature.

TRIBUNE—For some reason * * * holds one more than any picture of the sort we can remember. * * * Lenore Ulric, who was the star in the original productions, is the star in the picture, and she is extremely good.

WORLD—* * * A very acceptable Royal Mounted Northwest Police picture play, and in attracting uncommonly large crowds to the Rivoli to see it.

It is neither better than the average film of its type nor worse. It is just fair melodrama. * * * Miss Ulric does herself no particular favor, from the standpoint of personal attractiveness, in posing before the camera, and still she acts in pantomime as well as the average.

Parsons Lunch Saturday

A number of friends will tender a luncheon to Louella O. Parsons, on the occasion of her affiliation with the Hearst publications, at the Astor on Saturday. Will H. Negotiations Off

A temporary agreement provided that the Society would stop all actions against M. P. T. O. members while the negotiations were under way. On Sept. 5th, both sides issued a joint statement which covered the matter as explained above. A meeting was then scheduled for the following Tuesday. It was put off. On Oct. 23 the Society issued a long statement charging M. P. T. O. members with lack of faith in the matter.

Rosenthal explained yesterday that the Society would again offer exhibitors the right to purchase a license and after a certain period, would institute actions against violators.

Sydney S. Cohen refused to comment on the matter yesterday. At present, the Society has settled the music question with Minnesota, North Carolina, Michigan and Virginia. Negotiations are under way with Fred Seegert, president of the Wisconsin unit.

no record like this!

“THE COVERED WAGON”
closed last week its absolutely phenomenal run at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood.

The closing week's business broke the house record by $1624—a record established also by “The Covered Wagon.”

“The Covered Wagon” ran 34 weeks at Grauman's Egyptian and is being taken off to allow for the presentation of “The Ten Commandments.”

The total house capacity in money for the Egyptian Theatre is $25,068. “The Covered Wagon,” in its 34th week at the Egyptian Theatre, grossed $25,133.

In the 34 weeks in which “The Covered Wagon” played at the Egyptian Theatre the gross business was $712,045, and 697,717 persons saw the picture there.

The average weekly business for 34 weeks of “The Covered Wagon” run at the Egyptian Theatre was $20,942.20.

The run of “The Covered Wagon” at the Egyptian Theatre is without equal in the entire history of the entertainment business.

And throughout the entire world, no picture ever produced has consistently gotten the patronage that has been accorded James Cruze's “The Covered Wagon.”

It has established a record that is absolutely and unqualifiedly without any precedent whatsoever

—and yet—

the tremendous business done by “The Covered Wagon” will be topped by the business done by Cecil B. DeMille's “The Ten Commandments,” another Paramount Picture, which now goes into the Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood.

Row Over Film

Expected in Kansas, With Lifting of Ban on "The Birth of a Nation" By Censors

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Topeka, Kan.—The action of the Kansas censor board in permitting "The Birth of a Nation" to be shown in this state after more than seven years of banishment is threatening to stir up a sensation.

It is predicted that the fight may cover a series of incidents in connection with efforts made to get the picture into the state and efforts made to keep it out.

The picture was admitted to Kansas a short time ago. Gov. Davis said he took no part in the controversy and had told members of the board to use their own judgment. However, former Gov. Henry J. Allen, under whose administration the film was barred, has denounced Davis for permitting the showing of the picture.

The picture was permitted to enter Kansas in the first year of Governor Capper's first term. The resentment against it was so strong that it had the picture recalled. A report was circulated here a few days ago which Atty. Gen. C. B. Griffith was quoted as saying he proposes to stop the showing of the picture if possible, but now Griffith denies it is contemplating any action.

Seek Affiliation With N. W. Unit

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Fargo, N. D.—More than 50 North Dakota theater owners who attended the two-day session at Minot, discussed plans for a statewide organization. An affiliation with the Northwest unit which embodies Minnesota and North and South Dakota, was favored. Will Hays was strongly endorsed to lead the fight for the admission tax repeal. R. V. Hassen was added to the board of directors.

New Census Form

Gov't Prepares Special Report to Cover Statistics in This Industry—Effective for 1923 Data

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—E. F. Hartley, chief statistician for manufacturers of the Department of the Census has prepared Form No. 174, a special report designed to cover statistics in the motion picture industry. This form will be used for the compilation covering 1923.

The form is a development of Form No. 100, which is designed to cover manufacturers as a group. The amendments made to it, however, specifically mention studios and laboratories under Item No. 1 and under Item No. 6 call for specific information concerning the cost of raw film, settings, costumes and the like.

Through the use of the revised form, the data collected will give a more comprehensive idea of the scope of the business than would have resulted had the old draft been used.

It was the pleasure of THE FILM DAILY to cooperate with Mr. Hartley in preparing the new census form which will correlate statistics relative to this business in a more thorough manner that would have resulted had the general form been used.

Lichtman Makes Additions

Al Lichtman yesterday announced the following additions to the Universal sales force, in charge of "The Hunchback":

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

This scene shows the exterior of the Colisseum in Rome, taken at the same time that yesterday's scene of the interior was photographed, with ten thousand men gathering for the tremendous situation George Fitzmaurice photographed for his production "The Eternal City" as presented by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures).—Advt.

At Broadway Theater

Capitol

Madame Elsa Stralia, soloist, is assisting in the opening number by the orchestra, (a) selections from "Pagliacci" and "D'Armour Sull' Ali Rosee from "Trovatore." The regular weekly news magazine is second. Next is staged excerpt from "L'Arlesienne," an elaborate music number. "In the Palace of the King" is the feature. An organ solo closes.

Rialto

Besides Jackie Coogan in "Long Live the King," the only other units on the bill are "Around the World With Riesensfeld's Classical Jazz" and "Laundry," an "Out-of-the-Inkwell" comedy.

Rivoli

The first presentation is the overture, followed by the "Rivoli Pictorial," and "When the Clock Chimes Twelve," a musical offering with vocal numbers by Miriam Laseprano, and Themy Georgi, tenor; danced by Sona Protassova and Zena Larin. Lenore Ulric is next presented in "Tiger Rose." A Pat Sullivan comic, "Felix Goes A-Hunting," closes the performance.

At Other Houses

The hold-over list shows "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Astor and "The Mailman" at the Cameo. "This Freedom" is nearing its close at the Central. "Under the Red Robe" remains at the Metropolitan as does "The Covered Wagon" at the Criterion. "Scaramouche" and "The White Sister" continue at the Forty-Fourth Street and Lyric, respectively. "Flaming Youth" has been held for a second week at the Strand.

Bosworth, Pauline Starke, Edmund Lowe.

A Goldwyn Picture. Written for the screen by June Mathis.

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

Newspaper Opinions

"In the Palace of the King"—Gold-Cosmop.—Capitol

AMERICAN—There are magnificent ball room scenes, court climaxes, and assorted thrills throughout.

DAILY NEWS—Settings and all that are the usual elaborate ones, and the acting is pretty near being quite O. K. But the plot of the picture somehow reminds you of a great many you saw act so long ago.

EVENING JOURNAL—"In the Palace of the King," from a scenic point of view, is a gorgeous production. Cedric Gibbons, the art director provided * * * settings that make one gasp. The exteriors are lofty and magnificent, and the interiors are entrancingly lovely. The costumes, too, are works of art.

EVENING WORLD—Seldom have we seen a picture that was easier to gaze upon; nor one that took so little mental effort to sit through * * *

MAIL—* * * a story that is rather impossible. What makes the picture worth while is its masterful direction and the artistry of its scenery.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * a picture of real worth. * * * Blanche Sweet as Dolores is excellent. Her charm has every opportunity of fascinating the audience and lending that something which she has to the picture.

POST—Pictorially "In the Palace of the King" is very beautiful. The costumes as well as the settings are as gorgeous as any that have been seen in the recent influx of romantic costume films. Not a fault can be found with the cast either—it is all-star. But the story is another matter. F. Marion Crawford's tale of the court of King Philip II has been made into the very thinnest of screen plots. It is far too slight to have had such perfect settings built for it.

SUN—* * * certainly its pictorial quality is very great. * * * His direction is generally skillful. * * *

TELEGRAM—* * * takes a well merited place among the worth while screen offerings of the year.

TIMES—For colossal settings and marvelous scenic effects there have been only a few pictures that can approach "In the Palace of the King." * * * The story * * * in picturized form is halting and vague and fails to carry the spectators' attention, and in one spot the tragic leans toward the ridiculous.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—* * * proves to be just "another of those tin hat costume pictures."

TRIBUNE—In speaking of the merits of "In the Palace of the King," we should mention first the prologue and then the photography. Aside from these features we found the Marion Crawford story as it appeared on the screen at the Capitol extremely dull.

WORLD—"In the Palace of the King," is an involved cloak and sword drama so very long that it tangles itself all up in the folds of its cloak and trips over its sword.

"Long Live the King"—Metro Rialto

DAILY NEWS—I have an idea that Jackie's friends will like "Long Live the King," although it does prove he needs some one to plant a book on his head. I won't say that age approacheth, but I do suspect that before long the rather long bob cut Jackie is wearing will be replaced by a sterner clip.

EVENING JOURNAL—* * * the kid is as sparkling, amusing and clever as ever, although the photoplay is a stagey and stiff piece of arrant artificiality.

EVENING WORLD—"Long Live the King," is rattling good film entertainment, ranking with the best we've seen in many a moon, and while we're saying "Long Live the King," let's also shout a little huzzah of "Long Live Jackie!"

HERALD—It is an excellent story, and has been handled with great skill by its adapters, Eve Unsell and C. Gardner Sullivan, and by its director, Victor Schertzinger. They have made a beautiful stirring picture of it—* * *

MAIL—* * * gives the screen the finest and most enjoyable exhibition of his genius in "Long Live the King." * * * The film is well directed and the action nicely balanced so that there is not a dull moment. An excellent cast * * *

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It deserves medals all the way round, beginning with Mary Roberts Rinehart, who wrote the delightful story.

POST—At last Jackie Coogan, after several mediocre photoplays, has a story suited to him. * * * And so it goes, a good cast with enough adult interest to welcome the clever Jackie in every moment he gives to the enjoyable story.

SUN—All who believe in Alice and Graustark robes and crowns, plumes and bands and swords and all such delightful flummery will find the "Long Live the King," rather pleasant than otherwise.

TELEGRAM—The sets are remarkable and tend a pictorial value to the story.

Jackie has a long and distinguished cast supporting him.

TIMES—One of the best pictures in which Jackie Coogan has appeared. * * * It is a photoplay, fantastic of course, that is produced so splendidly that it would be very difficult to find a fault with. * * *

Here is a hearty, wholesome film entertainment which nobody will be ashamed of liking.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It's about as entertaining a presentation as this youngster has given to the screen although it most likely will not be classed with his "Oliver Twist."

TRIBUNE—We did not consider Jackie Coogan's "Long Live the King," a very good picture; * * * began interestingly and ended well, but, between these two parts, there was no shortest distance and no straight line. The film sagged so that we thought it would break of its own weight.

WORLD—* * * the boy is seen in a gloriously fine picture play, one which seems made expressly for him and one in which he is so fine an actor and so appealing as a little figure of royal lineage that no one will see it and come away unimpressed. We want every one to go there.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Read along your ideas. Let other fellow know how you came up.

Something Very Unusual

Los Angeles—An unusual stunt utilized by the California, in inducing its patrons of the coming of a new Davies, in "Little Old New England" directing director Fred Miller obtained permission from the Clune interests in Los Angeles to build what claimed to be the largest billboard made. An ordinary billboard is 14 sheet stand, while Miller's board held 28-sheets. Miller wanted bigger flash than that so he took 28-sheet boards and made them one, producing an 84-sheet stand, which reached half-way between Broadway and Spring St. on Ninth

Sign Favors Shaded Letters

Waco, Tex.—Effective shaded letter lobby panels were used by manager Epstein of the Royal theater during the run of "Rose O' The Bay" panel outside the house was covered by a hand painted one sheet. It contained nothing but the title of picture in heavy shaded letters. The brilliant blue of the coloring and distinctive form of letters connected to make the sign a magnet in such a way that no photograph could do it justice to.

Exploit Short Subjects

Springfield, Mo.—Another short subject in for exploitation not long when the Palace played the latest comedy, "Bow Wow." Twenty howling canines were kept on the main street. Each carried cardboard signs with the word "Bow Wow" on each side. The signs were then sent racing down the

Other Features Peggy Dolls

Waco, Tex.—The Princess recently had a contest to find Baby Peggy's "doll," in conjunction with Sage-the leading department store. Peggy dolls played a big part in the contest, in which both the exhibitor and store profited.

DOING

By DANNY

When the President of these United States talks—as Coolidge yesterday, it means something. When the Executive of this country says “the amusement and education value of moving pictures ought not to be taxed,” he voices something more important than many appreciate.

Assuming that President Coolidge interested a tremendous stroke has been accomplished for the repeal of the existing admission taxes. And a lot of people will be appreciative. It may be that developments arising about a condition where the repeal of these taxes will be realized. But that the President has them removed is not to be doubted.

That President Coolidge is interested in the question of the moment is undeniable. But the President has many other problems of importance under consideration. And that, in the pressure of events he could remember the motion picture is unimpressive. There is nothing in his movements to indicate anything but that he made his own decision. But the question early arises: What, if anything, did Will Hays have to do with this?

Apparently Hays will disclaim any part whatsoever in this connection. Those who know the internals of Washington will appreciate the possibility of action without a move made. That is what makes Washington interesting.

is in matters such as that which Will Hays places a valuation on his work that makes monetary consideration a matter of no consideration whatsoever.

in L. A. With “Blue Laws” (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—“Blue law” advocates threatening to introduce a bill to close theaters on Sunday and to change the present censorship ordinance to a form more drastic. There is a good deal of agitation over the interruption of the dancers’ ball recently when dancing was ordered stopped after midnight.

Here Mabel Normand as “The Extra Girl,” Mack Sennett’s greatest winner, is waiting for the call to stardom. This feature, distributed by Associated Exhibitors, is proving one of the season’s greatest hits.

Coolidge for Tax Repeal

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—President Coolidge yesterday delivered his annual message to Congress.

His attitude toward the repeal of admission taxes is expressed in the following excerpt from his message:

“I especially commend a decrease on earned income, and further abolition of admission, message, and nuisance taxes. The amusement and education value of moving pictures ought not to be taxed.”

To Come Up at Meeting Next Thursday—Accountants Suggested For All Key Cities

A plan to eliminate large amounts of money lost annually through failure or inability of state right operators to pay their debts will be discussed at a meeting of state right operators called for next Thursday, at the Hotel Astor. Frederick H. Elliott and Charles B. Hoy have been gauging the sentiment of various distributors for some days.

It has been suggested that a group of certified public accountants, one in each city, be engaged to go over the books of various exchanges in order to check up on sales and then report to the state righters in New York. Through the Hoy Reporting Service, it is figured that uncollected debts can be reduced appreciably. This new move is part of the Hoy plan already outlined to organize five different branches of the business into credit groups.

Praise For De Mille

ed away all doubt concerning opinion of it. The opinions

EXAMINER—"The screen has borne a greater tale or told it conviction. It unquestionably is DeMille's magnus opus. The greatness of the laws and legal writing civilized countries is presented impressive beauty and grandeur."

EXPRESS—"It is the voice of a nation. Its very massiveness, the difficulties confronting the director, the broadness of the canvas compel the utmost admiration."

HERALD—"A mighty picture, matically, photographically, scenically. It is a triumph for the beyond all expectation, and proves good can be disseminated through theater as well as the church. Cecil DeMille and Jeanie Macpherson are entertainingly preach a sermon reaching in effect than all the ministers from now to doomsday."

NEWS—"It is to be hoped that one of the hundred and ten millions of these United States will have the opportunity to see this production. It is one of the greatest messages ever brought to the American people. Mere description of the action could not tell you its power and influence. The director has incorporated everything that he thinks of to make it interesting, and instructive."

RECORD—"The public is going to be mighty playing under the spell of the Ten Commandments."

TIMES—"It is a picture that you will see by any stretch of the imagination miss. It offers new splendors in photography and theatrical wonders hitherto revealed. It is the greatest masterpiece of pictorial artistry."

HOLLYWOOD CITIZEN—"The picture will live through centuries to come. The words can but give a hazy description of this film of films."

HOLLYWOOD NEWS—"When you possess words to properly describe the glory of the sunrise, the majesty of the love of good women, then may you expect an adequate description of the picture of 'The Ten Commandments.' It is more than a mere motion picture." The writer describes the prologue in detail but from telling the modern story as it is, rob readers of the most wonderful they ever had."

GLORIA SWANSON

in

“The Humming Bird”

A Sidney Olcott Production

WE'VE seen it.

And this we know:

Millions of persons will cram thousands of theatres in order to see it.

Too free use of superlatives in trade advertising has weakened their use.

But superlatives are inadequate to describe the business possibilities of Gloria Swanson in “The Humming Bird.”

If Gloria ever was a success in your theatre—and you know she has been—she'll triple any success she ever attained—in “The Humming Bird.”

If Sidney Olcott ever showed his merit—and you know he has in “The Green Goddess” and “Little Old New York”—he has topped anything he ever did—in “The Humming Bird.”

Strong statements, but true.

Adjectives, praise, promises—we could use a bushel-ful on this picture.

But when all's said and done it means this:

Here's a bigger and greater picture if ever there was one. Gloria Swanson in “The Humming Bird” is going to do absolutely tremendous business for exhibitors without any question of doubt.

You'll be able to see for yourself soon.

It's a Paramount Picture

Receptive on Tax

There is a growing sentiment in Congress for the repeal of the tax and the Presidential pronouncement was listened to attentively by both legislative branches.

Two bills looking for the amendment of that portion of the revenue law that imposes admission and seating taxes have been introduced, one by Representative Sol Bloom, and the other by Representative Clarence MacGregor, both of New York State.

Praise Coolidge's Stand

Sydney S. Cohen, in a statement issued yesterday said:

"It was gratifying to read the statement contained in the annual message of President Calvin Coolidge to Congress, especially his recommendation for the repeal of the admission taxes, as it expresses an appreciation of the public service activities of the motion picture industry. The co-ordinated effort and co-operation of all forces in the industry are required to help carry into effect the recommendations made by the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury."

Charles L. O'Reilly, of the T. O. C. C. said:

"The President's message * * * is a great recognition by the highest official in the land, of the work done by the industry, and will be received with appreciation throughout the country regardless of party politics."

Would Lift Music Tax

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Representative Albert Johnson, of Hoquiam, Washington, has introduced a bill looking for an amendment to the copyright law in order to relieve exhibitors and others using copyrighted music from the payment of the so-called music tax. Johnson declares that the tax exceeds the intent of the law which was designed to protect authors and composers and not to fatten the treasuries of publishers. It is his intention to push the bill during the early days of the 68th Congress in order to bring about its passage.

Robinson Ill In Hospital

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Dee Robinson, of Peoria, a prominent Mid-West exhibitor, has been brought to the Presbyterian Hospital to undergo a major operation. Robinson is head of the Madison Theaters Co., operating a chain of picture and vaudeville houses in Peoria and also the Irvin, at Bloomington.

Abandon "North of 36"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Times quotes James Cruze as stating that production of "North of 36", has been abandoned by Famous because of its similarity to "The Covered Wagon." Cruze will next make "Magnolia," and declares, according to the Times: "I'm going to make 'Magnolia,' and I'm going to stick to the simpler type of drama, with interior settings as well as exterior for the time being. I'm not the great western director that you think I am."

Robert T. Kane, yesterday confirmed the Times' statement and declared the picture had been put aside "for the time being."

Music Tax Fight Starts Again

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Milwaukee—A suit, re-opening the music tax fight in Milwaukee, has been filed by the Skidmore Music Co., of New York, against Otto L. Meister, owner of one of the neighborhood houses. The music company charges Meister with rendering the song, "Last Night On The Back Porch," in the latter's house without paying the tax.

Sees Big Year For "Ind'p'ts"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Hollywood—That the new year will see the greatest producing activities in the history of the independents is the prediction of Mike C. Levee, president of United Studios. In this connection, he says:

"The production of tremendous picturizations involving large outlays on the part of the big organizations put the majority of independents in a position where they could not compete with the product being offered the first run theaters. The current season has clearly demonstrated that these expensive pictures do not necessarily bring profits commensurate with costs. I believe that the trend for 1924 will be toward less expensive productions, pictures that are strong in story values rather than in tremendous sets and investitures that have caused high costs of production. The fact that 'the story is the thing' has once again been demonstrated in no uncertain manner."

Garvy Going to Coast

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

New Haven—Louis Garvy, for seventeen years publicity representative for S. Z. Poli has resigned to take over exploitation for the theaters acquired recently by Famous from Sid Grauman in Los Angeles. Garvy was given a testimonial dinner on Tuesday, at which he was presented with a cash gift of $1,500 pooled by his various friends here.

Business In Northwest Better

N. Y. Heads List

tributed $13,694,767 to Nat'l quota of $69,340,585 in Admission Taxes—By States

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Approximately $69,000 was collected in admission taxes by the Internal Revenue Department for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922, and ending June 30, 1923. This, of course, includes districts.

The total for the year was made up by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in September, when the figure was slightly higher than one given above. This was because the final returns had been gone over. The Commissioner then decided a compilation by states was the way. The compilation has now been released.

It shows that, from the six revenue districts in New York State, the total totaled $13,694,767.16. The second and third districts which include downtown New York, brought $2,357,852.6. The 1st New York district, which takes in Brooklyn, brought $2,783,370.50 to its credit. The total for the entire country is $69,340,585.82, which gives New York about twenty per cent of the total.

manufacturers of copyright material that this country become a member of the Berne Copyright Convention." Bloom said in explaining his bill. "I understand that the Dominion of Canada is now preparing to set up the same barrier against us as we now have against that country and the rest of the world.

"Millions of dollars are lost annually by the pirating of plays and motion pictures because we are not members of this union."

The bill was prepared by Register of Copyrights Solberg, and would put the United States for the first time into the Berne Convention or International Copyright Union, under which all works having copyright in the United States will have instantaneous protection in England, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and all other civilized countries that are already members.

Up to the present time this country has been debarred from entering the union by the so-called manufacturers' clause refusing authority for copyright of any work not printed in type set or plates made in this country and also bound here.

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS"

A Paramount Picture

Produced by CECIL B. DEMILLE

It opened at the Hollywood Egyptian Theatre Dec. 4th and here's what the Los Angeles critics say:

Edwin Schallert, Times: "It is a picture that you cannot by any stretch of the imagination afford to miss. It offers new splendors in photography and theatrical wonders hitherto unrevealed. It is the greatest masterpiece thus far of pictorial artistry."

Florence Lawrence, Examiner: "The screen has never borne a greater tale or told it with more conviction. It unquestionably is Cecil B. DeMille's magnum opus. The great foundation of the laws and legal writings of most civilized countries is presented with impressive beauty and grandeur."

L. B. Fowler, News: "It is to be hoped that every one of the one hundred and ten million people of these United States will have an opportunity to see this production. It conveys one of the greatest messages ever brought before the American people. Mere description of the action could not tell you its tremendous power and influence. The director and author have incorporated everything you can think of to make it interesting, fascinating and instructive."

Pearl Rall, Express: "It is the voice of inspiration. Its very massiveness, the apparent difficulties confronting the director and the broadness of the canvas compel respect and utmost admiration."

Guy Price, Herald: "A mighty picture dramatically, photographically, scenically and morally. It is a triumph for the camera beyond all expectation and proves that real good can be disseminated through the theatre as well as the church. Cecil B. DeMille and Jeanie Macpherson subtly and entertainingly preach a sermon more far-reaching in effect than all the words of ministers from now to doomsday."

Ted Taylor, Record: "The public is going to be a mighty plaything under the spell of 'The Ten Commandments.'"

Albert Dorris, Hollywood News: "When a writer possesses words to properly describe the glory of the sunrise, the majesty of Niagara, the love of good women, then may be expected an adequate description of the message of 'The Ten Commandments.' It is far more than a mere motion picture." The critic describes the prologue in detail but refrains from telling the modern story as it "would rob readers of one of the most wonderful evenings they ever had."

H. C. Evans, Hollywood Citizen: "The picture will live through centuries to come. Mere words can but give a hazy description of this film of films."

It opens at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, Dec. 21st

Aileen St. John-Brenon, in Morning Telegraph: "An event that has long been awaited...the audience at the Rivoli was kept on the edges of their seats. Sidney Franklin has handled the situations well."

Variety: "Lenore Ulric has created a living, breathing character...screen person... in 'Tiger Rose.' Her performance is as individual and convincing as her part in 'Kiki.'"

Hariette Underhill, in New York Tribune: "The David Belasco-Willard Mack play, which Warner Brothers have put on the screen, holds one more than any picture of the sort we can remember."

New York Evening Telegram: "The film is as good as a play and has the added merit of swinging out into a wider sphere of action."

Alan Dale, in the New York American: "The scenes are admirable. There are what one might almost call 'Belasco effects.' There is the lightning that dazzles, and there is the rainstorm that is astounding, fierce, and devastating. It seemed like Belasco let loose for the occasion."

Quinn Martin, in New York World: "Large and rather excited crowds rushed into the Rivoli yesterday and last night."

New York Evening World: "'Tiger Rose' is a fine picture, finely done and really shouldn't be missed."

New York Evening Journal: "'Tiger Rose' is something for which the film fan can be thankful."

Madden On Tax

of Appropriations Committee ould Keep Tax on Admissions of High Grade Houses

The current issue of "The Maga-Wall Street," is an interesting article on the repeal of the taxes on Martin B. Madden, chairman of the Appropriations Committee in Congress.

In this article he says: "I would not like to see luxury taxes those now imposed on admissions to theaters.
It should be remembered that there is a tax now on small neighborhood theaters attended by children and by the very poor, where the admission is not above 10 cents. This is what untaxed theatrical amusement will can be provided for those who may need it; those who want to get better should be willing to pay taxes for the privilege of enjoying this form of amusement.

There is no enemy of theaters, of the theater any other kind. Whatever has been said for them as places of entertainment and for their esthetic value they are not necessities of life that we should do is to lower, as far as possible, the taxes imposed on persons who cannot afford to go to the theater; and we can do this in any measure by requiring those who go to pay specific taxes for the privilege."

On the same page appear illustrations of picture houses. One shows the front of a "small, neighborhood house attended by children and the very poor"—and where at the moment there is no tax where the admission is over 10 cents, and another showing a line up of limousines of what purports to be a theater entrance, which bears this

The theater-admission tax which has been championed would be levied on the higher-priced establishments and those who want something better should be willing to pay for the privilege."

Why Managers?

Inquisitive people help stir things. Sometimes they mess things up. But in this instance an inquisitive inquiry is interesting.
Says an important man in pictures:

"If exhibitors are going to run these tremendously long; very tiring pictures why have real managers run their houses? All they need to do is to start selling tickets and let the rest take care of itself."

And he's right. What has a real manager to do when he takes in a 10 or worse still, a 12 reel feature? Very little. Certainly there isn't a chance to develop or upbuild his program.
Either the big picture carries the show. Or it doesn't.

LAEMMLE'S IDEA

About showing "The Hunchback" in regular picture houses.
At $1.65 top. Made some people sit up and take notice. Evidently a sincere move. To have their big special go in picture houses instead of being road shown. And from that viewpoint very worth while. Certainly it should stop yelping. That exhibitor who complains of pictures going into legitimate houses.
To his detriment. That type of exhibitor will have a very good chance of demonstrating whether or not he means what he says.

Row In T. O. C. C.

Politics Enter Dealings, Is Charge—Members Evading Resolution on "Enemies"

An internal scrap is under way in the ranks of the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce. It was reported Friday, but denied at the T. O.
C. C., that 20 members had resigned.

Charges of playing politics were aired in certain quarters. The impression was prevalent that internal dissension had played a sufficiently important part to jeopardize the interests of the larger theater owners in the T. O. C. C. It was pointed out in one quarter that Marcus Loew was forced to resign because of the nature of some of the resolutions passed and the opinion was voiced that unless a change was made in the administration of the body, its future functioning as a well organized exhibitor body was in grave doubt.

Louis F. Blumenthal admitted that he had resigned as a member and that the board of directors in rejecting the resignation asked him to appear before it. Blumenthal did so and explained what prompted him to withdraw. He said that he could not continue to act as a bona fide T. O.
C. C. member in the face of violations of the resolution binding members not to book "Enemies of Women" until the matter had been settled on behalf of the entire body. He charged—and in this was supported by others—that certain exhibitors had gotten around the resolution by having their partners sign for the picture.

Blumenthal also is at odds over the resolution preventing members

8 Pictures Reviewed In 17 Cities

"Accidental Husband"—C. B. C. Colonial, Indianapolis

The acting throughout is excellent. He forgets that he is seeing a movie, and the storm scene is as well done as any.

A far-fetched story that has been told in this case by some very effective acting from the part of the fine cast and by the direction of Dallas M. Fitzgerald.

"The Acquittal"—Universal Century, Baltimore

"The Acquittal" is an interestingly melodramatic, satisfactorily acted in the parts by the slender and lovely Claire and Norman Kerry.

(EVENING)—The cast is splendid. The film handles the difficult situation of our interest through flashbacks well. It never once drags.

"The Acquittal"—Garrick, Minneapolis

"The Acquittal" is better, as a film, than any rate, than plays in the same city as the "Cat and Canary" and "It is a brilliant conception" and "It is well worth witnessing."

"The Acquittal"—MORNING AND EVENING

One of the most baffling of mystery pictures, taken from Rita Weiman's stage play, "The Acquittal," is enacted by the best cast.

"Anna Christie"—1st Nat'l Rivoli, Baltimore

(EVENING)—"Anna Christie" marks the greatest step forward which has been made since Griffith produced his "The Birth of a Nation." Unless greatly mistaken, it will take the years, or more to catch up with "Anna Christie."

"Anna Christie"—The Chicago, Chicago

(EVENING)—But I hope you will go to see the picture. It is not just at film fans appreciate and applaud the ideas, human characterizations and the acting that make them think.

That is just that kind of film "Anna Christie" gives a fine performance as

Here is fine example of a picture worth to a picture. Mr. O'Neill's "Anna Christie" is a play of character and necessity is situation. With the barest skeleton of story, these actors bring flesh and blood and emotion to the thing, and make it a moving picture.

A highly sound and appealing picture by strict fidelity to the original. Everything that Pauline Lord and Marion did on the stage is on the screen. The picture is added that is the picturization of some stage description of what happened off stage. The acting are direct quotations from the

"Anna Christie" is life. Not a word of life. The other side. The people—some people—don't know what they are but a kind that crime annals

Marion, * * * gives a marvelous performance of the father to the screen. The picture is splendid—a better actress and a better woman than she was years ago. William Russell does some of the best acting of the picture and Eugenie Besserer * * *

"Anna Christie"—Walnut, Cincinnati

Here is no stilted artificiality, no avoidance of the realities, no prudishness about the unpleasant facts of life. "Anna Christie" we have a manly, forward treatment of a phase of life that is now to exist. * * * Such strikingly such ingenious paths, such bitter-sweet mingled with an irrepressible better things, as are manifested in Sweet in the title role, serve not only * * * the actress who interprets the most eminent artists of the picture. William Russell gives a vigorous and convincing portrayal.

TIMES—STAR—* * * beautifully and intelligently done and the several characters are made to stand out with artistic distinctness and individuality. Blanche Sweet reveals new depths of dramatic powers in the title role.

Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—The cast throughout measures finely. George Marion * * * does equally well on the screen, which is high praise. William Russell was selected for the savor-lover role "Mat," and here, as with Miss Sweet, is the greatest thing Russell has ever done. Eugenie Besserer plays old "Martha," with exceptional skill. * * * There is genuine life in this picture. * * * Alice has done a great work and so has the cast he selected.

"Ashes of Vengeance"—1st Nat'l Regent, Detroit

NEWS—Norma Talmadge's most ambitious production attempt, is one of the most interesting costume spectacles of the year. * * * Wallace Beery as the villain, almost runs away with first honors.

"Bright Lights of B'way"—Principal Fay's, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—On the screen is one of the best photoplays, in some respects, that this house has offered in some time.

"The Broken Wing"—Preferred Parkway, Baltimore

SUN (Evening)—There is action and plenty of it. * * * A very pleasing comedy of minor proportions played in a light way by a group of skilled mummies who seem to be having as good a time as you.

"Cameo Kirby"—Fox Modern-Beacon, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—To be sure the film is melodrama, but what of that when it does not pretend to be more, when the yarn is simply and clearly told and the thrills are legitimate.

"His Children's Children"—F. P.-L. Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—A luxurious society play with a complicated plot and gorgeous setting is "His Children's Children." * * * audience around the piece much to its liking. * * * George Fawcett is easily the star.

NEWS—Although the film aims to preach a moral the purpose is not too manifest. There is great story interest. * * *

TIMES—It's a real picture with a real cast, production and variety of incident. * * * The picture has been given careful production, the settings rich and sumptuous; the ballroom scenes done on a lavish scale.

"The Common Law"—Selznick Metropolitan, Washington

HERALD—This colorful romance has been mounted with lavishness and a high degree of spectacular beauty.

STAR—The settings are elaborate, and the street scenes depicting New York on New Year's Eve are interesting.

TIMES—* * * a well-balanced, highly dramatic and appealing picture. * * * The cast alone would carry the production to the ranks of the distinguished.

"The Country Kid"—Warners' Randolph, Chicago

NEWS—It is a better than ordinary movie, sort of like an old-time Oliver Optic story book, but told better than Oliver Optic could tell it in printer's ink.

"The Courtship of Myles Standish"—Asso.-Exhibitors—Madison, Detroit

FREE PRESS—* * * the most lavish and costly he (Charles Ray) has ever made. It shows Mr. Ray in an entirely new role, which promises to restore him once more to public favor.

NEWS—* * * a radical departure from anything that Ray has ever attempted. It is a big picture, made in a pretentious manner. * * *

But because of its wide scope * * * Ray's own personality seldom finds a complete outlet. To his credit, it should be mentioned that he never sacrifices the story for the sake of personal exploitation.

TIMES—The most interesting episodes of the entire picture, we think, are those depicting the voyage of the Mayflower across the Atlantic.

"The Covered Wagon"—F. P.-L. Palace, Montreal

STAR—Let it be said at once that this is a very ambitious and largely successful attempt to visualize a significant page in American history. * * * It exemplifies that spirit with a fidelity and a strength of conviction unusual in any film. There is irresistible appeal in the spectacle of the great caravan.

Poli's, Washington

HERALD—The plot is pure melodrama. But it is melodrama done in a big way and in a setting which would carry any plot. It was noticeable that the audience at the premiere applauded, not the acting so much as the big historic moments. * * * The spirit of the story, rather than the plot, makes "The Covered Wagon," a great picture.

STAR—* * * a vitality as natural as if it were real life instead of so many lights and shadows cast on a white cotton screen.

TIMES—Adjectival praise of the production must be comparatively faint, because of the paucity of the English language. * * * Without a doubt the greatest picture of pioneer life ever presented on the screen. It is one of the finest motion pictures ever made.

"Daring Years"—Equity Garden, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—Mr. Goodman has prolonged the suspense, interpolated a goodly number of thrills and throws in a lavish scene or two in order to make the menu a well rounded out one.

New Lyric, Minneapolis

STAR—The picture is really very interesting, and is not choked with a lot of sloppy sentiment.

Mary Carr gives the outstanding portrayal in the production.

"David Copperfield"—Asso. Exhib. Aldine, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—Much of the charm and appeal of one of Dickens' greatest novels is portrayed. * * *

INQUIRER—"David Copperfield," greatly cut and sentimentalized almost beyond recognition. * * * Names are about all that are left of the original novel. Everything else has been twisted and distorted to make an approved 1923 model.

NORTH AMERICAN—The picture is a work of art in every respect and is a rare treat for those who thirst for art in motion pictures.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—The reason for qualifying the first statement is that the flavor and atmosphere and sentiment of Dickens have been captured by the clever director. That should be enough and satisfy the most fastidious.

RECORD—There is much that is omitted—that could hardly be helped. But the story holds well together and the essentials are not omitted. Such pictures are of the sort to help everyone to enjoy life to the full.

"Don't Marry For Money"—Weber and North—Central, Washington

HERALD—* * * domestic drama of unusual strength.

STAR—The climax is thrilling.

TIMES—It is a sensational picturization of the big problems of married life, well directed and well acted.

"The Eagle's Feather"—Metro Victoria, Philadelphia

INQUIRER—One of those extravagant and almost impossible stories of the West. * * *

NORTH AMERICAN—Miss Alden's characterization is indeed a work of art, but that is what one expects from such a fine actress.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—Mary Alden demonstrates that she is a capable young character actress in "The Eagle's Feather." * * * The story itself is quite negligible, but the acting throughout is excellent.

RECORD—It is one of the most interesting of Western screen dramas seen here for some time. The story is given added interest by the clever enactment of the principal character, that of the Eagle, a masculine sort of woman, portrayed by Mary Alden.

"The Eleventh Hour"—Fox Isis, Indianapolis

NEWS—It has everything that all fast-moving melodramas should have. It speeds along at whirlwind pace and introduces all the modern speed vehicles and an airplane thrown in.

TIMES—* * * a speedy melodramatic vehicle. * * *

Loew's, Montreal

STAR—The picture is admitted to be a "thriller," and is can be described in no other terms.

"Enemies of Women"—Gold-Cosmop. New Astor, Minneapolis

STAR—The drama is unfolded by an excellent cast of players. * * * "Enemies of Women" is a pretentious photoplay and is well worth witnessing.

"The Eternal Struggle"—Metro Orpheum, Detroit

NEWS—The open stretches are pictured by some remarkable scenic shots and there is always a bit of action for the camera man to register.

"Fashion Row"—Metro Capitol, Detroit

FREE PRESS—The story was filmed with all the color and lavishness of Miss Murray's previous productions, and admirers of this young woman will see her at her best.

NEWS—* * * Mae Murray has wisely prepared a story for her latest vehicle that is strong enough to stand on its own merits. "Fashion Row," * * * is about the best display of both story and acting that Miss Murray has released since "On With the Dance."

TIMES—* * * a typical Mae Murray title and in all due credit to Mae, setting off one of the most substantial stories Mac has had in a long time. * * * The supporting cast * * * is a good bit responsible.

"Flaming Passion"—Warners' Modern-Beacon, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—Despite the valiant efforts of Irene Rich, * * * and despite the efforts of Monte Blue, as her second lover, interest lags, until a roaring melodramatic conclusion is tacked to the piece. * * * Unfortunately, the excitement is hardly in keeping with the rest of the film.

State, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—* * * "Flaming Passion," is a fairly well made picture. There is nothing excitingly new in it, and it is much too long, but it does have action and love interest and a strong and righteous clash between women who love the same man, and I should therefore conclude that "Flaming Passion," will be a popular picture. It also has plenty of improbabilities, but they do not materially detract from the picture's entertainment possibilities.

Stanley, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—The film contains a love interest that only works itself out to the satisfaction of the audience by the killing off of a superfluous pair of spouses. There are passages remarkable for reality that thrill.

INQUIRER—Brilliantly directed and photographed the feature film is well worth viewing if only for its climax, the forest fire. This scene is one of the best pieces of work given the celluloid public in years.

NORTH AMERICAN—... the picture easily stands alone as an excellent production. ... The fire is exceptionally well handled and elicited a few gasps of horror from the audience.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—... cannot, by the greatest stretch of the imagination, be called an original story, but it is far more entertaining than most pictures of its class.

RECORD—... a spectacular production, especially in its final stages.

This catastrophe was superbly staged, and was full of many tense situations.

"Flaming Youth"—1st Nat'l Metropolitan, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—Tense drama, charming romance, sprightly comedy on a background of "flapperism" and "jazz."

Newman, Kansas City

POST—This is the picture of the week and worth while seeing. In spite of its risky material and daring expose of the modern flapper's trend of thought it holds one and Miss Moore seems a living apology for anything at all suggestive.

"Going Up"—Asso. Exhibitors
Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capital St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—It is truly a tragedy of laughter that makes corking entertainment. ... Some picture and no mistake.

POST-DISPATCH—The subtitles are exceptionally clever and the action leads up skillfully to the big thrill—the actual race in the air. Camera ingenuity was used to the limit in picturing the air scenes. ... The combination of thrill and humor in the flying episodes is a remarkable achievement.

STAR—... an excellent movie farce.

TIMES—If you haven't seen "Going Up" on the stage you will find the screen version entertaining. It is not hilarious. There are more chuckles than laughs, but it is amusing throughout.

"Hearts Aflame"—Metro
Delmonte, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Realism is the outstanding feature. ... From start to finish the picture carries with it an air of conviction that only sincere effort could produce.

POST-DISPATCH—"Hearts Aflame" at the Delmonte is a highly melodramatic film of the so-called realistic school.

TIMES—Despite the handicap of a foolish and misleading title, the film is worth seeing. The story is good, the acting is good, and there is a forest fire scene that has been well done.

"Her Reputation"—1st Nat'l Liberty, Kansas City

POST—... rather well-handled story. ... There are many other well-drawn characters as well as a remarkable flood scene and a thrilling forest fire.

May McAvoy appears to excellent advantage.

"The Huntress"—1st Nat'l
Eastman, Rochester

JOURNAL AND POST—Colleen Moore has brought just the light touch to the character of Bela to make it winsome and appealing. The story is a sprightly little romance, "different" enough to hold interest and consistently well acted.

TIMES-UNION—... is as amusing as it is impossible. ... Colleen Moore is very quaint and charming in the role of Bela, and Lloyd Hughes plays the role of the boy in very manly fashion.

"In Search of a Thrill"—Metro
Park-Mall, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—Viola Dana gets rather more serious than usual in "In Search of a Thrill." ... There are not so many prankish tricks. The film has a moral and tells us that we should always remember the poor, and further, that one finds true happiness only in serving others. But it is a pretty dreary, dull waste of celluloid.

"A Lady of Quality"—Universal
Rivoli, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Romance done in an enchanting way with colorful array of gorgeous costumes, divine settings and masterful acting, by three of the principal characters, Virginia Valli, Milton Sills and Earle Foxe, is on display ... in "A Lady of Quality."

STAR—... is indifferent entertainment, pleasing to the eye, but not so much so to the head or heart.

TIMES—There are excellent settings and costumes, and the beautiful photography makes up for the lack of coherent plot. It is a "spectacle and costume" picture mostly.

"The Light That Failed"—F. P.-L.
Howard, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—Percy Marmont's work ... will live for many years to come. ... He is most impressive in the scenes in his studio when he is hastening the completion of his masterpiece knowing that his eyesight is failing him.

State, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—But to take a famous novel, to hack it to pieces, transmute all its gold to lead, "jazz" it in spots, make all its subtleties obvious, pervert the course of its action, cheapen its most effective moments, lampoon its characters—this is unforgivable.

It is fair to admit by way of preface that Mr. Melford's movie is more entertaining to an indiscriminating audience than three-quarters of the programme-pictures.

"Little Old New York"—Gold.-
Cosmop.
Piccadilly, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—Besides the gratifying surprise Miss Davies gave us, there are other distinctive qualities which make the photoplay one of the most interesting and convincing in its realism we have ever seen.

JOURNAL AND POST—... Marion Davies has one of the most appealing roles of her screen career.

TIMES-UNION—Marion Davies, in the role of "Pat," gives an excellent characterization of a girl impersonating a boy. ... The picture is a series of spectacles so firmly woven into the warp and woof of the story that they build up the interest instead of detracting from it. The mob scenes are most skillfully handled and the atmosphere of the period is never lost.

For a half dozen reasons this is a picture that everyone should see at least once.

"The Lone Star Ranger"—Fox
Rialto, Milwaukee

JOURNAL—There is plenty of rousing action and good scenery.

"Long Live the King"—Metro
State, Los Angeles

(Week ending Dec. 1)

EXAMINER—The picture affords the infantile star the best acting role in his career. It is not so full of sympathy, perhaps; he doesn't make the tears come quite so readily, but that is rather an improvement in this particular film. There is ample opportunity for legitimate acting.

EXPRESS—... This little genius has a medium better suited to his years and unusual gifts than anything we have ever seen him attempt. It does not force his ability unduly; neither does it minimize his genius.

HERALD—Jackie again demonstrates his ability to really act in this production. There are times when the boy does wonderfully well. His role is appealing and as the carefully guarded prince with all the interests and desires of young boyhood he excites your sympathy. "Long Live the King" has some wonderful sets and scenes.

NEWS—Summary: An entirely worthwhile production which should please the most fastidious. The kiddies will derive a lot of pleasure in watching this screened and it is far better for them than any of the shootin'-hoopin'-knock-'em-dead westerns.

RECORD—Two things will make this addition to the reels of the costume pictures popular: (1) the old hokum, and (2) the young Coogan.

TIMES—The most laughable scenes in the picture are where Jackie goes through the thrilling experience of a ride on the scenic railway. This is very well directed. The carnival is also splendidly staged, and the fight is very real.

"Our Hospitality"—Metro
Strand, Minneapolis

STAR—... for a costume play, rollicking good comedy and a melodrama have all been wrapped into one piece.

TRIBUNE (MORNING AND EVENING)—Buster Keaton takes advantage of the opportunity to display his style of comedy in a forceful manner.

Mr. Keaton is given capable support.

"Ponjola"—1st Nat'l
Capitol, Montreal

STAR—Miss Nilsson gives theatregoers a most convincing interpretation of the role. ... The Rhodesian goldfields scenes are particularly well represented.

"The Printer's Devil"—Warners'
Rialto, Atlanta

CONSTITUTION—Here is a picture well worth looking at, shot through as it is with the stuff of adventure. ... Here is a picture we would go twelve blocks out of our way to see, and then beg permission to see over again. For it has quality.

Lyric, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—... it fits his particular type of acting as snugly as a tailor-made suit fits his particular fashion plate. But as in practically every other case when a vehicle is intended primarily to exploit the personality of the star, interest centers in Wesley Barry while the story material is negligible.

TIMES STAR—... of interest chiefly for the multitude of opportunities it gives the young star for showing off his "reg'lar feller" personality.

Hippodrome, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—Young Mr. Barry is just in the midst of the gawky, awkward period when a boy is at his worst—and his acting ability is hardly great enough to make up for the loss of the boyish appeal which put him over in the days when he labored, after school, in Marshall Neilan's vineyard. ... Still "The Printer's Devil," has some amusing features. It is filled with sentimental hokum about the simply, kindly folk of the small towns.

Colonial, Detroit

NEWS—"The Printer's Devil" is an interesting little picture designed as an outlet for the humorous qualities of Wesley and it succeeds in its purpose.

"Rosita"—United Artists
Ohio, Indianapolis

NEWS—The comparison detracts neither from Miss Pickford nor Lubitsch. Comparing scenarios one is inclined to give the scale a tip in favor of the scenarist of "The Spanish Dancer." In no other way has Miss Pickford's production suffered. In many respects it undoubtedly is much better.

In point of cast "Rosita" has much the best of it.

STAR—... one of those films (few and very far between) that merit the unlimited use of adjectives.

"Rosita" brings Mary back to the heights. She has fallen on occasions, but the pinnacle is hers again.

TIMES—As interesting as the work of Mary Pickford as a street singer who becomes a courtesan is the direction of Ernst Lubitsch.

"Rosita" is the biggest movie from a production standpoint that Mary Pickford has ever appeared in if I am not mistaken ... reminds me a little of "The Spanish Dancer." ... I consider the Pickford picture much the better photoplay. Direction and real acting will always tell.

"St. Elmo"—Fox

NEWS—The story may seem so old-fashioned, but not dull, as it is to the screen, and the director has to the story in detail and made the character appear as the book created them, given it a fairly good production.

STAR—Jerome Storm, the director preserved with infinite care the atmosphere of another day; here, at least, is one which a movie producer has seen to modernize with jazz episodes.

One of the Chronicles of America Series, Visualizing the Making of a Great Nation

4 parts

It was a clean-up for the Poli Circuit; it will be the same for you.

Every showman who has booked it, and there are many, has found it very easy to get the enthusiastic support of the Superintendent of Schools, the School Principals, the Teachers and patriotic and fraternal societies.

The Yale University Press can and will give you great help in putting these Chronicles of America pictures over. Ask the Pathe salesman!

[Editorial] New Haven Journal-Courier, Oct. 1st, 1923

Chronicles of America in Movies. COLUMBUS day (October 12) will have double significance for New Haven with its great Italian contingent, for on that date will be shown one of the best-prepared motion pictures of the series of some 30 pictures which are to reproduce on the screen the stories and teachings of the "Chronicles of America," the monumental historical work by many writers being issued in many volumes by the Yale Press. So fascinating as well as special this literary production that in every community in the United States, and by many abroad, its riches have been discovered until the delight of reading the chapters is a matter of frequent remark.

The plan now is to utilize the screen to further tell these stories of American history and an accurate and instructive medium in the instruction of the people. The Pathe Exchange is to handle the distribution to the theatres of these choice pictures which are produced under the auspices of the Yale Press no less than the books themselves. Historical accuracy is thus secured. The scenes obviously lend themselves to dramatic effect and the best talent has been enrolled to that end. The combination of scholarly and screen technique adds to the production not less than to the great number of the young, the new-comers and all citizens to whom it is expected the project will bring an information and inspiration as to what entered into the making of America that shall go far to strengthen national life.

As to the momentous present influence of the movie on young America, it is enough to cite a Bulletin of the Sage Foundation. Its examination reported after accurate survey of one city that 30 per cent of the school children below high school grades went at least three times a week to "the movies," while in the high schools the figure rose to 80 per cent.

It is a dark outlook if unworthy and inferior material is supplied to the minds and hearts of the next generation at that plastic age. On the other hand, could anything be more reassuring, or cause one more to rejoice in the application of late invention to high uses, than to contemplate millions of young people taking in by the eye these great exhibits of the history of their country—the adventure, the heroism and the triumphs, the personal and major events from the coming of Columbus to Appomattox. A second year ready for the public is "Jamestown" and one who knows the picture sees vividly that "one feels" that this is what Jamestown must have looked like. But the pictures that just now concern New Haven is "Columbus" and it is to be given for these days including the day that honors the pioneer by bearing his name, at Mr. Poll's local theatre.

[Editorial] New Haven Register, Sept. 28, 1923

YALE'S HISTORICAL FILMS For years the Yale University Press has been working upon the compilation of a gigantic film version of American history, embracing more than 30 photoplays all the outstanding episodes from Columbus to Lee's surrender at Appomattox in 1865. Two of the instalments are now ready for production, and deal with Columbus and Jamestown. The appearance of the film with the appearance of the film will be a significant event in the history of moving pictures. Much has been made in the past of the educational possibilities of films, but it has to be confessed that up to now their influence has been so inconspicuous and so objectionable that the vast majority of their features have had no influence upon the minds of the people. In the case of the present instalment, however, the advance of genuine but narrow-mindedness has been overcome. The film is not only educational but also entertaining. It is a masterpiece of the art of the camera. The film is not only educational but also entertaining. It is a masterpiece of the art of the camera. The film is not only educational but also entertaining. It is a masterpiece of the art of the camera.

This is to state that the film "Columbus" produced by the Yale University Press, from the historical series "The Chronicles of America" is in the estimation of the Los Angeles School System, an invaluable film with permanent historical value.

It is our desire to make known to every school child in Los Angeles the fact that the film is released and will be shown in our local theatres.

The film "Columbus" combines dramatic technique with the exacting requirements of scholarship and is worthy of the commendation of every educator in the United States.

Cordially yours, A. LORETTA CLARK, Head of Visual Education Department, Los Angeles City Schools.

[Editorial] New York Evening Telegram, Sept. 30, 1923. Columbus on the Screen. It required considerable venture... That such a series of permanent pictures of the things that have happened to America, the men and women who have made them happen and what they have produced by their happenings—the world's greatest nation—should be carried through to completion is eminently desirable. Such films in pictures will have all the romance necessary whether that alleged essential concomitant of a motion picture, a love story, is present or not. Sir Walter Raleigh, Captain John Smith, Governor Endicott and Miles Standish, Peter Stuyvesant, William Penn and General Oglethorpe furnish excellent subjects for the exposition of this "history making by camera" through the Colonial period. That would be an excellent start. Then [Editorial] New York Sun and The Globe, Sept. 28, 1923. History on the Screen. The announcement of "Columbus," the first of the history historical films prepared by the Yale University Press on the basis of the "Chronicles of America," is an event of unusual importance. The Press is attempting not only the first serious experiment in the educational value of the motion picture, but also an experiment in the pictorial value of education. It is finding out whether history—since history as conceived by capable historians—can be given a representation through the film that will have a permanent worth. It is also finding out whether the result will be looked at with even a portion of the interest and absorbed attention which has made the ordinary motion picture so great a power in the land.

[Editorial] Springfield, Mass. Republican, Sept. 29th, 1923. History Through the Movies. The most ambitious effort yet made to portray America's history, with a strict and scholarly regard for accuracy, through the moving picture, will soon be put to the test of popular approval. The result will be of uncommon interest and importance. Some years ago the Yale Press, an organization owned and controlled by the university, undertook the preparation of an extended series of historical studies, called "The Chronicles of America" and designed to cover, in numerous volumes, the entire range of American history from its earliest beginnings to the present day. Out of this undertaking, with its dependence on the printed word, grew a similar plan to present upon the screen many of the more important episodes, the same care being taken to insure the scholarly supervision of what are now to be known as "The Chronicles of American Photoplays."

Over 30 of these Yale photoplays, bearing such descriptive titles as "Columbus," "Jamestown," etc., are about to be distributed to the moving picture theaters of the country through one of the well-known film agencies. It is announced that "Columbus" is to be shown at the Palace theater in this city, and presumably in many other cities, October 11, 12 and 13, the 12th being Columbus day. It is claimed that these plays have been constructed with such an understanding of the requirements of dramatic or pictorial presentation as to hold the interest of a "movie" audience while it is taken back to the court of Isabella of Spain where Columbus pleads his case, or to the little town on the banks of the James in Virginia. This, however, is precisely the thing to be determined.

Other efforts have been made to teach history through the movies. But there seems to have been no effort, as yet, on a scale comparable to this. If it succeeds, which is to say, if it proves through the test of box office receipts, that the public will support such pictures, the event will be noteworthy in the development both of the moving picture and of popular education.

[Editorial] New York Tribune, Sept. 28, 1923. Yale "Movies". Upon the troubled question of the quality of our motion pictures, much light may be thrown on October 7, when "Columbus," the first of the "Chronicles of America" photoplays, is to be produced. The series, it will be remembered, are the remarkable series of complete phases of American history by the Yale University Press.

The interest of "movie" followers in this experiment should be keen because it may affect the future of the screen in at least two important aspects. The first lies in the fact that the Yale Press, like the historians and dramatists who have done the work, has been content to stick to the truth and not to distort it by the introduction of a "love interest" or any similar showman's device. The second divergence from conventional "movieism" is that the Press, relying again upon the truth of a great million-dollar-a-week story to get act it.

The opening test of these two departures was passed brilliantly. The Press, accepting quietly the scorn of the professionals for its supposed "high-browism," made no overtures till the first one was complete. It knew all the time that it could give the series the narrower field of college and church societies and schools. But, the millions of people who fill our motion picture houses, it offered the reels to the inspection of the largest distributors of films in the country. All were intensely interested and forever in the picture room. One agency, taking the films of "Columbus" to its own room, asked a secret ballot of its fifteen hundred business-minded district salesmen. The vote was unanimous: that the picture of the discovery of America could be shown anywhere. The pictures were good—that was the professional verdict. They were convincing in their dramatic appeal, and scarcely more than usually so, because of the infinite care given to details by trained historians. Placed upon a background of historic reality, the story of Columbus had intense drama as the picture of a man's long, tense struggle to succeed. It needed no sex trickery. Nor did the man Columbus need to be diluted by the man Parbanks. Of course, the popular test is now to come. Yet we are glad that it has been proved thus far, at least, that an outside agency can make good and marketable motion pictures upon higher lines than those of the ordinary studio. We are especially glad that the Yale Press had the vision and the courage to invite the professional test for the sake of bettering the quality of films in the picture houses of the United States.

[Editorial] New York Times, Sept. 30, 1923

AMERICAN CHRONICLES. Justin Winsor, that great scholar and historian of Harvard University, once expressed the wish that an instrument might be invented delicate and sensitive enough to receive and record the ethereal vibrations that were stirred by memorable events in the history of man and of America. Possessed of such an instrument, we might hear, he said, the footsteps of the philosophers in the Academies, the prayer of Columbus cut upon the ocean, or the flesh of the ears of the French explorers as they made their adventurous way through the Western waters. What the Harvard historian dreamed of has not yet been realized, but the Yale Press has come to the aid of the historian who has difficulty in getting his chronicles read: for it is with many readers today as it was with King Ahasuerus, who turned to read the chronicles only on that night when "he could not sleep." Some years ago the Yale Press began the collection of still-life material illustrating the history of our country from the time of its discovery and settlement. Valuable as able authentic pictures of the past could have been set forth in plates had in illustration of looks, its value has been multiplied many times by endowing these figures with power to move about in scenes which were familiar to their contemporaries. As announced by the President of the Yale University Press, the dawn of a new day for motion pictures "has come. The new day will indeed dawn if the men and women interested in the welfare of their communities will give their patronage to help found such laudable and patriotic undertakings. It should come about in time that every child, youth, man and woman in America may know these chronicles of the past by sight and eventually by heart. "Is it not written in the Book of Chronicles?" was an expression which the sacred historians used in excusing themselves from repeating what was supposed to be shown to everybody from Dan to Beersheba. It should be possible to "assume, when they and like photoplays are seen year after year by the millions who go daily to the "movies," even if they are not able to read the books of our annals, that they have learned the facts in that language which all can understand and remember.

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L.

NEWS—Pola Negri dances earnestly and with something of the fire that characterized her early European productions. It is her best effort since coming to America.

"Stephen Steps Out"—F. P.-L.
McVicker's, Chicago

AMERICAN—* * * In a wisely chosen drama, "Stephen Steps Out," a light entertaining vehicle. * * * Young Fairbanks acts with surprising ease, considering that this is his first picture.

HERALD AND EXAMINER—He doesn't seem to be the son of a picture prince, nor the seventh daughter of a Sutherland. Sister invites the prediction that he will learn to trade and go the distance. Considerable tact is shown * * * by keeping his friends out. * * *

JOURNAL—The story they have first given is the clean and strictly moral offering rarely under such circumstances. It lacks interest and is popularly called a love interest, and nothing by the omission * * * developed just the touch of adventure dear to the hearts of adolescents, and shows a sufficient boyish buoyancy to interest the older of customers.

TRIBUNE—* * * brings to his first cinema screen a distinct and winning personality. As the triple charm of good breeding, good looks, and good looks. * * * If he'll just let it be there are no lengths to which he won't go.

Capitol, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—* * * as brisk a screen come-never made a confirmed pessimist forget principles and break out into laughter.

POST—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. probably is better assayed when he makes his picture. In his first he does quite although he shows no earmarks of genius.

We think Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. stands a chance of becoming a popular favorite by putting his own personality into his role and striving to emulate his father's style of acting.

Nevertheless * * * we like him and we liked "Stephen Steps Out."
TIMES-STAR—A clean, wholesome, lively picture of boyhood played by a real boy—* * * is both interesting and amusing. The novel in that it has no love theme, is not without a coloring of sentiment and even a touch of pathos.

"Strangers of the Night"—Metro La Salle Garden, Detroit

NEWS—A splendidly acted and directed picture of the stage play, "Captain Appleton," which deserves to take its place among the most interesting mystery films.

Crystal, Indianapolis

STAR—* * * a highly entertaining mystery picture, "Strangers of the Night." * * *

Regent, Rochester

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE—* * * author of the gratifyingly precise transcripts that has lost none of its intrinsic entertainment worth in the process of screening. Moore and Enid Bennett are ideally suited. * * * The most commendable feature of dramatic action is the intelligence, force and humor evident in the director's adaptation of the original play.

JOURNAL AND POST—The most flagrant comedy, tempered by whimsicality and imagination makes this picture one of the most successful comedies recently on the screen.

TIMES-UNION—* * * it does amuse in a very natural, spontaneous and unaffected way with a touch of whimsicality which is one not to take its rapid action too seriously. * * *

"Suzanna"—Allied
Strand, Montreal

STAR—An excellent cast makes almost anything plausible. There is action aplenty.

"The Temple of Venus"—Fox
Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—* * * one of the most remarkable pictures that has yet been given to the screen. It is filled with beautiful and wonderful photographic shots, and in many ways is entirely new in picture making.

NEWS—* * * in many respects might be better and in some respects might be much worse. It is very bad as to plot and uninspired by any acting that either impresses or amuses but its scenic beauties, especially its seascapes and surf lines, are beautiful. It is a strange hodge podge. * * *

TIMES—It's a delightfully clever sketch * * * As a work of cinema photo art the film is a rare one. Miss Philbin, * * * deserves much praise.

"The Ten Commandments"—F. P.-L.
Egyptian, Hollywood

(Reprinted from Friday's FILM DAILY)

EXAMINER—The screen has never borne a greater tale or told it with more conviction. It unquestionably is Cecil B. DeMille's magnum opus. The great foundation of the laws and legal writings of most civilized countries is presented with impressive beauty and grandeur.

EXPRESS—It is the voice of inspiration. Its very massiveness, the apparent difficulties confronting the director and the broadness of the canvas compel respect and utmost admiration.

HERALD: A mighty picture dramatically, photographically, scenically and morally. It is a triumph for the camera beyond all expectation, and proves that real good can be disseminated through the theater as well as the church. Cecil B. DeMille and Jeanie Macpherson subtly and entertainingly preach a sermon more far-reaching in effect than all the words of ministers from now to doomsday.

HOLLYWOOD CITIZEN—The picture will live through centuries to come. Mere words can but give a hazy description of this film of films.

HOLLYWOOD NEWS—When a writer possesses words to properly describe the glory of the sunrise, the majesty of Niagara, the love of good women, then may be expected an adequate description of the message of "The Ten Commandments." It is far more than a mere motion picture. The critic describes the prologue in detail but refrains from telling the modern story as it would rob readers of the most wonderful evenings they ever had.

NEWS: It is to be hoped that every one of the hundred and ten million people of these United States will have an opportunity to see this production. It conveys one of the greatest messages ever brought before the American people. Mere description of the action could not tell you its tremendous power and influence. The director and author have incorporated everything you can think of to make it interesting, fascinating and instructive.

RECORD—The public is going to be a mighty plaything under the spell of "The Ten Commandments."

TIMES—It is a picture that you cannot by any stretch of the imagination afford to miss. It offers new splendors in photography and theatrical wonders hitherto unrevealed. It is the greatest masterpiece thus far of pictorial artistry.

"Three Ages"—Metro
Strand, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—Not only is the star funny, but the story as well. * * *

"Thundering Dawn"—Universal
Hippodrome, Baltimore

NEWS—Lots of action in "Thundering Dawn"—lots of it! And all the villains die, which is very nice.

"Tiger Rose"—Warners
Rivoli, New York

HERALD—Miss Ulric's dynamic vigor comes out well on the screen. Her flat, two-dimensional shadow fairly sizzles with life. * * * In fact, Sidney Franklin has managed her with great skill; he has taught her the restraint which is absolutely essential to those who perform before the camera. * * * The picture itself is a careful, shrewd adaptation of Willard Mack's play, with all the stalwart thrill of the original piece kept intact.

Alhambra, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—* * * stands well to duplicate its success upon the stage. * * * The plot was admirably adapted so that the suspense, * * * is extremely tense.

Rialto, Washington

HERALD—The play is peculiarly adapted for photoplay production, due to its perfect dramatic qualities, its magnificent scenic effects, the remarkable personalities required to bring the story and action to its thrilling climax and the care taken in filming.

STAR—* * * it is difficult to determine which is the more enjoyable, the beautiful scenery or the story. Taken separately, each is delightful; taken together, the combination is perfect for an evening's entertainment.

"To The Ladies"—F. P.-L.
Metropolitan, Los Angeles

(Week ending Dec. 1)

EXAMINER—Edward Horton is in better form in this film than he was in "Ruggles of Red Gap"—and he was in rare form in that one. * * * Helen Jerome Eddy * * * hasn't been as well cast since she appeared in "The Ten Dollar Raise." * * * Theodore Roberts is, of course, excellent in the part of the boss.

EXPRESS—Recognizable in this comedy as in "Duley," is an underlying serious note, scarcely permitted to obtrude, however, through the delectable coating of comedy, only rising to the surface in such points as to make the contrast the more vivid.

HERALD—"To the Ladies" is bright and amusing, has an interesting theme, is splendidly cast and acted and is cleverly directed. Some of its situations are hilarious and, everything considered, it is very well done. The plot is light.

NEWS—One thing is sure, regardless of its absurdity, this photoplay will tickle the vanity of the women and will probably go down in the records as another James Cruze box office success. * * * Summary: Outside of a few deficiencies, "To the Ladies" is enjoyable because it is clean comedy.

RECORD—The picture won't set the world on fire but it's a very funny exposition of office intrigue, and Cruze and Lasky are alike to be complimented. Nor must we forget to tip the hat to the ladies of the cast—Louise Dresser, Helen Jerome Eddy and Patricia Palmer—in appreciation for a pleasant hour.

TIMES—The story is very human, treated with bright humor and just a touch of tenderness and pathos occasionally. * * * The cast is the big buzz. Edward Everett Horton has dared be himself a bit more in this than in "Ruggles," with the result that he registers his characteristic drollery most effectively.

"The Virginian"—Preferred
Karlton, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—* * * Harlan plays the part of the drawing and loveable Southerner, as the creator, Owen Wister, probably intended, and Florence Vidor is altogether lovely and suitable. * * * The picture * * * promises to rival the popularity of the novel.

INQUIRER—Full of Western drama, there is not one moment * * * that the picture is not full of action.

NORTH AMERICAN—* * * Kenneth Harlan is seen in the title role, and it is surprisingly good. * * * The photoplay is unusually beautiful and there are many unusual "shots" of gorgeous country. * * *

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—"The Virginian," revitalized and refurbished in such a manner that it is not only one of the best pictures of its kind ever made, but far more in spirit with Owen Wister's novel and characters than any former stage or screen version has been.

RECORD—* * * transferred to film with no violence done to the spirit of this American classic. * * * The story was "shot" in a most beautiful part of the Western country and the photography, exhibiting clever handling of long shots and "close-ups," leaves nothing to be desired.

"The Wanters"—1st Nat'l
Strand, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—* * * the Cinderella theme, while intrinsically appealing, is beginning to be rather tedious. It again appears in "The Wanters," thinly and not at all cleverly disguised.

NEWS—Marie Prevost, * * * is the best thing about the picture. * * * She is the life of a picture that provides good entertainment provided one does not ask too much of cohesion and feasibility in the story. * * *

TIMES-STAR—Marie Prevost does not enhance her standing as an actress in our critical judgment by her portrayal of the improbable heroine. Robert Ellis and Huntley Gordon waste their ability on artificial roles.

Circle, Indianapolis

STAR—* * * Miss Prevost gives a performance that is both delightful and charming. * * * and there one has the secret of one-half of the film's attractiveness. For the other half there is the ever-intelligent supervision of John M. Stahl and the performance of a capable cast. * * *

TIMES—The director has taken such a theme, photographed it in great style, assembled a splendid type cast and supplied a whale of a climax—the train scene.

Frankly, I received a terrible punch from this picture.

"Why Worry?"—Pathe
Roosevelt, Chicago

HERALD AND EXAMINER—* * * studded with laughter. It's a rare jewel of a jest, and it turned my blue Monday into a day of sunshine.

POST—The story is a travesty, a burlesque in parts, and a very light and airy affair just arranged to display the antics of these two stars. * * * We can't promise you the uproarious time you had while watching "Safety Last," nor has there been any attempt to instill thrills into this comedy—but we can promise you enough good clean fun to relieve your mind. * * *

"Wild Bill Hickok"—F. P.-L.
Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—* * * by far the best thing that Hart has ever appeared in. Hart looks and acts just as he ever did.

POST-DISPATCH—A six-shooter in the hands of "Wild Bill," acts just like a rapid-fire machine gun.

STAR—This is typical Bill Hart picture, probably the star's best, but like all of them, savors more of Bill, the movie hero, than Wild Bill the gunman.

TIMES—When Hart swings into action with his guns he is good to look at. When he essays sentiment, it is to laugh. Packed with the old-style "hokum" * * * The rest has not benefited Hart. If this is his best, he can retire for two more years, and we will not shed a tear.

Palace, Washington

HERALD—* * * a superb, thrilling and distinctly novel picturization of a historical phase of the West that has gone the way of the Indian and the buffalo.

STAR—This picture is well worth seeing, not only for its historic background, but for the new "Bill" Hart.

TIMES—This is Hart's first appearance on the American screen in three years, and as a come-back it should register a complete success. But all that is forgotten—as is even the interest in the stars' personal appearance—in the clear and logical presentation of the story itself.

"The Wild Party"—Universal Strand, Washington

STAR—* * * is good, and on the surface is highly amusing. In making the picture, however, Universal did not go into newspaper office detail; apparently, or at least into a "big" newspaper office.

TIMES—And out of the confusion evolves a farce comedy that is more than ordinary entertaining.

"Woman Proof"—F. P.-L.
Family, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—Admirers of Thomas Meighan will find the picture just pleasing; others will find it not even that. Its romance is insipid; its humor, except for two or three happily-contrived scenes, is flat and hackneyed.

"You Can't Get Away With It"—Fox
Monroe, Chicago

HERALD AND EXAMINER—This picture comes nearest to being a social document than any I have seen in a long time. * * * Yet it is not dull, not professional; rather an interesting and at times poignant story.

POST—Conventional plot, but very well acted. * * * The story, which is credited to Gouverneur Morris, runs along very conventional lines. * * * from booking on percentage. "I can't buy pictures like 'The Covered Wagon' and 'The Hunchback' outright and yet I can't book them. Charlie Haring and I have between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 involved in theater properties and it isn't fair to the investments to keep such pictures out of the theaters. And so, rather than be a poor organization member, I decided to resign and then go into the market and buy the pictures."

Charles L. O'Reilly and Leo Brecher were among those reported to have resigned on Friday. O'Reilly declared that the report was erroneous and added that, so far as he knew, Brecher was still a member of the board of directors. He said it would be better for all concerned if there were less politics played and less airing in printing grievances.

It developed that Charles Haring, Blumenthal's partner had also resigned as a member but that the board of directors refused to accept it. This occurred when Dave Weinstock of the Elsmere booked "Enemies" although Haring and Blumenthal's Belmont had contracted for the picture under a Famous Players contract. Later when "Little Old New York" was offered, Haring decided he would not let his opposition get it because of any T. O. C. C. resolution standing in the way. He therefore tendered his resignation.

Strand Undergoes Alterations

Extensive alterations have been made at the Strand. The work has been progressing for about three months with two crews working from midnight to midday in order not to interfere with the performances.

The orchestra platform has been lowered and enlarged to contain fifty-five musicians, necessitating the relocation of the organ console. An improvised semi-pit was built to clear the view to the screen and stage. The roomy stage will now permit the amplification of the ballets. An entirely new stage set, designed by Joseph Plunkett, was substituted. It is built flexibly to accommodate enlarged presentations. Entirely new electrical equipment by Kliegel supplants all other lighting devices. A sounding board has been installed in this stage set.

A Louis XV retiring room for the accommodation of women finished in rose wood and satinwood, has been installed. Another extension is the new 40 x 100 ft. studio atop the building for the convenience of artists. It is equipped with a miniature stage, piano, gymnasium paraphernalia, broadcasting studio and adjoining shower baths.

Indictments Dismissed

Indictments charging four men with manslaughter in connection with the collapse of the American, Brooklyn, on Nov. 29, 1921, when seven men were killed, have been dismissed by County Judge McLaughlin. The men indicted were Samuel Moskowitz, James J. Kavanaugh, Joseph Gaydica and James N. Finlay.

Commission has arrested Max Kleinman, of the Exhibitors' Film Exchange and Joseph Bevalacuer, of the Novelty theater in connection with two allegedly immoral Austrian films, "The Flirt" and "The Two Sisters." It is charged Kleinman sold the picture to the Novelty.

The pictures have not been reviewed or licensed by the state commission, according to Gottlieb. Bevalacuer has pleaded guilty and has offered to turn State's evidence. He claims he did not know it was illegal to show pictures of that type.

Sees Shorter Films

Maurice Tourneur Says Future Productions Will Not Have Costumes and Towering Sets

That shorter features will come back into favor among producers as a result of the present slump in Hollywood, caused by making big, expensive pictures, is the contention of Maurice Tourneur who is in town from the coast.

"Splendor, tremendous sets and long footage will never prove good sales points to either the public or the theater owner, as recently discovered by the New York distributors," he says.

"The present producing slump has proved to film executives that it is a fallacy to make a so-called big production for the sake of achieving a physically big picture. A number of recent illustrations of this have been evident. The moving about of characters in a story, amidst towering sets, as so many chessmen, is not sufficient to hold public interest. Many of the 'big' pictures released during the past two months in nine or more reels, could not only have been told as effectively in six or seven, but better.

Harold Lloyd's five reels will make more money than most ten reels. It's not the length of a production that counts but what's in it. One of the season's biggest failures is a costume production that has been heralded and produced as having 'bigger sets than Robin Hood.' The sets do look bigger, but this has not saved the film from failure.

"Producers have once again come face to face with the fact that the big production is bunk. They are again turning to the simple, human stories that in themselves have dramatic power—and are beginning to forget the scenery. The pictures for the immediate future will mark an absence of costumes, towering sets and fanfare. The public will be pleased—and relieved at this news, I am sure."

Join With Europe

And Interchange Talent, Suggests Sid Schlager—Sees America in Drama

An interchange of ideas and talent is urged by Sid Schlager of Luxor as a means toward elevating picture standards.

"It behooves us," he says, "not only to learn from our confreres across the water, but to join forces with them, taking what is best from our own field and forming units to make pictures wherever it is most practicable and promising to do so."

"When I say what is best," I don't mean what has been most loudly exploited. There is much, as yet undiscovered ability both in the acting and technical end of the industry. There are a great many intelligent people who have been watching and studying eager to take an active part in the work.

"As technicians we, here in America, are second to none in the world but we still leave much to be desired in the art of acting and drama. Among female stars, too much stress has been placed on the "flapper" statuesquely expressionless types, beauty and grace in wearing clothes. These are in themselves of pictorial value, but not essential drama qualities.

"The Palace of the King"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
Whole....EXTRAVAGANCE
MORE IN PRODUCTION.
GORGEOUS TO LOOK UPON WITH A STORY, THAT IN SPITE OF ITS LAVISH
PRESENTATION, KEEPS IT
FROM BEING AN OUTSTAND-ING FEATURE.

....Competent and attractive.
The Sweet and Edmund Lowe forming romantic pair and they are at ease regardless of their royal raiment. Sam de Grasse as King Phillip; others Hobart Bosworth, Pauline Starke, Wilson V. Mong, Aileen Pringle, Lucretia Littlefield, Charles Clary.

Type of Story.....From F. Marion Crawford's novel—a drama of royal intrigue with the King trying to hold his throne against his brother John, his favorite with the people, and his secret intrigue and plot to prevent John's marriage with the daughter of Mendosa, the proclaimed murderer of John, his recovery and fall of the King. The story is a conventional "overthrow the king" formula. It has no new ideas nor sensational situations to set it different from the other royal costume plays that have prevailed. "In the Palace of the King" can rightfully boast of a beautiful production, and with every effort of a big bankroll expended on it, but all this again goes to show that it isn't necessarily magnificent sets, lavish costumes and an equally gorgeous display that makes a good picture. This one is good to look at, to be sure, but it is not good entertainment. It is at best a royal costume play whose only saving grace is excellent pictorial appeal—if that will save it.

Box Office Angle.....Not likely to bring in the returns it should, that is commensurate with the cost of production. You know best how the folks take to costume dramas.
Exploitation....Talk about the lavishness of the production, gorgeous sets and wonderful array of court costumes, excellent photography and good cast. Mention F. Marion Crawford as the author for those who may have read the book.
Arrange with local book sellers to put the book on display in their windows together with announcements that you are showing the picture. Harp on the pictorial appeal and use trailers to carry out promises for this much. Use billboards in the lobby. Of the cast, mention the more important members, particularly Blanche Sweet,
Edmund Lowe, Hobart Bosworth,
Pauline Starke, Sam de Grasse.

Direction.....Emmett J. Flynn; extended all his effort on pictorial effect and from this standpoint has been unusually successful.

"This Freedom"

Fox

As a Whole.....ENGLISH PRO-DUCTION, DRAMATIZATION OF NOVEL COMPRISING AN INTERESTING AND FORCE-FUL ENTERTAINMENT; FEAT-URE RUNS TOO LONG ES-PECIALLY IN FIRST HALF.

Cast....Splendid collection with Fay Compton displaying fine dramatic ability; Clive Brook a first rate leading man; others in the cast well chosen and capable. No names familiar to American audiences.

Type of Story....Argument dealing with a married woman's proper place in the world;—whether she can be a mother and wife and at the same time have a career. The theme is strongly dramatic and told in a thoroughly interesting manner. Denison Clift and a splendidly chosen cast bring out the story's force splendidly. There is considerable unnecessary detail in the first half that serves as a form of prologue. This is much too long and drags the early reels not a little.
Long wordy titles are responsible for much of the dragging. The latter half of the story contains some strong dramatic moments, especially the realization by the woman that her theory of a career was wrong and the method in which it is brought home to her through the calamities visited upon her children. Production values are good and it is likely to prove thoroughly interesting.

Box Office Angle....If your audiences like problem plays or a picture dealing with character analysis, you can interest them. Because of the popularity of the book, and the fact that the author also wrote "If Winter Comes," many will want to see this picture.

Exploitation.....Appeal to them through the medium of newspaper stories and throw-aways that will let them know that the story deals with the ever popular argument as to a woman's place in the world.
Put it to them in questions: "Is a woman's place in the home or in the business world? What is the answer? See for yourself in the picturization of E. M. Hutchinson's novel 'This Freedom,' showing at the blank theater." Secure the support of local women's clubs and get them to do some broadcasting for you. They might be glad to arrange a debate on the subject and incidentally afford good advertising for your showing. Mention the director's name and the fact that he directed "A Bill of Divorcement," one of the outstanding productions of last year.

Direction.....Dennison Clift; gives story forceful presentation and is otherwise satisfactory with the exception that footage might have been curtailed.

Author.....A. M. Hutchison
Scenario.....Not credited
Cameraman.....Not credited
Photography.....Usually good
Locale.....England
Length.....About 8,000 feet.

"Half-A-Dollar-Bill"

Producer: Max Graf
Distributor: Metro

As a Whole.....UNDOUBTEDLY A GOOD AUDIENCE PICTURE
EVEN THOUGH STORY IS FAIRLY CONVENTIONAL WITH COINCIDENCE A PROMINENT FACTOR IN PLOT DEVELOPMENT. SOME GOOD BITS OF ACTION.

Cast....First rate. Anna Q. Nilsson a sympathetic mother who leaves her baby on a doorstep and later finds that the lad she has been mothering is her own. William T.
Carleton good as the sea captain who adopts the boy. Raymond Hatton gives an interesting performance in the role of "Noodle," a one legged chef. It hardly seems necessary, however, to exploit physical affliction to this extent, nor are the scenes showing Hatton varnishing his wooden leg wholly effective. Others are Mitchell Lewis, George MacQuarrie and little Frank Darro, a likable youngster.

Type of Story....Drama. Deals with deserted wife who loses track of her baby son after leaving him on a doorstep, of her being cared for by the man who adopted the child, their identities unknown to either. The woman's husband, in an effort to regain the child and satisfy an old revenge against the man, is the means of clearing up the tangle. There is a good sympathetic theme here that gains the spectator's interest and the acting of the players is sincere and, for the most part, very convincing.
The coincidence in the development, particularly the fact that the woman fails to mention her missing child, when association with the boy would naturally tend to make her speak, make it pretty farfetched at times but this probably won't spoil its entertainment value for the majority. They'll likely be well pleased with it. The theme does contain a good amount of audience appeal.

Box Office Angle....Will be a suitable feature for most exhibitors.
It's the sort of thing that usually goes big with the average crowd.

Exploitation....Here's a catchy title that you can exploit in numerous ways that will be novel and interesting. Use catch lines such as:
"Not fifty cents but half a dollar bill. What is it? Find the answer at the blank theater." If you care to stir up extra interest you might make use of the idea contained in the picture. Of those in the cast, use the name of Anna Q. Nilsson, mentioning her recent appearance in "Ponjola," providing you have played it.

Direction....W. S. Van Dyke; good judgment and handled story satisfactory; used cast to advantage.

Author.....Curtis Benton
Scenario.....Max Graf
Cameraman.....Andre Barlatier
Photography.....Good
Locale.....Seaport town
Length.....5,700 feet.

Lenore Ulric in "Tiger Rose"

Warner Bros.

As a Whole....PICTURIZATION
OF FAMOUS STAGE PLAY MAKES INTERESTING EN-TERTAINMENT.

Star....At times photographs nicely but again poorly; her performance interesting and she plays the part convincingly although she cannot make the same impression that she did in the stage version; the titles cannot take the place of her dialect.

Cast....Forrest Stanley fairly well suited,—a bit stiff; Theodore Von Eltz all right as the hero; others
Joseph Dowling, Andre De Beranger, Sam De Grasse and Claude Gillingwater.

Type of Story....On the order of the already popular James Oliver Curwood stories and not a great deal different in plot either, but contains excellent dramatic value that has been used to splendid advantage. Director Franklin has used all the high lights of the stage version and thoughtfully has not omitted the famous "You believe
I kill you? You know damn well
I would" bit. Of course those familiar with the play are likely to find the picture more interesting than those who have not seen the star in the role which she created.
To the latter crowd "Tiger Rose" may not seem more than the average Northwest Mounted picture.
But they should be amply satisfied at that. The production is beautiful, there being any number of gorgeous locations, exceptionally well photographed.

Box Office Angle....Play up the title and talk about the stage play mentioning, of course David Belasco's name and the fact that this is the second of his plays to reach the screen through the Warner's. You will please the majority and those who may have seen the play will probably be more enthusiastic.

Exploitation....Let them know that this is the first screen appearance in many years of Lenore Ulric, the famous Belasco star. Promise them an interesting performance, reminding them of the unusually long run enjoyed by the play in which she created the title role. Regarding the story tell them it has to do with the girl's effort to save her lover from the Northwest Mounted Police. Use a trailer showing the star shooting the gun out of the officer's hand in her scheme to free her lover. A teaser stunt for the newspaper could consist of a drawing showing a tiger and a rose.
Follow it up with announcements of the showing. Use stills in the lobby to indicate the picture's pictorial appeal.

Direction....Sidney Franklin; very good but a bit too long on footage.
Authors....Willard Mack and David Belasco

Scenario.....Edmund Goulding
Cameraman.....Charles Rosher
Photography.....Excellent
Locale.....Northwest
Length.....About 8,000 feet.

Type of production... 2 reel comedy
Larry Semon is rather funnier in this one than he has been in some time. Not that the comedy itself is very new or difficult but Semon steps out of every danger just in the nick of time with a careless, happy, non-chalance that will bring the laughs from any audience. At the very end, after a good thrill brought about by his grasping a hanging rope and letting his machine go over a steep embankment, he steps right within the range of the villain's gun. You are sure there is no hope, when lo, the bad man steps out of his car right into a hidden bog that reaches up to his neck. Good for several laughs from anyone.

"The Last Stand of the Red Men"—Urban—Vitagraph
Nicely Handled

Type of production... 1 reel educational
"The Last Stand of the Red Men" shows interesting views of a tribe of Indians both in dress regalia and in their tepee homes. Closeups of different members of the tribe are exceedingly interesting. Even the babies are different looking. And then, interspersed, are shots of the plains and hills once owned by the red men now filled with cattle belonging to the white men. The beauty of some of these shots is remarkable. The titles are also interesting, lending tone to the entire reel. They are done in verse after the style of Hiawatha.

Bucking the Line"—Century-Universal
Less Comedy—More Slapstick

Type of production... 2 reel comedy
Buddy Messinger's latest comedy shows a preference for slapstick. Less of the "throwing-things-around" type of humor would make this one more enjoyable. Buddy is the captain of a football team and in one sequence the team practices in Buddy's parlor much to the detriment of everything in it. Then, the football accidentally gets into the kitchen where the chef thinking it is a cake puts frosting on it and serves it, with the result that upon finally being punctured it explodes in a guest's face. Kids will probably like this one.

"A Movie Fantasy"—Universal
Has Novel Introduction

Type of production... 1 reel novelty
This one reeler is a combination of cartoon comedy and the work of real players, the cartoon drawings being used as a novel introduction and fading into the actual players as they are introduced. The plot concerns a young wife who wishes to become a film star. Her husband, hearing her phone a "professor" of a school that teaches acting, impersonates the "professor" and manages to cure his wife of the desire to become a shining light of the screen. Interesting because of its novelty. The cartoons and the direction are by Hy Mayer.

"Film Foolish"—Educational
Comedy of the Studios

Type of production... 1 reel comedy
The cast of this one reel comedy includes Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance. Once again the scene is a movie studio. Bowes, as a title says, "wanted to get into the movies in the worst way" and so has become an assistant to the head property man. There are several laughs occasioned by Bowes, mistakes in getting into the scenes at the wrong time and otherwise upsetting things in general and the directors in particular. Should please the average crowd.

"Home Again"—Sing Them Again Series—Educational

A Good Number—A Good Series
Type of production... 1 reel novelty
As with the preceding numbers in this series, three songs are first picturized and then the words of the chorus is flashed on the screen with the cordial invitation to everyone to "join in." This time the songs are "Old Black Joe," "Little Annie Rooney" and "Home Sweet Home." The latter is particularly enjoyable, the pictures showing the way the composer first conceived the idea and the scene of his inspiration. A very good number.

Why Managers?

Universal—as every other company that has one of these costly pictures—must get top money for the show. Certainly while it is new. It is all right for exhibitors to sit back and criticize. But there have been mighty few films that have ever paid out and brought back over a million, when the picture was shown only in regular picture houses. Yet "The Birth of a Nation" and others have brought back huge sums when first exploited in the legitimate houses.

As against this, however, is the exhibitor who says he cannot ask that much money for his show. And yet he complains when the legitimate house takes in the picture.

How are you ever going to satisfy?

LICHTMAN'S MOVE

To Universal. Will be watched with interest. It was more or less natural, and at that somewhat of a surprise to see Universal let Eddie Smith get away. Smith has done some excellent work for Universal. But it is with "Al" that there will be more interest than in any one else. Lichtman has a host of friends; so has Universal. The move should work out well for both.

TITLES

Following "Week End Husbands" Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman will produce "Married Bachelors." If they can keep on digging up these sort of titles well—they're "box'y" anyway.

MOVING ALONG

Indications are that during the next fortnight something of interest will develop with the Theater Owners Dis. Corp. That's interesting. A lot of people—chiefly exhibitors—have been patiently awaiting since mid-Summer for something to happen.

DeMILLE'S SENDOFF

Los Angeles newspaper critics raved about the "Ten Commandments" after the premier Tuesday. In a fortnight New York will have a chance to see this. You know we've said a word or two about that picture. Yep. And not even thinking of taking back a single solitary murmur. Still we're interested in what the New York crowd think.

A REGULAR PRODUCER

They say that William R. Hearst has declared that while moving pictures can be made at less that to make a real picture a producer must spend at least half a million.

GOLFITIS

Abe Warner wanted to make a golfer of Milton H. Feld, manager of Frank Newman's houses in Kansas City. So he sent him a flock of clubs. But he didn't realize when that happened that Newman would be called upon to put Feld in his club. And that cost a lot more than the clubs. And Newman was glad to do it.

WISDOM

Jules Brulatour talking. To an important producer. Worried over financial affairs. "I don't see what you have to worry about," said Brulatour. "Your trouble is getting your money out of your pictures. Most producers have trouble to get money to make them."

GOULDING

When Bill Fox first heard what he was expected to pay Eddie Goulding. For handling the script of "The Fool," he almost fainted. But when he recovered, and after he had talked to Goulding he was glad of it. Then he learned that Goulding was a lot more than a scenario writer. A whole lot more. And so if some unusual, unexpected developments occur with Goulding through Fox, don't be surprised.

I. N. R. I.

The big German made spectacle of the life of Christ. Something has gone wrong. Blumenthal of Export and Import. Was expected to handle it for this country. Looks like the deal is off. A big picture; a fine picture. But for the theater—for amusement—that's an important question.

DANNY.

More N. W. Construction (Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Seattle—A new suburban house will be built in the Beacon Hill district by the Prefontaine Theater Co. It will cost $15,000 and will seat 500.

"Marie" Film Off?

Reported in London—Planned by Louis Mercanton as Private Venture

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 London—It is understood here that plan to produce "Marie Antoinette" with Norma Talmadge in the leading role, has been abandoned. The inside story that reaches this from Paris has it that, despite reports to the contrary, the project conceived by Louis Mercanton, French director as a personal venture, who figured that by engaging an American star of repute, he would in that way assure American distribution of the completed product. He said that, with the exception of Norma Talmadge, the cast and technical forces were to be entirely French.

One of the matters discussed on Monday M. Schenck's recent Eastern tour was the "Antoinette" film. Hugo H. Goldt, an accredited representative of the French Government, is reported in charge of the details of that Government. The impression prevalent in New York was that the picture was to have the full support of the French Government with all its resources to be placed behind the venture. When Schenck returned to the coast, his local office advised that matter was still in the definite stage.

Anger Again for President

Nominations for officers of the F. L. M. Club will be voted on next Wednesday night. They are: Joe Angelo, First National, president; W. R. Minor, Pathe, first vice-president; J. P. Bojan, First National (N. J.), second vice president; Arthur Abeles, Fox, secretary and Louis Rosenbluh, Fox, treasurer.

Under declared on Saturday he would turn down the office, because of pressure of personal business.

Opposition Negligible

The Times correspondent reported from Washington on Saturday that, though President Coolidge's tax reduction plan would encounter stiff opposition in Congress "there does not appear to be much opposition to the measure because of the nuisance and admission of the tax."

Steger Back

Julius Steger, production chief at the Fox Eastern studio, returned from Europe Saturday on the Paris.

Valentino To Make One More For F.P.-L.; Litigation Ends

Capt. Standish accuses John Alden of treachery as a result of the famous "Why don't you speak for yourself, John" episode in "The Courtship of Myles Standish," Charles Ray's long-run production. Associated Exhibitors.—Advt.

Sidney Olcott to Direct—Production Planned on Big Scale—Work Starts in January

Rodolph Valentino is expected to make one more picture for Famous Players for which, according to report, he will receive no remuneration. Upon its completion, it is understood that Valentino will have completed his contract with Famous and will then be at liberty to start work under his arrangement with Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc.

Sidney Olcott, who at present is directing Gloria Swanson in "The Humming Bird" at the Paramount Long Island City studio, is slated to make the picture which, according to report, will be one of the highlights of the Paramount release schedule for next fall. It is understood that the company will go the limit and make the picture an outstanding one in every manner.

Valentino left on Saturday for Europe to spend three weeks on the other side in the nature of a vacation. By the time he again reaches New York, it is expected that Olcott will have completed editing and titling of "The Humming Bird" and will be ready to start production of the picture. (Continued on Page 4)

Big Laboratory for England

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—The Compagnie Generale des Machines Parlantes Pathe Freres and Pathe Cinema will build a large laboratory in England, the exact site at present being held a secret. By so doing, the company hopes to save 7,000,000 francs annually, this amount at present going to British customs in the form of import duties. Pathe will increase its capitalization from 30,000,000 to 45,000,000 francs.

Check-Up Works

First National Finds Three-Cornered System Effective—Diplomacy Important

First National has been experimenting with a new sales check-up which is working out very well, according to E. A. Eschmann. It is composed of a triumvirate of experienced film men: M. Margolis, a traveling auditor; Sam Berger, specialty salesman, as he is called and A. W. Smith, who supervises the work of both Margolis and Berger.

The three men travel through the country visiting all First National exchanges. (Continued on Page 4)

Texas for Repeal

New Taxation Basis Will Give M. P. T. $15,000 Fund Annually—Aid Kansas Fight

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)
 Dallas—Assessments against M. P. T. O. members under a new plan will turn $15,000 annually into the treasury of the state unit. Texas plans to figure prominently in the fight for the admission tax repeal. The funds will be collected on the basis of one and a half cents per head of population for each person in the various towns and cities. The quota for Dallas is $2,400, and has already been accepted. By virtue of a contract with a screen advertising firm, it is expected the treasury will receive $10,000. A new insurance fund will be set up. (Continued on Page 4)

One From Valentino

Valentino picture. It will probably be made in the East.

Valentino's Paramount contract, it will be recalled, expires in February, but it has been stated on various occasions by Famous Players executives that the company would exercise its option of another year, thus preventing Valentino from working for anyone else until the Winter of 1925.

J. D. Williams, president of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, is due in New York tomorrow from London. There has been considerable talk in New York in weeks past that Williams had arranged with Adolph Zukor to settle the Valentino matter in a manner that would be amicable to both. Interests connected with Famous Players have persistently denied such talk and maintained that Zukor would never consent to such a settlement.

On Saturday, the Times Square Daily published the following from London:

"Before John D. Williams left for your side, he is said to have imparted to intimate friends the information that Adolph Zukor is associated with him on his contract with Valentino."

Whether the Valentino pictures will now be made in England, as announced by cable recently, is problematical. Williams has succeeded in financing the company with English capital, but whether production will be centered there, as originally announced, is in doubt in view of the end of the long-prolonged litigation over Valentino's services.

At Famous, on Saturday, no one cared to discuss the matter. However, no denial was made of the reported settlement.

changes, but devote most of their time to those offices where the returns are not satisfactory. Margolis makes the first visit, goes over the books and does what he can to better matters. Then Berger comes in and shows the local force where various angles can be straightened out. Finally, Smith covers the office and goes over the work planned and executed by the first two members of the check-up system. Smith is directly responsible to Eshmann and in that way, whatever occurs at each office is at once passed on to the home office.

Eshmann stated on Saturday that, despite the fact that each office which finds itself included in the check-up is visited three times the group is working in such a diplomatic manner that the usual dislike of visits from home office representatives has been greatly dissipated.

"RUDY"

By DANNY

back on the screen. Well, well. Who'd a believed it? Things are always happening in this business—things you don't expect. And so this goes on the record. And Jaydee Williams will be a happy person when he steps off the boat to-

Let's see: "Rudy" gets back abroad in about a month. During which Famous will dig up a story for him. And Syd Lott will brush up. Having done some big things lately for male stars. And see what's in store for "Rudy." And so the shooting should begin by February. Allow eight weeks or ten for the job. And then "Rudy's" career will be ready for an auspiciously waiting public.

The Verdict

Will be awaited with interest. I know what a box-office sensation Valentino was before he squabbled with Famous. No one knows it better than Famous. (What his defection will cost them? Figure it with figures of 000,000.) But if "Rudy" has lost none of his popularity. And Famous gives him the right kind of material. Boy; this should be a clean-up.

John Williams, who engineered the deal, who had "Rudy" see daylight, and got him back in Famous proves his business. A lot of clever people have tried. But fell down. But that was a long ago. Possibly "Rudy" has changed his mind since they tried.

And now that Williams is back. There should be some interesting developments.

Deny Mitchell Report

It was reported yesterday but denied at the Loew office that Fred Mitchell, film booker for the circuit had resigned, effective the first of the year. It was also reported that Dave Picker's son would take over Mitchell's duties.

Silent On "Rudy"

Famous Players Won't Talk About Settlement—Reported Ibanez Has Story For Him

Important officials at Famous Players maintained a very strict silence yesterday concerning Rodolph Valentino and the arrangement made with him covering the unexpired portion of his contract.

It is understood that the necessary papers have not as yet been signed but that they have been drawn up in their final form awaiting the concluding conference.

There was some interest displayed yesterday over what vehicle Famous would select for Valentino's reappearance. It was recalled that when the break came in August, 1922, Valentino based much of his objection on the type of story that Famous had selected for him. It is understood that Vicente Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen," in which Valentino made his

Schenck Refuses "Marie" Offer

Joseph M. Schenck wired his local office from the coast yesterday that he had rejected the proposition to loan Norma Talmadge to a French company for "Marie Antoinette" in view of the opposition created in France over the attempt to bring over an American actress for the part. This confirms the exclusive dispatch published from London in yesterday's issue of THE FILM DAILY.

Paris Aroused

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Paris—Practically every trade organization in France was up in arms over the plan to bring over Norma Talmadge for "Marie Antoinette." The objection was not in any way personal but only because it was felt the picture should be French-made in every respect.

Valentino broke with Famous Players in August, 1922 and since there has been a considerable sum of money spent in lawyers' fees. The litigation has dragged through the courts since that time.

J. D. Williams for whom Valentino will appear upon completion of the compact with Famous is due in on the Majestic today from Europe.

Valentino still has an action pending against him for services rendered by Arthur Butler Graham. It is expected this will come to trial next week in the Supreme Court. About $48,000 is involved.

The Greatest Male Star on the Screen!

The Greatest Picture He Ever Had!

ENOUGH of the latest Thomas Meighan production, "Pied Piper Malone," by Booth Tarkington, has been completed so that this can be prophesied:

"PIED PIPER MALONE" IS THE GREATEST THOMAS MEIGHAN PICTURE EVER MADE!

Stop a minute and think what this means to your box office:

The greatest Thomas Meighan picture ever made.

Not excepting "Back Home and Broke." Not excepting "The Bachelor Daddy" or "Homeward Bound." Not excepting "Woman Proof." Not excepting all the other Meighan successes that have made him the greatest male film star in the business to-day.

Thomas Meighan doesn't need "Pied Piper Malone" to be a great star.

"Pied Piper Malone" doesn't need Thomas Meighan to be a great picture.

Put the two of them together and you have a picture that lives up to every promise of bigger and better pictures.

The story is new, original, filled with human interest, and fitted perfectly to Thomas Meighan by the author himself, Booth Tarkington, who also wrote the titles. It is the first story Tarkington ever wrote directly for the screen. Director Alfred E. Green tops anything he has ever done hitherto.

Thomas Meighan never had anything as fine as "Pied Piper Malone" to work with before. A great story never had such a fine star to portray as "Pied Piper Malone" has in Thomas Meighan.

Flaming Wit

Colleen Moore "Flaming Youth" Luncheon at the Fastidious Ritz

Warner Fabian's "Flaming Youth" led an unusually witty luncheon at the Ritz yesterday when First National acted as host to Colleen Moore, who made a tremendous hit in this production and who will appear under First National's banner henceforth.

Ferry Reichenbach, as usual, was the master, and started things off by having various guests open the novel, read at every plate at any page, and read some of Fabian's wittiest expressions. Many of them were exceedingly witty. Incidentally, Reichenbach said that he would like the line to be found by Sales Manager Eschmann, which would be a can never get that price"—obviously referring to rentals.

Incidentally, in view of the release of "Flaming Youth" it was announced that the receipts of First National were greater last week than the receipts of any other company in the business.

When the fun ceased General Manager Richard A. Rowland, in a brief speech pointed out that it was his opinion that the public wanted to be entertained and that the cost of a picture mattered nothing to them; that "Flaming Youth" cost but $190,000, and that it was doing a great deal.

Inter Film Through F. B. O.

"The Divine Right," starring Elliott Dexter and made originally as "The Men Love," will be released through F. B. O. The picture was produced by Grand-Asher who have restated righting. It was declared yesterday only one picture was involved in the deal with F. B. O.

Bennett Changes Release

William Bennett will release "The Schoolmaster," through Hodkinson. He made "Loyal Lives" and "The Leavenworth Case," for Vitaphone which was scheduled to handle the series. The Hodkinson deal is for one picture only.

Many Arrivals from Europe

The Majestic which docked yesterday brought to town: Harry J. Cohen, Albert L. Grey, John D. Tippett of London, William M. Vogel, J. Williams.

John Alden crossed in the Mayflower as an adventurer, but had to shoulder arms with the Pilgrims. A scene from the great hit, Charles Ray in "The Courtship of Myles Standish." Associated Exhibitors.—Advt.

$100,000 Grossed

Heavy Bookings on "Enemies" Despite T. O. C. C. Resolution Against It—$600,000 Nationally

Despite the resolution making it compulsory for T. O. C. C. members not to play "Enemies of Women," under new contracts with Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, it is understood that about $100,000 in bookings have been rolled up in this territory. Total national business is placed at $600,000.

Louis F. Blumenthal of Haring and Blumenthal, as noted, has tendered his resignation as a member of the organization because of charges that various members are evading the letter of the resolution by having their business partners sign the contracts. Although the Loew circuit held a contract with Famous Players for both "Enemies" and "Little Old New York," a new arrangement was made with Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan for the entire metropolitan circuit.

"Little Old New York," has been booked over the Loew time but prior to that, the picture will play at the Brooklyn Strand, the week of December 23. Thus, the Metropolitan, the big Loew house in downtown Brooklyn will follow the Strand. This is an unusual procedure.

Fewer and Better

There were only 565 feature pictures released during 1923. Did you know this?

And did you know that for last season 815 features were produced as against 786 features produced the year before.

Complete details of these productions together with over 500 pages of vastly interesting informative matter—in the Film Year Book 1924. Be sure to get YOUR copy.

First Nat'l Issues Stock

Second Preferred Block to Pay Original Franchise Holders on Their Exchange Investments

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Dover, Del.—Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has filed an amended certificate of incorporation here with the Secretary of State. The company originally listed 60,000 shares of common stock, no par value.

First National yesterday announced the details of the issuance of a block of preferred stock as decided upon at the Atlantic City meeting of the directors some time ago. The statement declared that the details have just been completed and read:

"The amendment to the certificate of incorporation of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., was made so that it might be possible to issue second preferred stock to our original franchise holders in order to fund their advances to First National into a stock account. Sixteen thousand shares of second preferred (par value $100) Class A stock and 10,000 shares second preferred (par value $100) Class B stock have been authorized. A total issue of about $2,500,000 of second preferred A and second preferred B stock will be issued at an early date direct to our original franchise holders.

Powers Busy Making Raw Stock

Powers Film Products, Inc., are about to launch an active selling campaign on behalf of Powers raw stock. The plant in Rochester, according to the Powers office, is now turning out close to 1,000,000 feet per week. John Pelzer, formerly with Pathe Freres will be in charge of sales.

No Contract Signed, Says Williams

J. D. Williams returned from Europe yesterday on the Majestic and when asked about the settlement of the Valentino litigation with Famous Players said:

"There has been nothing signed in that connection, but there may be something to say in a few days."

Through With Famous Players

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., made one picture only for Famous Players, this, "Stephen Steps Out." The company had the privilege of exercising an option for his services but decided not to do so. Young Fairbanks is now on his way to the coast.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

Poignant to the point of almost tearing out the heart of the onlooker is the farewell scene between David and Donna Roma pictured above. It is but one of hundreds of insistent situations which leave impressions of grandeur, of drama, of intensity in George Fitzmaurice's production "The Eternal City."—Advt.

more business than some pictures which had cost $800,000 to produce. "I could do no more," he said, "it is doing capacity business in every theater. The director must understand that the mere spending of money is not the answer to a box office success."

Both Rowland and John McCormack expressed gratification of the results obtained by Earl Hudson in charge of production on the coast—McCormack pointed out that Hudson had two winners out of four productions.

It was also announced that Fabians' latest, "Sailors' Wives," had been secured by First National and would be made for next season.

Miss Moore spoke briefly.

First Nat'l Issues Stock

"This second preferred stock is being issued for the purpose of funding the advances made by the original franchise holders through the exchange corporations to Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which advances have been, up to date, carried on our books in the form of a current liability owed by this company to its exchange corporations and original franchise holders. Thus, this $2,500,000 will be transferred from a quick liability into a second preferred stock account.

"The willingness of our original franchise holders so to fund in the form of second preferred stock the advances they made to First National, is an indication of their confidence in the future of First National and places this company in a still sounder financial position.

"This matter was decided upon by the directors of First National some months ago but the legal details involved have just been completed. The stock was divided into second preferred A and second preferred B stock merely to take care of certain inequalities in the amount of the assessments paid to First National by our various franchise holders.

"An issue of $3,000,000 of first preferred stock has been authorized at this time because in view of the issuance of the second preferred stock to fund the advances made by the original franchise holders, provision legally had to be made at the same time for the authorization of a prior first preferred stock. In other words, the arrangement for this issuance of first preferred stock has been made because of the willingness of the original franchise holders to take second preferred stock, thereby strengthening the financial structure of this company by having available $3,000,000 of first preferred stock ready to be issued in the future if the expansion of the company should create a need for additional capital. However, there is no intention whatsoever of issuing such first preferred stock for the present or for the immediate future; and this authorization has been made solely with the desire to use full financial caution in setting up the new financial structure of the company."

Hodkinson Deal for Canada

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—The W. W. Hodkinson Corp., Ltd., (Canada) through Harry Kaufman, of Premier Films, has secured three years' distribution rights in Canada on the following:

"Bright Lights of Broadway," "Marriage Morals," "Passionate Friends," "The Spider and the Rose," "Don't Marry for Money," "East Side, West Side," "Temporary Marriage," "The World's a Stage" and "Flesh and Blood."

As noted the Hodkinson Canadian Company intends distributing a special line of product in the Dominion. This will include a number of English pictures.

L. J. Again Active?

Reported Arthur S. Friend is Arranging With Motley Flint For His Re-Entrance in Selznick

A topic of interest in film circles yesterday concerned the reported desire of L. J. Selznick to again become active in the Selznick organization.

An effort made to reach L. J. for a statement failed. W. C. J. Doolittle, president of Selznick Distributing, said there was nothing to the report which ran something like this:

That L. J. wanted to re-enter Selznick as an active figure and that he had arranged for Arthur S. Friend, as an attorney has represented him on several occasions, to make a trip to the coast where he would confer with Motley H. Flint, of the Los Angeles financial interests which are much interested in the Selznick company. The purpose of the conference with Flint was to arrange L. J.'s return to the satisfaction of the banking group, of which Doolittle is the representative.

Goldwyn Signs Hjalmar Bergman

Hjalmar Bergman, one of the most talented of the younger writers of Europe, has arrived in New York on his way to California, where he has contracted with Goldwyn to write, and adapt, stories for the screen.

The arrangement was made at the suggestion of Victor Seastrom, for whom Bergman will concentrate his efforts.

Bergman is little known in the United States, only one of his novels having been translated into English. His is "God's Orchid." Three of his stories, "Mortal Clay," "Fire Bird" and "The Headsman" were produced by Seastrom in Sweden.

Bergman leaves for the Goldwyn studio tomorrow.

Wampas Frolic in 'Frisco

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—The Wampas have decided to hold their annual frolic in San Francisco on Jan. 19. The San Francisco authorities have pledged their co-operation, placing the Civic Auditorium with a seating capacity of 10,000 at their disposal.

Lionel Barrymore in "America"

W. Griffith has engaged Lionel Barrymore for the role of the "heavy" in "America." Production is expected to continue until Spring.

Mabel Normand in "The Extra Girl" pines for the life of a star. No wonder. And no wonder crowds everywhere are going wild over the Mack Sennett production, distributed by Associated Exhibitors.—Advt.

Inferior Films "Out"

J. D. Williams Says There's No Room for Them Abroad—Continued Silence on Valentino

J. D. Williams in a lengthy statement issued yesterday covering his observations on the situation abroad declared that the day of the inferior film had gone and that the European public is "just as tired of ordinary pictures as is the American public." In the statement there appeared only one reference to the reported settlement of the long-drawn out litigation between Rodolph Valentino and Famous Players when Williams stated:

"Regarding the status of Mr. Valentino's contract and Famous Players, I can say positively that absolutely nothing in the way of an agreement has been signed. If such an agreement is reached it will be announced doubtless by Famous Players and Ritz Pictures. I shall have more to say on this subject at an early date."

Intends Suing

American Society to Act Against Exhibitors Who Violate Copyrights on Music

E. C. Mills of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers stated yesterday that his organization intended bringing actions against the many exhibitors who violated copyrights during the time that negotiations were pending between the Society and the M. P. T. O.

He said that many exhibitors felt they could proceed with the use of the music "as they saw fit without license," with the result that confusion has resulted and a large number of violations piled up. Mills evidently does not feel very kindly toward the national exhibitor body. He declared he had discovered that it was necessary to "watch his step," at every stage in the proceedings which, at noted, have now been definitely dropped.

State Righters Meet Today

About twenty firms dealing in the state right field will meet at the Astor today to discuss the formation of a credit organization which is designed to function under the wing of the Hoy Reporting Service.

Asking About Studios

Coast Representatives Here Gathering Data About Advantages of Eastern Production

It is understood that the representatives of several coast producing interests are in New York making a general inquiry about the advisability of producing in and around New York.

The inquiries have been general, it is true, but Eastern studio men are of the opinion that the fact that interest in local studios has been evinced indicates the trend of mind so far as 1924 production is concerned. In some quarters, it is held that actors and actresses can be employed here for less money than on the coast.

Richard A. Rowland of First National has often stated he favored New York as a production center rather than Hollywood. Famous Players intend maintaining at least three companies at the Long Island City plant with a possibility of additional units.

Some of the inquiries emanate from production units which have never made any pictures here in the East.

One of the best posted men in the production field declared yesterday that the tendency for next year is decidedly toward the East. He looked for the resumption of picture-making here on a large scale in the near future.

1st Nat'l Backs Brandt Plan

First National will co-operate in the plan suggested by William Brandt, to assist in the effort to remove the admission tax. E. A. Eschmann has instructed his sales force to drive home to exhibitors the importance of taking an active part in the fight. The use of salesmen was suggested by Mr. Brandt and was endorsed by H. M. Richey, special contract man between the Hays organization and exhibitors on tax matters.

Gance Preparing "Napoleon" Film

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Paris—Abel Gance is actively at work on preparations for "Napoleon." As noted, the picture will be made with the co-operation of the French Government and will probably be ready the end of next year.

First Ready Early in 1924

Barbara La Marr will appear in her first picture as a First National star the early part of 1924. Clarence Badger will direct.

The arrest of Donna Roma after the conflict in the home of Baron Bonelli comes at the conclusion of one of the most dynamic dramatic delineations motion pictures have ever known.

It is but one of a myriad of emphatic sensations in George Fitzmaurice's production "The Eternal City." Presented by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn pictures.)—Advt.

Arrest Heads of "School"

The Associated Press reports from Chicago that L. F. Callahan, president; W. B. Bower, vice-president; H. Black, secretary-treasurer, and J. E. Lilley, sales manager have been arrested and held under $1,000 bail each by Chicago police for operating a "movie star mill" on the promise that its students would be turned into actors and actresses in five weeks.

A man named W. B. Bauer was at the Pennsylvania several weeks ago seeking talent for the Popular M. P. Prod. of Chicago. Bauer said he was vice-president of the company which planned to make one feature and a series of comedies.

Situation Clears

er for Consolidated Chain in diana Says Properties Are Now Earning Money

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Indianapolis—Present indications to a satisfactory settlement of receivership of the Consolidated and Theater Corp., according ed A. Sims, receiver. Sims that all unnecessary overhead has been eliminated, with the result virtually every property was money. Some properties, it understood, are doing better than was expected.

Release on the Pantheon, at Indianapolis, Ind., has been disposed of by the original owners. It is understood that the property was not a desirable one on the part of Consolidated and its disposal virtually prevents further loss.
Properties at Evansville, Terre Haut, Kokomo, Fort Wayne, Clinton and other cities are gradually being sold on a paying basis.

It is no decision has been made by the receiver and he would discuss plans for the future, it is understood that when sufficient money has been accumulated to pay creditors and the cost of the re-ceivership, the stockholders will be called to a meeting at which time the question of what to do with the properties will be discussed. One of the final closing of the receivership would be the sale of all leases on properties owned or controlled by the company. It is admitted that the course might result in a loss to the stockholders as the sale would be a "forced sale" in a way, the sort that rarely results in profits, as pointed out. The other alternative would be to continue operation on the properties.

P. Day Nets $7,371

W. H. Hirsch, Chairman of the
P. Day of the T. O. C. C., has announced reports. The net returns for the year totaled $7,371.63. Hirsch report of funds collected is not as much as had hoped for, but owing to the circumstances under which we were working we think the result has not been bad."

Statement from the Cohen office has been issued concerning the results nationally.

Company Joins First Nat'l in England

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Associated First National Theaters Ltd., has added to its sales representatives, Leonard Denham, who will represent the company in the Yorkshire territory, with offices at Leeds.

State Restrains Indiana Firm

According to Tri-Stone, the company has been granted an injunction by the State Film Service and Commissioner Maintrup, of Indianapolis, restraining them from distributing four pictures in Indiana.

Showing at the Ritz

The Ritz has arranged for a special showing of Betty Compson in "The Girl to Woman," at the Ritz beginning Jan. 10.

Inferior Films "Out"

Speaking of conditions in Europe,
Williams said in part:

"The demand as demonstrated in the cinema theaters is for really worth while entertainment, big theme plays, diverting and well acted subjects so that the public really gets something when it goes to motion pictures.

"These conditions convince me more and more that the pictures of the immediate future must be created by our greater artists and that inspiration must precede the production. The trouble has been that we have too much perspiration and not enough inspiration.

"The recent weeks in Europe have convinced me that we must and will internation-alize the motion picture. We will actually draw on all the world for our backgrounds, we will do away entirely with the great costs of the elaborate outdoor sets. Regarding the high costs of which so much is still being said, I am satisfied that internationalizing picture production will cut costs to a normal point.

"Rodolph Valentino joined me in London the day after my arrival and we spent a week together before his departure for the United States during which time I succeeded in signing up for five pictures instead of the two originally contracted for.

"I found exhibiting conditions very similar in England to those in America. Exhibitors are not breaking even on ordinary program pictures, but when they have a big picture they do capacity business. I think the public are bargain hunting for pictures nowadays and instead of spending their amusement allowance in seeing several picture shows a week they are spending it to see fewer and better pictures. It is going to be a difficult problem for the exterior to get enough of the big worth while pictures in future and I think it is necessary to create big independent stars, directors and producers who can deliver the goods, otherwise our business will suffer.

"There are many excellent opportunities in Europe for producing big pictures with the proper atmosphere, and it is my opinion that the American public would rather see pictures produced in the right settings, provided the leading people are well known to them, and the pictures produced by American organizations who know the taste of the American public.

Speaking of Valentino's popularity,
he said:

"There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that Valentino is as popular in England as in America. Every exhibitor here without exception, tells me that Valentino pictures hold the record in his theater; and indeed such pictures as "The Young Rajah" and "Beyond the Rocks," which you will agree with me rank amongst Valentino's worst,

In the Courts

City Court Justice McGeehan has directed judgment for $1,259 in favor of Albert James against Stanley J.
Rollo, after striking out the answer.
The papers show that Rollo agreed to give James $6,000 if he would drop a suit against the Chaplin Classics, but failed to pay four notes for that amount when they came due and James had to sue on them. He got judgments on all but the last $1,250 note, and collected the bulk, but Rollo defended the last suit. In making the notes Rollo guaranteed that he owned real estate in Yonkers worth $20,000.

Supreme Court Justice Platzek has discontinued a suit of the estate of Owen F. Kivlon against Angier B.
Duke, Henry M. Hobart and Distinctive Prod., because the case has been settled.

A default judgment for $155 has been filed in the Supreme Court by the Reel and Pub. Co. against William C. Pierpont of Yonkers for services.

Amusements in So. Calif. Grow

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Admission taxes collected in Southern California during October show an attendance of 19,213,800, an increase of 5,764,700 over October, 1922. For the first eleven months of 1923 the receipts from amusement taxes were $3,040,- 822, as against $2,456,72 for the corresponding period of 1922, a gain of 23%.

Collector Goodcell estimated that the amusement tax collection for the full year would be $3,325,000, compared with $2,673,113 for 1922, an increase of 24%. The tax paid represents a 1923 amusement attendance in Southern California of 226,100,000, against a 1922 attendance of 181,771, 000, or an increase of 44,329,000. The tax paid means that $39,000,000 was spent for amusements in 1923, which tops the 1922 mark by $7,822,644.

Banford Promoted

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—Walter Banford has been appointed a district manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan with supervision of Minneapolis, Des Moines and Omaha. He has been with the company for some time.

Territory Reapportioned

Des Moines and Omaha until now have been handled by William E.
Truog, but his duties proved so arduous that James R. Grainger, decided to divide up the territory in order to lighten his burdens.

Rogers on Trip

W. F. Rogers, Western division sales manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan has left for a trip through the Southwest. He will go as far South as Dallas.

Storm Breaks

Expected Dissension Over "The Birth of a Nation" Loose in Kansas—
Many Protests

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Topeka, Kan.—A storm has broken over the action of the censor board in authorizing the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Kansas.

Governor Davis, when he returns from a trip will find an assortment of protests that will occupy his attention. The protests are pouring not only into the governor's office, but also into the office of the attorney general, Charles B. Griffith. Petitions are coming into Griffith's office begging him to take legal steps to stop the showing of the film.

It is probable Griffith will advise the board to repeal its action in admitting the picture. The Supreme Court has decided the action of the board was final. Only Governor Davis could stop the picture, and the governor has said that he saw nothing wrong with it.

A petition of 500 citizens of Salina, business men, city and county officials and school teachers has been presented the governor begging him to stop the film. A petition of 103 signatures from Fort Scott negroes was sent to Griffith, who transmitted it to Governor Davis.

The ministers at Wichita, Fort Scott, Salina and Kansas City, have filed protests and many personal letters are coming in. Delegations of negroes from Topeka and Coffeyville called on Griffith today and protested.

Restrain Rising Sun Prod.

The Attorney-General's office has obtained a temporary injunction restraining Rising Sun Prod., Inc., from selling further stock in the company. The action will be heard on Friday. It is alleged that the company of which Al Gilbert is president, has been selling stock to prospective actors and actress in lieu of an actual transfer of money for a course of training in acting.

Ganna Walska in Films

Reports from Chicago indicate that Ganna Walska will be starred in a series of pictures to be financed by her husband, Harold McCormick.

Robt. Sherwood in N. Y. Herald: "Deserves a place among the eminently fine things the movies have accomplished."

New York Times: "One that will win new audiences for the screen."

New York Mail: "Will always remain as representing the finest that is on the screen."

Chicago Evening Post: "It will sweep you off your feet with its strength and dramatic power."

Baltimore Evening Sun: "The greatest step forward since 'The Birth of a Nation.' It will take the films five years to catch up with 'Anna Christie.'"

National Board of Review: "'Anna Christie' stands as one of the most striking achievements of the year."

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: "'Anna Christie' is a great picture."

PLANS

By DANNY

Famous has an idea or two for the next season. Planning things into details. Many not settled. But one of the promised innovations is that Jesse Lasky will spend a great deal more time in the East than ever before. Will practically make his headquarters here.

This has been planned for some years. But heretofore it has been difficult to put it into operation. Lasky will wait to see the premiere of "The Ten Commandments," and will then hurry back to the Coast, returning very shortly thereafter for an indefinite stay.

This doesn't mean switching the bulk of Famous production to the East. Both the New York and the Western studios will be kept very busy. If present plans are carried out. But the distance between New York and Hollywood—3,500 miles—is too great for executives to be separated. That is the one big trouble in this business.

Henry Saulsbury is again active in Famous. But after spending a lot of time for Famous among exhibitors he is now in the production department. If his contact with exhibitors means anything it should help the production department a lot. That is a production department is interested in what the exhibitor thinks, feels, or wants. Most of them don't. Despite what they say.

Some interesting developments in an important distributing concern. Going on. Not to a head yet. More about later.

Ventilating System as Model
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—Public health officials have asked Balaban & Katz to furnish them with the plan of ventilation in theaters operated by that firm. The plan will then be presented at government expense to theater buyers as a model of perfection, which if carried out will offer the maximum safety to the health of those who annually attend theaters.

"Sioux City unanimously declares 'The Courtship of Myles Standish' the greatest production of all time," Henry Rehfield of the Plaza Theater, wired J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors.—Advt.

"Rudy" In "Beaucaire"

For Famous Players—Originally Purchased by Douglas Fairbanks and Then Resold

It is understood that Famous Players have purchased "M'sieur Beaucaire" as a starring vehicle for Rodolph Valentino. Sydney Olcott as noted, is slated to direct, production getting under way shortly after the first of the year.

"M'sieur Beaucaire" was originally purchased by Douglas Fairbanks for his own use but later abandoned in favor of "The Thief of Bagdad." The picture will be made in the East. Olcott at present is shooting a few remaining scenes for "The Humming Bird," the new Swanson vehicle which, incidentally is expected to go into the Rialto and Rivoli for a sim-

Green's Contract Near End

It is understood that Al Green's contract with Famous Players will expire shortly, but that Famous retains the right to exercise a three years' option on his services. Green is now completing "Pied Piper Malone" and has been "farmed" out to Joseph Schenck to direct Constance Talmadge in one picture.

Urging Tax Repeal

F. I. L. M. Clubs Instruct Salesmen to Help Exhibitors in Gaining Public Support

THE FILM DAILY has received private advices from a number of important key cities which indicate that the various F. I. L. M. Boards of Trade, have seized upon the suggestion originally made by Billy Brandt, that film salesmen be used to aid exhibitors in securing the support of the public on behalf of the admission tax repeal.

As noted, E. A. Eshmann of First National has instructed his sales force to get busy. So far as is known, this is the only national distributor that has issued any blanket order along those lines. Individual F. I. L. M. Boards, however, have taken

Friend Denies Selznick Report

Arthur S. Friend, of Distinctive, who returned from the Coast on Monday, denied yesterday that his visit there concerned the reported return of L. J. Selznick into the Selznick organization. Friend declared that his visit concerned the affairs of his company only.

New Exhibitor Ass'n

Discussed by Hays Members—Producer-Owned Theaters The Nucleus, They Feel

Members of the Hays organization have been quietly discussing the advisability of launching an exhibitor organization which would function as a separate body but yet to be allied with the M. P. P. D. A., Inc.

Parties concerned are inclined to be decidedly reticent. However, the impression is known to exist in some quarters that nothing can be accomplished with the present administration of the M. P. T. O. The point is made that if such a step were decided upon, it would not prove very difficult of accomplishment in view of the theater affiliations of important companies like First National, Metro, Famous Players, Goldwyn and Universal. It was stated yesterday that the nucleus of a powerful organization now rests in the hands of these companies.

Should the organization become a reality, it is figured that the prestige of the important exhibiting interests that would be swung into line by the producing and distributing units would be sufficient to make independent operators join as well.

Pettijohn Leaves

Charles C. Pettijohn left for Indianapolis yesterday to attend the dinner of the F. I. L. M. Board of Trade at the Severin tonight. He will visit Chicago before returning home.

State Righters Decide to Form Body—Appoint Organization Committee

I. E. Chadwick of Merit, W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow and Joe Brandt of C. B. C., were appointed a committee on organization yesterday at a meeting of state right distributors held at the Astor. They will meet again on Monday to discuss plans for the proposed association which will control credits through the Hoy Reporting Service.

It is possible that the new body may function along the lines originally set by the now defunct Independent Producers and Distributors Ass'n of which Harry G. Kosch was the attorney, but it may be that a new unit entirely will develop.

In The Courts

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Sioux City, Ia.—Mr. and Mrs. F. Eddington have lost their suit to recover $13,500 on a motion picture theater deal when the jury which heard their suit against Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Longnecker and Mrs. Mary Miller returned a verdict in favor of the defendants.

The Eddingtons charged that August 1920 they purchased the theater from the Longneckers and Mrs. Miller for $13,500. Eddington, later filed suit against the persons from whom he purchased the theater, alleging that in making the transaction Longnecker had been guilty of misrepresentation. Eddington testified that Longnecker told him the gross profits of the theater amounted to between $4,000 and $5,000 a month. Longnecker denied he ever made this representation.

Hagerstown, Md.—The appeal of C. Easton, J. Funkhouser, C. La and A. H. Gunnell, representing one of the theater interests in this city from the decision of Judge Albert Doub in awarding the Washington St. Amusement Co., the use of the Academy, has been withdrawn from the docket of the State Court of Appeals. At the same time, the suit against the Colonial Realty Co., of the use of the Colonial, has been withdrawn making it evident that a compromise has been effected by the interests. The Amusement Company is controlled by the Nixon Nirdlinger interests of Philadelphia operators of the Nixon Academy.

Pawhuska, Okla.—As a result of the theater crash last May 1, at Hominy Okla., four damage suits, totaling $100,000, have been filed in the district court here, against Charles Peit, owner of the theater, and the Stewart Construction Co., the builders.

Newspaper Opinions

"Anna Christie"—1st Nat'l

Strand

AMERICAN—* * * Takes with it to the screen many of those qualities that made it such acceptable entertainment as a drama. * * * Mr. Ince and his director, John Wray Griffith deserve special mention for the deftness with which they have handled the delicate situations that might so easily have been offensive.

DAILY NEWS—I am sure Blanche Sweet is a faithful copy of Anna Christie. George Marion, I think, a little overdoes the maudlin sniffing of Chris Christopherson, and William Russell is a great, big handsome brute. * * *

"Powerful," I imagine, is the word which will be most often used in connection with "Anna Christie."

EVENING JOURNAL—The three-cornered conflict is superbly acted. * * * Miss Sweet is transferred in the title role, bearing an altogether different appearance and acting with a far greater range and intensity than ever before. Her characterization is a valuable addition to screen triumphs. Mr. Marion's portrayal of Chris is equally as good in the film as it was on the stage. Mr. Russell, like Miss Sweet, reaches new heights.

EVENING WORLD—Not that the director of this new "Anna Christie" did not strive for that dramatic perfection which theater-goers found in the legitimate production he did, but he failed on the side of striving too hard. * * * But, at that, this picture is very good entertainment. * * * It had its flaws, but it told its story for all that. And some of these flaws were of the amateur kind. * * * Her (Blanche Sweet's) portrayal was very good, but it was plain that acting, unassisted by spoken lines, was not sufficient.

George Marion, her wellmeaning but weak father, was great, and William Russell probably never was better than he was in some of his scenes.

HERALD—It represents the most thoroughly adult effort in an industry that has been famous for its infancy. * * * As a result "Anna Christie" is a singularly fine picture—a credit to Thomas Ince. * * * The intent of the thing is conveyed with commendable subtlety—and with unmistakable force. * * * Blanche Sweet plays Anna Christie with fine feeling and tremendous earnestness. * * * George Marion * * * is given to overindulgence at times. His comedy scenes are exceptionally well handled. William Russell * * * is splendid. * * *

MAIL—* * * As powerful and moving as the play which won Eugene O'Neill the Pulitzer prize. To this reviewer the film will always remain as representing the finest that is on the screen, an event to which he can always turn with delight. * * * There was great strength in her (Miss Sweet's) interpretation. * * *

George Marion, * * * made the part vital and real. Too many superlatives cannot be used in praise of his work. * * * Two other fine characterizations should not go unmentioned. They are those of William Russell, * * * and Eugenie Besserer. * * * MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * O'Neill's dramatic dialogue, rough and crude, but in keeping with his characters—a quality inevitably lost on the screen. As a consequence the film version becomes less forceful and less vivid, and the conflict loses much of its poignancy.

Bradley King has done an intelligent piece of work in the adaptation. * * * Blanche Sweet draws a distinct characterization. * * *

George Marion is excellent as the sentimental Swede father, obstinate, weak, blundering. William Russell * * * the necessary appearance of brawny seamanship, and Eugenie Besserer gives a characterization * * * which stands out as a convincing bit.

POST—It is an exceedingly fine motion picture, following the original more faithfully than is the wont of photo plays, and the settings, if memory can be relied upon, duplicate the stage sets. The film is so far above the average that it is one of the outstanding screen productions of the year.

SUN—* * * A picture of exceptionally fine quality. * * * All its dramatic values are fully realized and the picture sweeps on in a fashion to disarm carping criticism.

Blanche Sweet plays the part of Anna Christie, and plays it well. * * * William Russell * * * is responsible for most of the best scenes.

TELEGRAM—The story has a wider sweep on the screen, Thomas H. Ince having given particular attention to the scenes at sea which enter so vitally into the story.

TIMES—Abundant credit is due the producer and the director for the skillful, impressive and artistic handling of this production, and also for restraint concerning motion picture license. * * * An example of progress in film history. * * * Blanche Sweet as Anna Christie, makes the shadow impersonation live. One of the minor weaknesses of this picture is the presenting of a miniature steamship at sea. * * * Burke, played by William Russell is splendid. * * *

TRIBUNE—Never has Miss Sweet done anything to approach this characterization. * * * George Marion, as her old and bibulous father, was almost too real. * * * Those who saw "Anna Christie" on the stage need not be afraid to go to see the screen version.

WORLD—Thomas H. Ince had the opportunity of his life to turn out a sensational film success. It was a "natural." Yet he fell short of that. At the same time the picture at the Strand is one above the average in dramatic strength and the performance of Blanche Sweet as Anna is extremely capable and fine.

In the fore part of the story there is a "cut back" employed for the purpose of bringing out Anna's past. * * * This is done incompetently and without much weight in sincerity. They have tried to toughen her and failed. This weakens all that follows.

Four Theaters Burn

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Syracuse, N. Y.—For the second time in six months fire damaged the Midland. The first fire damaged the house to such an extent that it was only two weeks ago that rebuilding was completed.

Stamford, Conn.—Tenants in the Strand theater building, were forced to vacate when fire of unknown origin started in the theater.

Albion, Mich.—The New Family, formerly the Bijou, on S. Superior St., is closed as a result of a fire that started during a performance.

Keokuk, Ia.—The Grand is a loss by fire. It was the oldest house in Keokuk and was owned by the Baker-Dodge organization.

up the plan in various parts of country.

H. M. Richey has prepared pamphlet called "A Booklet of Facts in which he gives a number of reasons why the tax should be repealed. Ten thousand of these have been printed and will be broadcasted by exhibitors throughout the country. The last page states the compilation was prepared by "the M. P. T. Special Committee in co-operation with the M. P. Prod. and Dist. America."

Billy Brandt, president of the M. P. T. O. has prepared a complete campaign book in which eight different lines of suggestions are followed. These will be sent to very members of the organization in New York State.

Varges Here

Capt. Ariel L. Varges, war correspondent and International No. 1 reel photographer, has arrived in New York marking the end of a five-year tour of the world, in which he travelled more than 250,000 miles, visiting scores of different countries and made a complete circuit of the globe, shooting film all the time.

Location Inspiration

Factor in Making Big, Important Pictures, According to J. D. Williams

Make the big, important pictures location called for by the story; really if the story has a foreign ground. The inspiration that the producer obtains under such circumstances, plus the naturalness of the surroundings make for tremendously interesting results."

It is the opinion of J. D. Williams of Ritz Carlton Pictures, just from the other side.

On his last trip to Europe he conclusively demonstrated this," he went on to say. "Every one who has been in Europe realizes what happens to them when they tread on old, historical and unusual ground. Everyone is thrilled or affected to some degree, no matter how often they have crossed. It is only natural that this would occur to a producer or director of pictures. It has this effect as many important directors, I should say, tell me.

Let Henry King, who is making 'The Extra Girl' in Verona. He is enthralled and delighted with what he is doing. He could never get such a thrill in Hollywood, even if the same thing has not taken into account. Ed. Crewe, who is shooting in Alhambra. He, too, is an enthusiast.

Smoke

Usually precedes fire. And there's a lot of smoke about the Hays office these days. With reference to a possible "auxiliary organization" of exhibitors. Nothing definite yet. Nothing settled. Just a lot of smoke. Look for the fire to break through most any week. And there's a reason. Hays cannot put over the work he has in hand—cannot get set; cannot fight the enemy without, unless he has exhibitor co-operation.

For months he has tried to get the M. P. T. O. of A. to co-operate. Everybody who knows that Xmas comes once a year knows how Hays tried to line up this organization to co-operate. The proverbial cold shoulder was a slice of heat as against what he got. All Hays had to do was to want something. And the M. P. T. O. of A. was against it.

REMINISCENCING

Way back in May. When the exhibitors' convention was on. In Chicago. This was said:

"* * * you may not know it, and a lot of you won't believe it, but you're on trial. And you're either going to come through and prove yourselves again and organize properly and finance yourselves adequately or—
"You're going to find another national exhibitor organization started. * * *"

Nine Stage Studio

Planned for Queens—Arthur S. Friend and Wm. O. Hurst Important Figures in Scheme

Plans for what is termed the largest studio in the world, to be erected in Queens, will be filed within thirty days and construction work will begin a month later. This enterprise has developed as a result of a demand on the part of large producers for additional Eastern studio facilities.

Among those who have given support to the enterprise are Richard A. Rowland, of First National; Samuel Goldwyn, E. L. Smith, of Inspiration, and Arthur S. Friend, of Distinctive. Organization work was undertaken by executives of Distinctive Corporation, including Henry M. Hobart and Charles S. Hervey. To draw up plans Friend engaged the services of William O. Hurst.

The location decided on as a result of Hurst's work is within 20 minutes of Times Square and will permit of the erection of nine stages, each to be equipped with its own carpenter shop, dressing rooms and executive offices. In addition there will be a laboratory, a storage vault and a warehouse for the salvage of scenic material.

The plans include to provide producers an opportunity for test runs. Friend made his trip to the Coast to check up on the situation there.

Hurst is to be general manager of the studio.

WHY ROME IS CALLED "THE ETERNAL CITY"

George Fitzmaurice, noted director, whose achievement in the blending of scenic beauty and dramatic action, coupled with story surprise, resulted in "The Eternal City," already quoted as the finest screen effort of the year. Produced by Samuel Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures).—Advt.

Location Inspiration

"I have several stories with a romantic background which Valentino will make. For obvious reasons I cannot disclose these locations. But I am certain that he will make a far better picture with this background than attempting to shoot it in Hollywood.

"The big picture of the future will be made where the scenario calls locations to be. It is out of the question to try and do this in Hollywood. Imagine what 'The White Sister' would be without the background that King found in Italy? What would Fitzmaurice have found in this country for 'The Eternal City'?

"In my opinion this is the most important production problem that faces us today. By making pictures as I suggest much would be accomplished."

"The Acquittal"—Universal Cameo

AMERICAN—It is rattling good melodrama, and for a picture of its kind has its points.

DAILY NEWS—An enormously clever film.

EVENING JOURNAL—One of the most engrossing of its type. It is more than as good as Rita Weiman's play, from which it was adapted—it is better.

EVENING WORLD—never have we seen a better working out of a court room scene or the workings of a District Attorney's office that we beheld when "The Acquittal" was unwound due to spread thrills around by the bushel.

MAIL—made a gripping motion picture. It kept the spectators at the Cameo yesterday guessing aloud, but never guessing correctly who committed the murder.

The picture is from the Universal studios. We have come to look upon their product as having a personality. Their pictures are distinguished by the attention given to the creation of atmosphere.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is rattling good melodrama, with mystery, well sustained until the very last minute and it has the added attraction of having Claire Windsor in the leading role. The mystery succeeds in being hidden, it is cleverly told and it is for the most part well acted.

SUN—splendid cast chosen to portray the somewhat changed story.

TELEGRAM—An excellent film this week in "The Acquittal," made into an ideal film mystery.

TIMES—Fairly well produced and thoroughly satisfying in the end. It is a story calculated to keep the spectators guessing for most of the footage.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—"U" has supplied a production which is a background of no mean proportions and serves to dress up a screen tale that needs it. Looks to have a chance on the strength of the production and the class of the players, where they are prejudiced toward society dramas, but as a story and in the manner it has been treated the entire work lacks much.

TRIBUNE—No one can say that Clarence Brown, the director, has not done everything in his power to keep up the suspense in this mystery play.

"The Dangerous Maid"—1st Nat'l Rivoli

AMERICAN—Constance as a comedienne is charming. As for the picture it has good entertainment value, has been made with careful thought and certainly will please Constance's admirers.

EVENING WORLD—the whole works in "The Dangerous Maid," at the Rivoli. And she makes a fine job of it, too.

MAIL—petty and dull, except for some of the pranks of Constance Talmadge. It is about time to call a halt on the production of costume films, especially when they run to the type of "The Dangerous Maid."

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Constance Talmadge scored a hit when she made "Dangerous Maid." From start to finish, the play grips and amuses. Constance Talmadge, pretty, capable, vivacious.

POST—Miss Talmadge is clever, charming, light—but dramatic never! To put any one so capable of playing the supercilious, or the mischievous, or the "teasing" type into "The Dangerous Maid," as bad judgment as putting a feather-weight against a heavy weight.

SUN—The costumes and settings have been provided with a very lavish and tasteful hand, except that more care might have been taken in equipping Tearle with a wig.

TELEGRAM—gives Miss Talmadge an excellent opportunity to display her ability as an actress outside the field of comedy, and strengthens the belief that in future all her stories will be more dramatic in type.

TIMES—The settings, and the locations selected for the exteriors in this film, are quite appealing, but although Miss Talmadge is sweet and sympathetic she cannot make up for a very labored story. The narrative possesses charm, but is stripped of suspense.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—impresses mildly although satisfactory enough as an ordinary film feature. Alongside her consummate artistry in "Dulcy," the star does not quite match her past performances with this.

TRIBUNE—An extremely amusing picture, and it gives Constance a chance to do all of the things she does best.

WORLD—The play itself is ordinary and the star is away out of bounds. Conway Tearle also is practically a total loss.

"Our Hospitality"—Metro Rialto

AMERICAN—Once Buster gets started in "Hospitality," after a somewhat slow beginning, he plunges into satire on the hackneyed Southern feud theme that is as humorous as any comedy I have seen on the screen since Chaplin carried the town by storm in "The Kid."

EVENING JOURNAL—Had Buster sharpened the satire in the beginning of "Our Hospitality," by burlesquing the clan warfare he would have a thoroughly fine picture.

EVENING WORLD—but we feel sure you'll giggle a lot, laugh a lot and roar a little.

Any Buster Keaton picture, large or small, is worth seeing and laughing at, and this is particularly true of "Our Hospitality."

HERALD—By all odds the most expensive of his productions. It may not be quite so consistently uproarious as some of his humble two reels, but it is certainly funny enough.

MAIL—Buster Keaton seems to be trying to get away from the standardized slapstick movie and to inject his sober acrobatics into a motion picture with a plot. Buster has achieved some measure of success.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is a comedy, but it has a highly dramatic basis. The humor is gentle and mild, but if you would just as soon have good smiles rather than loud laughs, you will like it. In fact, I think you'll like it anyway, for if Buster Keaton is not as funny as usual in this, which he is not, there are some fine thrills to make up for the deficit.

POST—And although not as hilariously funny as "The Three Ages," it is full of good comedy.

SUN—Buster is funny—oh, very funny. He does not, as do Chaplin and, in only slightly lesser degree, Lloyd, make a situation funny by merely being in it, but given a funny situation he can make you shriek out unexpectedly and temporarily attract the attention of everybody else from the screen.

TELEGRAM—Buster Keaton has a part that fits him to perfection in "Our Hospitality," a feature length picture in which this unusual comedian appears at his best.

TIMES—This picture is one of the whims, and in many sequences whimsical. It starts rather slowly, but gathers speed with a vengeance toward the last reel.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It is one of the funniest pictures with which Keaton has ever been identified and unique in the sense that it is partly and seriously dramatic.

TRIBUNE—The picture is a burlesque on the well known feud melodrama, and, while it is quite different from the usual Buster Keaton comedy, it is a step in the right direction.

WORLD—Three generations of Keatons combined yesterday to present one of the most amusing comedies in months.

"The Shepherd King"—Fox Central

AMERICAN—Is done with a fineness and sincerity that indicates Mr. Edwards knew what he was doing.

"The Shepherd King" is one investment Mr. Fox can point to with pride. Whether or not it will be a popular entertainment is another question.

DAILY NEWS—Because armies with banners always bore me a little in the films, I found "The Shepherd King" less absorbing than I might have. True, the sheer drama of the boy David's growth to power is handled excellently; the subtitles are finely composed and fit into the picture, but one is inclined to accuse the director of padding his narrative with warfare.

EVENING JOURNAL—J. Gordon Edwards has his finest picture.

Mr. Edwards has maneuvered large numbers of men with admirable skill. It might be said that there is a bit too much warfare, but there is no denying that it is done superbly. The acting is up to the high standard of the direction. Unstinted praise is due to the cameraman for the picture is an example of magnificent photography.

EVENING WORLD—"The Shepherd King" is a thing of great beauty. And we found ourselves mightily interested in the widely known story as it was unfolded on the Central screen last night. There have been many spectacles with massive sets but "The Shepherd King," as a production need bow its head to none of them.

MAIL—He has surrounded that dramatic episode with great hordes of men armed with spears and swords who push each other in a warlike manner and crowd out all the simple beauty of the tale. The result is a monotonous and totally uninteresting spectacle.

SUN—If it were not for Nerio Bernardi's David in "The Shepherd King" would be difficult for one to do more than say it is very, very bad—in direction, photography, casting and scenario—and let it go at that as a perhaps unduly simplified but entirely adequate bit of reviewing.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Dignity, sincerity and fidelity welded to strong dramatic interest characterize "The Shepherd King." There can be no doubt of the appeal of the new Fox film. It can be a feature on any bill in any theater in any section, appealing to any class.

POST—And the scenic effects are truly beautiful. However, J. Gordon Edwards, the director, seemed to have a difficult time getting his story satisfactorily under way. There is an evident lack of action in the beginning of the film and a jerkiness that may, of course, be due to cutting. The final scenes are stirring and on the whole, "The Shepherd King" is an entertaining motion picture.

TELEGRAM—The beautiful story of David and his ascent to the throne of Israel has come down through the ages, and is presented in the photoplay "The Shepherd King" authentically and dramatically.

TIMES—What is undoubtedly one of the most strikingly beautiful spectacles, with huge throngs and great scenic structures. In so far as Biblical stories and the impressive features of battle scenes go, it is a distinct achievement. The story is, perhaps, a trifle slow, especially at the start, but this defect is amply made up by the costumes, some of the acting and the distant shots of desert caravans.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—The picture, although it displays the fact that it represents a tremendous outlay, failed to strike a responsive chord in the audience present. At no time was there even the slightest suggestion of spontaneous applause.

TRIBUNE—It seems to us the best thing this extremely imaginative director ever has done. The picture drags at the beginning, or at least the action does; but, while we knew this, we did not feel it, for we were enjoying every moment of it. It is so beautiful that one would not miss a foot of it.

"Slave of Desire"—Gold-Cosmopolitan Capitol

AMERICAN—That a brave attempt was made to offer something outside of the usual run of pictures, there is no doubt.

If Balzac were to return and slip unheeded into a seat at the Capitol he would have to agree with friend Shakespeare that it is wise father who knows his own child.

DAILY NEWS—"The Slave of Desire" is a fair picture, interesting and well edited. Mr. Walsh restrains his piffing poet at generally behaves in good taste.

EVENING JOURNAL—free adapted from Balzac. The most enjoyable aspect of the picture is the performance of Bessie Love.

EVENING WORLD—fair screen entertainment; that is if you like one of those stories. The producers have seen fit to sew close to the Balzac line in all particulars save the name. And, judging from the lines outside the Capitol yesterday, "Slave of Desire" must be a corking good box-office title.

MAIL—The film is an exceptionally fine production, a beautiful version of a charming story, well acted and directed, with appreciation for the material with which Balzac spun his tale.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The story has been told, but the idea missed. Balzac does not stint us with descriptions of his characters were dressed or lived, but that has all been improved upon by the director, and the result is a lavish display of luxurious ease and desperate poverty that passes belief.

POST—Nevertheless, this is a great story for the screen and George D. Baker has shown both courage and artistry in attempting such an imaginative tale. There is true Balzacian flavor throughout the production.

SUN—What might have been a most effective picture in "Slave of Desire" has been marred by rather theatrical direction of a stereotyped kind.

TELEGRAM—produced by Gilbert E. Gable on a sumptuous scale worthy of the intrinsic merits of the story.

TIMES—This version of the Balzac narrative is not uninteresting, but it could have been made much stronger if somebody familiar with French and France had undertaken to do full justice to Balzac's story.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—George D. Baker made it and turned out a good feature. Whoever adapted the French classic to the screen achieved a notable script.

The film has been artistically produced on an unusually fine cast, constituting one of the best acting organizations gathered together in one film in many a day.

TRIBUNE—The people in the picture go about their tasks in a deadly dull and serious way, never for a moment realizing it would seem, that they are playing in a fairy story and not in a triangular screen melodrama. As it is now it leaves the spectators quite bewildered. Of course, means nothing at all.

WORLD—Once the christening has faded the production opens its sharp eyes and develops into a highly entertaining member of the cinema community.

MINER—* * * in its celluloid precision actors and directors have magnificently the same stark simplicity on which marked the play * * * It is a big piece of work which Miss Sweet has done.

PRESS—* * * a film that will lift the quality average far above normal. As far as possible they have retained simplicity and thereby the force of this tale of sea, and the result is a wonderfully story piece of cinema endeavor.

ALD—Blanche Sweet plays one of the roles of her career. The picture has been beautifully done and is scenically an art work.

S—Summary: A photoplay which is roughly human and can be recommended to adults.

ORD—I consider it done into a picture with exquisite craft, etched on the screen with fine sure strokes of that master's tool, the motion camera. * * * Blanche Sweet does an ethereal bit of acting as Anna Christie. * * *

ES—* * * Thomas H. Ince's contribution to the highbrow campaign in film. * * * There is theatricalism in the production and some rather fidgety acting that detracts from the character of certain scenes. As a whole, "Anna Christie," carries more strength than the usual run of plays that if you like the more vigorous drama, it is bound by comparison to have an unusual appeal.

Eastman, Rochester
CHRONICLE—* * * "Anna Christie," is a great screen production. The picture should not offend any one although it is intensely realistic, it is all suggestive.

MINER—The cast is most impressive. There is enough action in the many scenes of this film to give you a generous amount of cinema thrills.

PRESS—The subject has been handled boldly and without undue emphasis on the stock, stockingless, corsetless flapper.

edited because the gloss was taken from the phases without a final restoration to happiness and wealth. * * *

FIELD—A decidedly better-than-average picture. * * * Here is a truly up-to-date story from the gifted pen of a man, peopled with screen celebrities assembled in one picture, and the result is well worth while.

S—Summary: A corking good picture will go a long way in proving to the masses that better pictures can be made.

RD—Arthur Train's novel or play evidently contained an embarrassing amount of material. So much that the director utilized all of it crammed the picture to boredom with catalogued happenings.

* * * Just another picture. It merits, however, not the least of the very capable cast just men.

ancer of the Nile—F. B. O. go Neighborhood Theaters

D-EXAMINER—Interior settings are nice and effective. The cast is fairly cheap. But expensive settings and players can't overcome the burden of a story; indifferent direction and poor acting.

e Daring Years—Equity Capitol, Philadelphia

I AMERICAN—Mary Carr contributes another of her excellent "mother" pictures.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—* * * Might easily have been a trite and hackneyed picture, but it isn't, and probably credit should be given the director and the fine cast. * * *

RECORD—* * * Picture of timely sort.
"The Day of Faith"—Gold-Cosmopolitan, King's, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—The story is cleverly unfolded. * * * The picture has a powerful motive and points a stern lesson while the action, settings and swift moving circumstances, leading to a thrilling climax, are all that can be desired.

The cast is one of eminence and of great merit.

POST-DISPATCH—This seems to be the mingling of philosophy and sentimentality which forms the basis of "The Day of Faith" * * * In order to provide thrills to go with the sentiment the director put it on rather thick in the way of providing canalities.

TIMES—A "faith" story that leaves one as unregenerate as ever, sums up the verdict. Nor does the excellent cast redeem the picture.

Rialto, Washington
TIMES—Tod Browning has directed this picture with sincere enthusiasm, but has allowed it to lead him astray at the expense of suspense and continuity of the narrative.

"Desire"—Metro Colonial, Indianapolis

STAR—Although he was given a feeble story to start on, Rowland V. Lee, the director, has come off with flying colors. This, it should be said, is largely due to the efforts of a cast that contains at least a half dozen good box office names.

"Don't Marry For Money"—Weber and North—Aldine, Phila.

BULLETIN—It holds attention, not because of its worth, but because House Peters is a good actor and Rubye de Remer has a trick of gown and hair that fascinates in spite of itself.

NORTH AMERICAN—The some of the scenes in "Don't Marry for Money," * * * are too melodramatic to be convincing or even interesting, the film as a whole contains much that is photographically and artistically splendid.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—It is an altogether forceful and pleasing picture, considering the rather trite theme.

RECORD—An intensely interesting picture. * * * While it is intended as an "adult emotion" film, the picture reverts into a thrilling melodrama near the end. * * *

"The Fighting Blade"—1st Nat'l Metropolitan, Washington

TIMES—"The Fighting Blade" is the crowning vehicle of his career. It is a beautiful piece of realistic and artistic weaving. * * *

"Flaming Youth"—1st Nat'l Capitol, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—* * * this production is far from being a faithful translation of the book on which it is based. Nor could it be, with the prevailing censorship restrictions. * * * Colleen Moore has the best role of her career, which is rather faint praise at that.

POST—* * * no doubt will thrill the flappers and some of their elders. But to our mind the trashy material Director John Francis Dillon and his players had to work with defied their best efforts to turn out a good photoplay.

Capitol, Detroit

NEWS—* * * the movie isn't nearly so wild as the book and those sensation-seekers who go to the Capitol this week with the expectation of seeing something real shocking are quite likely to be disappointed. * * * Little Miss Moore unexpectedly bursts in upon us in a whirl of emotions and definitely establishes herself as one of the finest dramatic actresses on the screen today.

TIMES—A won-wonderful piece of "flapper" acting. * * * Beautifully in production, a gem of directorial art. It rings the bell.

A Prince of a King

(Dinky Dean Production-Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

DINKY DEAN, a Chaplin discovery, who made his bow in "The Kid," comes forward in a real, high-class production, every minute of which holds entertainment. It is without doubt one of the best photoplays for the children that has ever been screened. Exhibitors will go a long way before they find a production more suitable for the nation's juvenile fans.

Dinky Dean flashes some acrobatic stunts that would make the Barnum & Bailey stars take notice. He interprets his role just like a regular human being would act in real life. After seeing this sample of his work, we predict that other juvenile stars will soon be looking to their laurels.

Everything about the picture is distinctly high class. The settings are well done and there has been much attention paid to detail. The plot is laid in a mythical period of long ago in merrie England. This gave the producers an opportunity for using some fine costumes. The exterior sets are excellent examples of rural landscapes with the photography one of the features of the picture.

It will be interesting to note that "A Prince of a King" marks the return of Virginia Pearson, who appears as the queen. Then there are such well-known players as Eric Mayne, Joseph Swickard, John Sainpolis, Mitchell Lewis and Sam de Grasse. The story is of the fairy tale type and will be hailed with delight by young and old folks. Mention should be made of "Brutus" a dog that contributes some of the stirring moments of the picture. The plot has some real suspense toward the end and works up to a fine climax.

THE CONTACT

Hays has the contact to begin with. What between the important exhibitors in First National, plus the Loew and Famous houses, they have something to start with. And don't overlook the fact that when some exhibitors gathered in French Lick a little while ago they called on Hays to help organize the fight nationally for the repeal of the admission tax. And that work is under way now.

AUXILIARY FINE—BUT

As an auxiliary an exhibitor organization to aid Hays would be fine. But if it isn't kept in just that form it will mean something else. And that will spell another story—some day.

What a fine Xmas gift the exhibitors of this country are getting from the M. P. T. O. when an organization of distributors and producers has to work up an "auxiliary" of exhibitors.

BELIEVES IN PERCENTAGE

Leo Landau of Milwaukee. Operates two big houses there. In town for a few days. Talking things over said he believed firmly in percentage. Is playing everything that way this season. Never expects to do anything else. Perfectly happy. "It's the only way," he said. "Then we have a chance with these big, costly pictures. We're very satisfied with what has happened."

NIGH'S LATEST

For several years Bill Nigh has been talking of making miniatures—that is, real live pungent one reelers. Finally has gone and done it. First one at Rialto, New York, last week. "Among the Missing." Nigh called it. Compact and forceful—almost too strong, with a few gruesome spots. But went over well. These little pictures are hard to make in a big way, but Nigh has done it. Here's hoping the rest will be a little lighter in theme. Incidentally Nigh's acting, as well as Lucille La Verne's was mighty fine.

ANOTHER NOVELTY

On the same program. Riesenfeld called it "The Gallery of Living Portraits" and it showed Theodore Roberts in some of his many fine characterizations. Understand Riesenfeld will make a number of these of important stars working with Famous. Hope he works one up of George Fawcett.

ANOTHER BUSHMAN

Not Francis X. But his son Ralph. In the cast of Buster Keaton's "Our Hospitality." His daddy's name meant a tremendous lot at the box office in bygone days. Few know, however, that his son is old enough to have a real part. Made a good getaway.

AGAIN "RUDY"

Looks like he will soon be back again. Although the "poipers" haven't been signed yet. And a hitch may develop anywhere. Still the odds are strong that everything will be set OK and Valentino will work out several pictures for Famous before beginning his Ritz contract. "Monsieur Beaucaire" to be his first. Peach of a book; fine play—they even made an opera of it—but you never can tell what a scenario will look like. Still it probably will be all that he desires. And he should look the elegant dandy to perfection.

MIDNIGHT OIL

And all that goes with it. The program at Universal. Since Lichtman stepped in. A reason. Trying to unify the various systems and all the incidental matter that goes with them. That various sales managers have installed. And so the boys are hard at it. A few nights ago George Brown said he was tired.

Just a little worn out. It was close to midnight. "What's the matter?" asked Al, "Sick?"

SOME MANUSCRIPT

Mrs. Florence Straus, play reader for First National—who incidentally, picked "Black Oxen" and "Flaming Youth" for F. N. informed an agent of prominence—Larry Giffen—that she wanted to read "The Demi Virgin" to see whether or not there was picture material in the farce. It arrived. Bound in asbestos sheets, with a pair of iron tongs across the top, with a bottle of C N and another bottle containing chlorate of lime attached with ribbons.

No decision yet as to its future as a picture.

RELATIVE TO AGENTS

The minute the story appeared that "Rudy" was going to make several pictures for Famous before starting his Ritz contract several agents who had been discussing story material with Famous got palpitation of the heart. And the prices of the stories they had under discussion also suffered from palpitation—at least the values did. And soared. Until the production department was discussing broadly. Over the story breaking. Before they had all the material desired purchased.

SOME IDEAS OF JAYDEE

As to production cost. After looking the market over. Over here and over there. "It's all a matter of supply and demand," says he, "and that has always ruled every business. You cannot escape it. There are certain conditions, certain stars, certain properties that have a certain and very definite value. It is only natural that people seeking to obtain this material; or these stars desire them to such an extent that prices naturally rise. That cannot be avoided. It should not be. Waste, heavy expenditure which are not justified is another matter."

THE EXHIBITION SIDE

"I would like to add right here," he went on, "that if I had time I'd like to prepare big advertising space for Carl Laemmle's idea of the picture houses getting 'The Hunchback' if they will have a top price for the show the same as a legitimate theater. That is what the business needs—and needs quickly. It is ridiculous to have an exhibitor say he will only ask as much for one type of picture as another, forgetting all about the drawing value of the several types of pictures. It is just as foolish to say that the Capitol which gets—and deserves—85 cents for the show, should be willing to turn the show over to a 10th Ave exhibitor who only asks a dime for his admission. The difference in the shows of these theaters is just another instance of the difference in pictures. Sooner or later it will come—where exhibitors who run one kind of picture will ask a certain admission while those who run a finer type will ask—and obtain—more."

"We are running the exhibition end of this business the same today as when it was started—and when we bought and sold film at 10 cents a foot. That was all right then. It isn't now. If something like that doesn't occur what impetus will producers have; the men who are willing to put big money in a production. That is the one end of this business that should be straightened out and quickly. It cannot come too soon."

MIXING THINGS UP

Pete Smith has gone and done it. And in the Hollywood Citizen Lloyd Hughes has challenged me for the handball championship of filmdom. It's all right. But the wrong pick. Pete meant Buddy Alicoate. Who will soon wrest the championship from "Roxy." His last victim was Dick Rowland. But don't mention this to R. A. It's a tender point with him.

DANNY.

"Definitions"

What F. G. Heller of Indiana Thinks—Sees Woeful Lack of Diversity in Programs

F. G. Heller, president of the M. O. of Indiana has written THE DAILY concerning Danny's trial captioned "Definitions." He in the editorial reflects his opinion succinctly and adds:

In the note in Dec. 2 issue of THE DAILY the article that appeared on the first page, headed 'Definitions.'

You have expressed my opinion hundred per cent. The numerous ten and eleven reel productions being more to make the motion picture unpopular than all else. The demand and will pay for real entertainment—diversified entertainment—and sooner or later will refuse to pay for "Ego."

Since the so-called 'Greater Movie Business' has opened, (beginning September) it has been off twenty-five per cent at least, all over the country. The deal of this is caused by the fact that we did not give the patron a diversified program or tried to give him a diversified program and wore out looking at 12 or 14 reels.

In our particular case, we have very few comedies in the past few months simply because of the demand for lengthy features. The public cannot understand why our program only consists of a news reel and a feature when we formerly had them a news reel, comedy and other short subjects that usually made up the diversified program.

"The sooner the producer realizes this condition the sooner he will learn the first step in bringing down the cost of production and bringing our industry back to a normal condition.

"I wish to comment highly on your article and trust you will not let it die with the issue of Dec 2."

Why Rentals Jump

A. C. Hayman Holds Present Sales Methods Responsible—Urges Check in Production

At the F. I. L. M. Club dinner recently, Marcus Loew declared exhibitor combinations were caused, in many instances, by the tactics of sales managers in boosting rentals to a level where it became vital for theaters to combine for protection.

This same point is made by A. C. Hayman, of the Cataract Theater Corp. of Niagara Falls in a letter to this publication in which he first talks about "The Spanish Dancer" and "Rosita" and then delves into the exhibitor situation. Hayman says:

"It is very interesting to read what Joe Filmcan, I. S. Cement, O. P. Sprockethole, and other famous men, such as Zukor, Loew, Godsol, etc., etc., etc. have to say. Each one blames the other for stealing stars, outbidding stories, letting directors run wild with expenditures and many other ills that are now choking the industry and setting back years of progress that should have been taken advantage of.

"One of the most flagrant and criminal expenditures of money uselessly, I think, is in 'The Spanish Dancer,' released by Famous Players, and it gets my goat how such efficient business men as Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and other heads of departments of that large corporation, will allow a man like Herbert Brenon to run wild with the enormous expenditure he put in 'The Spanish Dancer.'

"Please understand that this is only the opinion of a small town hick exhibitor, but every now then these small town hicks have a brain and can see farther than their nose. I had the pleasure of screening Mary Pickford in 'Rosita,' and 'The Spanish Dancer,' and I want to tell you that my opinion is that Herbert Brenon never got started to accomplish what he thought he could do, and that is make a better picture than 'Rosita.' His tremendous waste of money in the mob scenes in 'The Spanish Dancer' is criminal, and if he lived in the old days at Salem, where hanging was a favorite sport, Herbert would have had a short career.

"The present admission prices of the large majority of theaters cannot absorb pictures made under these conditions and the natural result that the distributor has only a limited output at prices which do not bring any return to the exhibitor, forcing the exhibitor, in order to be able to get any pictures at any where near reasonable prices, to combine with other houses, thereby creating an evil which all the producers are kicking about, and it is directly due to their own ways of selling the productions to the exhibitors that forces exhibitors to protect themselves with these methods.

"The Whipping Boss"

Monogram Pictures—State Rights
 As a Whole... AN EXPOSE OF THE BRUTAL METHODS EMPLOYED IN THE CONVICT LEASING SYSTEM OPERATING IN SOME STATES; MAY BE TOO STRONG FOR ENJOYMENT BY SOME DESPITE HAPPY ENDING.

Cast... Generally very well selected as to types. Eddie Phillips a good man for the role of the mistreated convict. Director McGowan a convincing villain. Lloyd Hughes does satisfactory work as the leader of the American Legion Post. Others Barbara Bedford, Wade Boteler, Billy Elmer, Andrew Waldron.

Type of Story... Seems to have been made solely to show the dreadfully cruel and inhuman methods employed in some parts of the United States where convicts are leased out to work for lumber companies, etc. It deals with the case of a young lad who is found stealing a ride on a freight car and sentenced to ninety days of work in the swamps owned by a lumber company. How he contracts fever, is brutally beaten by the overseer, who when ordered to release the boy, is told by a "trustee" that he is dead, and who subsequently to cover his crime sets fire to the stockade where the prisoners are chained in for the night furnishes the chief points of the picture. A good patriotic note is sounded by the appearance at the crucial moment of the commander of the American Legion Post through whose efforts the villains are brought to justice.

Box Office Angle... This is strong stuff. The scenes showing the boy being whipped and those in the burning stockade where the men are chained to their bunks will bring a chill to the most hardened picture-goer. The patriotic angle and the happy ending, with the boy being restored to his weeping mother, may lighten the theme enough to put it over for you.

Exploitation... If you decide that you want to play this, by all means go to your local American Legion Post. Tell them the sort of picture it is and they will undoubtedly give you all the cooperation possible. Placards and throwaways should bear the emblem of the Legion and the question, "Should convicts be leased out to work?" "If you think so, see 'The Whipping Boss' at the blank theater;" or "Did Lincoln abolish slavery in the United States for all time? If you think so, see 'The Whipping Boss.'" Give them an idea of the sort of story it is, so they will know what to expect.

Direction... J. P. McGowan; has left little to the imagination, and as a result the picture grips.

Authors... Jack Boyle and A. W. Caldwell.

Scenario... Phil J. Hurn

Cameraman... Walter Griffen

Photography... Very good

Locale... A lumber town in the South

Length... 5,800 feet

"Slave of Desire"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
 AS A WHOLE... FAIRLY INTERESTING PICTURE. STORY HIGHLY IMAGINATIVE MAKES LITTLE BID FOR PROBABILITY BUT AT THAT MAY PROVE FASCINATING IF THEY LIKE THEM UNUSUAL.

Cast First rate company that fulfills all requirements nicely. Well balanced and usually well handled cast that includes George Walsh, Bessie Love, Carmel Myers, Wally Van, Edward Connelly, Eulalie Jensen, Herbert Prior, William Orlamond, Nick de Ruiz.

Type of Story... From Balzac's "The Magic Skin;" a sort of Alladin theme in which the possessor of a certain piece of magic skin is permitted to gratify his various wishes, but with the penalty of having the skin shrink with each succeeding wish with promise of death upon the skin's reaching a certain size.

The idea is, of course, improbable to the nth degree and resembles closely the ordinary fairy tale although it is evident that Balzac intended it for adult entertainment. Of course there is a grown-up angle in which a moral lesson is brought in. The magic skin teaches the hero that selfishness is ruinous and so, in turn, the director brings it home, convincingly in its way, to the spectator. The climax finds hero making his last wish, an unselfish one, thereby releasing himself from the death penalty and restoring happiness to him. The production is good.

Box Office Angle... For those with liberal imaginations "Slave of Desire," will prove thoroughly interesting. Otherwise the picture is a bit difficult to figure. It will appeal to individuals rather than classes.

Exploitation... Play up the title and the fact that the story was adapted from Balzac's "The Magic Skin." If you care to use stunt exploitation, the following may suffice. Have a man, dressed after the order of the antiquarian in the picture, going about offering to fulfill the wishes of those who touch the magic skin he carries. For answer he can hand out throwaways containing the line: "Your wish will be gratified at the blank theater. See 'A Slave of Desire.'" Have a skin prepared to look like the one used in the film and display it prominently.

Ideas of this sort will arouse curiosity. Mention the names of those in the cast, such as George Walsh, Bessie Love, Carmel Myers.

Direction... George D. Baker;

Scenario... Charles Whittaker

Cameraman... John Boyle

Photography... Very good

Locale... France

Length... 6,673 feet

"A Lady of Quality"

Virginia Valli in
 "A Lady of Quality"
Universal-Jewel
 AS A WHOLE... COSTUME DRAMA GORGEOUSLY PRODUCED, SPLENDIDLY ACTED AND FAR MORE INTERESTING THAN THE MAJORITY OF THOSE OF A SIMILAR TYPE.

Star... Charming and gives a very enjoyable performance; quaintly beautiful in old costumes and usually well photographed although occasionally she is too brightly lighted.

Cast... Excellent with many interesting characterizations. Lionel Belmore and Bert Roach amusing old English gentlemen, both giving first rate performances. Earle Fox adequate though inclined to overdo the role of Sir John. Milton Sills given little prominence as the lover.

Type of Story... Drama. Easily one of the most interesting costume dramas seen recently. There is a really absorbing theme and one that has been particularly well handled. The young hoyden heroine is made the center of interest and the plot revolves about her without introduction of unnecessary details, or mob scenes. True the production is lavish, there being numerous spacious and very beautiful settings typical of the old English, but this happens to be one instance where the story is not lost amid the lavishness. It stands out against the attractive backgrounds, gets the attention and holds it nicely all the way. The picture is still a trifle long, in spite of cutting, but it cannot be said that it drags.

Box Office Angle... If your folks happen to have shown an aversion to the recent flock of so-called costume pictures, you might make an effort to restore their interest by promises of a really enjoyable entertainment in "A Lady of Quality." They should like it immensely.

Exploitation... Virginia Valli deserves the stardom she attains in "A Lady of Quality." Recall her fine work in "The Storm" and get them interested in her, displaying stills in the lobby. Use a trailer giving them an idea of the magnificent, spacious settings used in the picture. Promise them a costume drama with an appealing love story, an adorable hoyden heroine,—all in all an enjoyable picture. Play up the title and work it in with stunts such as: A girl costumed after the fashion of the star, driven about in an old style carriage, with proper announcements. Mention Milton Sills' name also. Recall Hobart Henley's "The Flirt."

Direction... Hobart Henley; gave Mrs. Burnett's novel thoroughly good production and makes most of the story.

Author... Frances Hodgson Burnett

Scenario... Marion Fairfax

Cameraman... Charles Stumar

Art Director... E. E. Sheeley

Photography... Good

Locale... England

Length... 8,640 feet.

"Her Temporary Husband"

First National
 AS A WHOLE... ONE OF THE BEST LAUGH GETTERS THE SEASON; FARCE THAT DRIFTS INTO OUT AND C SLAP-STICK BUT WITH PID FIRE COMEDY A CONTINUOUSLY FINNY BUSINESS, IT'S A SU WINNER.

Cast... Sydney Chaplin the real comedian in comedy role that he over in great style; they're go to look for him more often as they see this one; Owen Moore good also; Sylvia Breamer, the in the case, hasn't a great deal to do; Chuck Reisner first rate "c guy" comedian.

Type of Story... Great comedy entertainment. It isn't often that can take a story as silly as this actually is, and with as little situations to it, and make a cessful and genuinely amusing comedy of it. But it can be done. "Temporary Husband" proves there is practically nothing to story but it's a laugh from start to finish and with nearly seven reels of film, that's going some. Slapstick, as a rule, wears after a first stunt is repeated a second time but in this instance, where complicated matters by having the sets of chases and pile on excitement at every turn, instead of dragging and losing strength it gains. The laughs keep coming better and better. It can all be summed up in clever direction by a capable company of comedians.

Box Office Angle... Good for box office. A comedy entertainment as good as this can't fail to go by unnoticed. Let one see it and you can count on word-of-mouth advertising taking care of succeeding showings. It's a laugh getter so if they enjoy being amused here's the one to do it.

Exploitation... First of all, set the right on the title. They may expect a sexy drama. Make it plain that "Her Temporary Husband" is pure comedy with unadulterated laughs. Promise them an hour of real pleasure. Distribute the following reading: "Do you want to laugh until your sides ache? It can be done by seeing 'Her Temporary Husband' at the blank theater." novel street stunt could consist of a man and woman (of the Mr. Mrs. Henpeck variety; a stout woman and a little-short man going about with the man carrying a sign reading: "I'm 'Her Temporary Husband.'" Tell them all about Sydney Chaplin and his performance. Use Owen Moore's name also.

Direction... John F. McDermott offers a real comedy treat.

Author... Edward Paul

Scenario... Sydney Chaplin and McGrew Willis

Cameraman... S. E. Landers

Photography... Perry Evans

Locale... Any

Length... 6,723 feet

"The Shepherd King"

Fox

As a Whole... PICTURIZATION OF BIBLICAL PLAY GIVEN SPECTACULAR PRODUCTION. OFFERS FAIRLY INTERESTING PICTURE WITH FOREIGN LOCATIONS ATTRACTIVE PICTORIALLY.

Cast... Violet Mersereau the only player whose name will mean anything to American audiences. A well balanced and capable cast of foreign players with Nerio Bernardi giving a good performance as David; Guido Trento a satisfactory Saul. Several less important parts nicely portrayed.

Type of Story... From the stage play, a drama of the days of King Saul and David the Conqueror. Story has been handled on a highly spectacular scale with Palestine, Egypt and Jerusalem serving as the actual locations for the action. This gives the theme an added interest and affords plenty of fine pictorial appeal. Numerous long desert shots are attractive and there are many other separate pictures that are especially interesting. The photography varies. At times it is very good and again very poor. Lighting in some of the interior sets unusually bad, giving the film the appearance of being done either without proper lighting facilities or by inexperienced hands. The story gets off to a rather slow start but the interest speeds up about the middle and holds the attention through the remarkable victories of the unconquerable hero, David. Some of his exploits are genuine thrills while others, the victory over the Philistines for instance, leave much to the imagination.

Box Office Angle... May not prove suitable feature as a matter of general entertainment. Its timely theme makes it an appropriate number for the holiday season and one which exhibitors will probably find a first rate choice. "The Shepherd King" is not a big box office attraction, however, in all that the film implies.

Exploitation... If you can secure this Christmas week showings you could be able to use it to good advantage. It is highly appropriate and its atmosphere and theme lend themselves readily to exploitation that should attract attention. Arrange special showings for the children and you might invite Sunday school teachers to view it privately and then arrange for theater parties during the holiday week. Bible societies and church organizations generally might be sufficiently interested to cooperate with you in interesting folks in the showing. There is but the title and the spectacular production to talk about.

Direction... J. Gordon Edwards; made on a big scale and usually good, although mob scenes suffer from comparison with some previous spectacles.

Authors... Wright-Lorimer and Arnold Reeves.
 Scenario... Virginia Tracey
 Cameraman... Ben Miggins
 Photography... Varying
 Locale... Egypt
 Length... About 8,000 feet

Constance Talmadge in
"The Dangerous Maid"

First National

As a Whole... STAR IN COSTUME DRAMA NOT NEARLY AS WHEN SHE IS GIVEN OPPORTUNITY TO PUT OVER HER INIMITABLE COMEDY BUSINESS; MAY SATISFY BUT STORY IS ONLY FAIRLY INTERESTING.

Star... Has but few chances to do the sort of thing that she does best; atmosphere and story is not what suits her best.

Cast... All look pretty much alike in wigs and frills. Conway Tearle adequate though role gives him little opportunity to do anything out of the ordinary. Others are Morgan Wallace, Charles Gerrard, Marjorie Daw, Kate Price, Tully Marshall.

Type of Story... Romantic drama of England in the seventeenth century. This is a pretty picture, a pleasing romance and quite nicely done but with all its good points "The Dangerous Maid" is apt to prove disappointing to admirers of the star. She isn't at home in this type of story even though she is capable of the role it provides her. Nevertheless there is something lacking,—it's the star's inimitable comedy touches, the quality of playing that made her a favorite. She has but few chances in this to do any of it. For the average audience the theme is likely to prove draggy, especially the early reels. Director Heerman has succeeded in speeding up the latter part but at best it moves much too slowly for a well sustained interest.

Plot deals with the efforts of a girl rebel to free her brother and later an officer of the king who had befriended her, of her eventual success and happiness with the officer.

Box Office Angle... Star's name will bring them in. Whether or not they go out satisfied depends on how they will like star in something other than what they expect of her. As a general entertainment the picture is a bit too slow moving to hold them.

Exploitation... Use a trailer showing bits of the picture that will give them an idea what to expect, such as the sequence in which she boots the corporal and saves the young boy he was whipping, or the incident in which she is forced to quit in a duel.

You cannot promise laughs so refer to the star's latest as a romantic drama of the seventeenth century. If you think the costume angle of it will not draw you had best just use the title and star's name. There is a good supporting cast with many well known names.

Direction... Victor Heerman; production values very good; allows story to drag at times.

Author... Elizabeth Ellis
 Scenario... C. Gardner Sullivan
 Cameraman... Glenn MacWilliams
 Photography... Good
 Locale... England
 Length... 7,337 feet.

Charles Jones in
"Cupid's Fireman"

Fox

As a Whole... GOOD AVERAGE ENTERTAINMENT, SOMETHING A LITTLE DIFFERENT FROM WHAT STAR USUALLY DOES; WILL LIKELY BE GOOD DRAWING CARD WITH THE MAJORITY.

Star... Portrays fireman hero nicely and furnishes his admirers with a new line of heroics; they'll like him very well in this.

Cast... Little Eileen O'Malley capable little actress and Marian Nixon a pretty lead; others Brooks Benedict, Lucy Beaumont, Al Freemont, none of them, however, conspicuous in the story.

Type of Story... Drama with plenty of heart interest. Hero's mother didn't want him to become a fireman and sacrifice his life as his father did. But the lure is too strong and hero succumbs. After his mother's death he adopts a little girl. Then he falls in love with an actress whose brute of a husband locks her in their burning apartment. Naturally she's saved by hero, the husband exits, and they live happy, etc. Even with Richard Harding Davis' name tacked to this as author of "Andy McGee's Chorus Girl," from which this was adapted, the story fails to get away from conventional formula. It's pretty obvious what will happen right from the start. But, it may be considered good audience business, at that, and as long as they favor it, they'll probably vote "Cupid's Fireman" a good picture. It is, for the average audience. It gives Jones a chance to vary his work so his admirers will be well satisfied.

Box Office Angle... If you cater to the regulation trade, those who come to your theater to be thrilled by the adventures of screen heroes, touched by pathos of little gray haired mothers, etc., you can count on "Cupid's Fireman" filling the bill nicely.

Exploitation... Here's a chance to have your local fire department work for you. Get them interested in the picture, telling them it's dedicated to their heroic acts, then let them do some advertising for you. With the necessary permission they might bring out the apparatus and display signs announcing the picture.

Show your patrons a trailer containing scenes of the climax in which hero makes a brave attempt to save the no-account husband of the girl he loves. This will help to bring them back. Appeal to Charles Jones' admirers and let them know that his latest is a bit different from his previous productions. Mention the author's name also.

Direction... William Wellman; caters to the audience throughout.

Author... Richard Harding Davis
 Scenario... Eugene V. Lewis
 Cameraman... Joe August
 Photography... All right
 Locale... Any city
 Length... 6,500 feet

"Enemies of Children"

Mammoth Films—State Rights

As a Whole... TYPICAL "MOVIE" CONCOCTION WITH EVERYTHING SUPPOSED TO REPRESENT AUDIENCE APPEAL PUT IN WITH LITTLE REGARD WHETHER IT BELONGS OR NOT; DRAGGY, PICTURE.

Cast... Many well known names and first rate performances; a pity to waste them on such poor material; cast includes Virginia Lee Corbin, Eugenie Besserer, Geo. Seigman, Claire McDowell, Lucy Beaumont, William Boyd, Joseph Dowling, Raymond Hatton, Anna Q. Nilsson and Ward Crane.

Type of Story... Drama of the heaviest sort. Runs all the way from blackmail to murder and back again. The picture starts off splendidly and promises to be a really worth while entertainment and with a better prepared scenario, it is possible that it might have turned out to be a thoroughly interesting picture. But somewhere along about half way through it becomes highly involved and to all appearances seems lost in the mass of its complications.

There's a pretty heroine, formerly a waif on the streets, and now the protegee of two rich maiden ladies, plus her love for the adopted son of these women. So far so good, but with the tangle involving an erratic old character, played by Raymond Hatton, and the efforts of various ones to solve the riddle of the girl's real identity, comes a long draggy session of sequences that bring the story to a tedious and hardly satisfying conclusion.

Box Office Angle... Very likely the producers thought they were putting into this one everything that the public is supposed to favor, and to a certain extent they have but, unfortunately, they didn't know when they had enough. "Enemies of Children" is the so-called "movie hokum." You know best whether or not your folks will be pleased with it.

Exploitation... The title affords you something to talk about and can be played up effectively with catchlines such as: "Who are the 'Enemies of Children.' See for yourself at the blank theater." You might be able to interest children's societies in helping you exploit the picture.

The cast contains many good names that you can use prominently in your announcements, such as that of Anna Q. Nilsson, mentioning her recent appearance in "Ponjola." Other well known players are Geo. Seigman William Boyd, Joseph Dowling and Raymond Hatton.

Direction... Lilian Ducey; good at first but gets the story all wound up in a knot toward the end; creates no suspense at all.

Author... George Gibbs
 Scenario... Lilian Ducey
 Cameraman... Glen MacWilliams and John Michle
 Photography... Average
 Locale... Los Angeles

Short Subjects

"Among the Missing"—Will Nigh Good, Strong, One Reeler

Type of production... 1 reel drama

This is one of the best short subjects presented in a long time. It is real drama, realistically done, exceedingly clever in its presentation and worth showing in any house. It will go particularly well where they like something to offset a strong comedy.

Nigh not only directs in his usually capable manner, but gives a striking performance as the scared deserter. Lucille La Verne, gives a strikingly strong performance as the mother.

"Hansel and Gretel"—Century— Universal

Charming and Seasonable

Type of production... 2 real fairy tale

Baby Peggy, one of the cutest kiddies on the screen, is the leading lady in this Century two reeler which should prove a first rate offering for this season of the year. Hansel is played by a clever little boy whose name is not mentioned. Children of all ages will enjoy this one immensely. There is also some trick stuff used to good advantage, showing Peggy standing at a table watching miniature figures come out of a bowl and dance on the table before her. The story follows the fairy tale closely except that a monkey and an elephant have been used as goblins, and they get several laughs. There is also a surprise finish, showing Peggy and her little brother being read to by their mother, as they are about to go to sleep.

"Mother's Joy"—Roach—Pathe Amusing Opening—Average Thereafter

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

At the start this looks as if it were going to be a hum-dinger. It deals with a father's tale of how he turned his daughter out into the world because she married against his wishes. The scene showing the daughter eloping with her loved one in clothes of the 19th century is very funny, as is the bit in which she returns home and pleads with her father to "let her eat," showing him a clothes basket in which reposes her baby boy—Stan Laurel. This shot of Laurel in baby clothes is as unexpected as it is amusing. Later, however, "Mother's Joy" turns out to be the average sort of comedy in which an uncouth youth, tries to make a good impression socially. Where Laurel is liked this one should go very well.

"Snooky's Covered Wagon"—Edu- cational

Fine Stuff

Type of production... 2 reel animal comedy

This is a sure-fire hit. No matter what sort of an audience you cater to they will be delighted with Snooky's work in this one, for Snooky is more than one-half human judging from the intelligence displayed herein. In addition there are several other monkeys and an assortment of animals ranging from a skunk to a pelican. The direction is excellent, the story interesting and the laughs very numerous. Get this and give your folks a treat.

"Call The Wagon"—Christie—Edu- cational

Well Played and Directed

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Charlotte Merriam, Neal Burns and Babe London make this Christie comedy very enjoyable entertainment. Charlotte, a very pretty young miss, is besieged by suitors. Neal, who wants her all to himself, tells the other boys that Charlotte is not just what she seems—her hair is false, also her teeth, etc. This succeeds in scaring away the others but much is Neal's chagrin when Charlotte, learning of the trick, plans to turn it on him and asking him if he minds if she makes herself comfortable, proceeds to take off her hair, take out her teeth and even exhibits a glass eye. Those who are inclined to be squeamish may not like this particular bit, but the rest of it is thoroughly enjoyable.

"Pathe Review" 'No. 51

Has Good Variety

Type of production... 1 reel magazine

Labor of many varied types is pictured in Pathe Review No. 51. First, the method by which apple cider is made in the country, literally, "in the shade of the old apple tree"; next in series of interesting close-ups, the way in which different kinds of mother birds care for their young. Then come some views of a steamer going through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, and last some colored scenes in the valleys of France and Spain showing how the farmers still cling to their oxen for use in the fields to draw the plough, etc.

"Chasing Wealth"—Universal

A Good Tramp Team

Type of production... 1 reel comedy

Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, the two happy tramps make this one-reeler pleasant enough diversion. They have a great deal of difficulty in catching and holding any sort of paper money. It blows right out of their hands, time after time, even at the very finish when Nervy Ned, having beaten the roulette table in a gambling den, steps into the street with his arms loaded down with money, the wind comes along and blows it all away. The constant merriment on the part of the featured players is bound to be contagious, and you find yourself smiling with them even though some of the stuff is rather silly.

New Theaters

Connellville, Pa.—The Orpheum, although not yet fully completed, been opened. It seats 1,100.

And What F. G. Heller of Indiana Thinks—Sees Woeful Lack of Diversity in Programs

F. G. Heller, president of the M. P. T. O. of Indiana has written THE FILM DAILY concerning Danny's editorial captioned "Definitions." He states the editorial reflects his opinion on a nicety and adds:

"I note in Dec. 2 issue of THE FILM DAILY the article that appears on the first page, headed 'Definitions.'

"You have expressed my opinion one hundred per cent. The numerous eight, ten and eleven reel productions are doing more to make the motion picture unpopular than all else. The public demand and will pay for real entertainment—diversified entertainment—and sooner or later will refuse to pay for "Ego."

"Since the so-called 'Greater Movie Easton' has opened, (beginning Sept) business has been off twenty-five per cent at least, all over the country. A great deal of this is caused by the fact that we did not give the patron a diversified program or tried to give them a diversified program and wore them out looking at 12 or 14 reels.

"In our particular case, we have seen very few comedies in the past three months simply because of the demand for lengthy features. The public cannot understand why our program only consists of a news reel and a feature when we formerly gave them a news reel, comedy and other short subjects that usually made up the diversified program.

"The sooner the producer realizes this condition the sooner he will learn the first step in bringing down the cost of production and bringing our industry back to a normal condition.

"I wish to comment highly on your article and trust you will not let it die with the issue of Dec 2."

Why Rentals Jump

A. C. Hayman Holds Present Sales Methods Responsible—Urges Check in Production

At the F. I. L. M. Club dinner recently, Marcus Loew declared exhibitor combinations were caused, in many instances, by the tactics of sales managers in boosting rentals to a level where it became vital for theaters to combine for protection.

This same point is made by A. C. Hayman, of the Cataract Theater Corp. of Niagara Falls in a letter to this publication in which he first talks about "The Spanish Dancer" and "Rosita" and then delves into the exhibitor situation. Hayman says:

"It is very interesting to read what Joe Filmcan, I. S. Cement, O. P. Sprockethoic, and other famous men, such as Zukor, Loew, Godsol, etc., etc., etc. have to say. Each one blames the other for stealing stars, outbidding stories, letting directors run wild with expenditures and many other ills that are now choking the industry and setting back years of progress that should have been taken advantage of.

"One of the most flagrant and criminal expenditures of money uselessly, I think, is in 'The Spanish Dancer,' released by Famous Players, and it gets my goat how such efficient business men as Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and other heads of departments of that large corporation, will allow a man like Herbert Brenon to run wild with the enormous expenditure he put in 'The Spanish Dancer.'

"Please understand that this is only the opinion of a small town hick exhibitor, but every now then these small town hicks have a brain and can see farther than their nose. I had the pleasure of screening Mary Pickford in 'Rosita,' and 'The Spanish Dancer,' and I want to tell you that my opinion is that Herbert Brenon never got started to accomplish what he thought he could do, and that is make a better picture than 'Rosita.' His tremendous waste of money in the mob scenes in 'The Spanish Dancer' is criminal, and if he lived in the old days at Salem, where hanging was a favorite sport, Herbert would have had a short career.

"The present admission prices of the large majority of theaters cannot absorb pictures made under these conditions and the natural result that the distributor has only a limited output at prices which do not bring any return to the exhibitor, forcing the exhibitor, in order to be able to get any pictures at any where near reasonable prices, to combine with other houses, thereby creating an evil which all the producers are kicking about, and it is directly due to their own ways of selling the productions to the exhibitors that forces exhibitors to protect themselves with these methods.

Reviews of the Newest Features

"The Whipping Boss"

Monogram Pictures—State Rights
 As a Whole... AN EXPOSE OF THE BRUTAL METHODS EMPLOYED IN THE CONVICT LEASING SYSTEM OPERATING IN SOME STATES; MAY BE TOO STRONG FOR ENJOYMENT BY SOME DESPITE HAPPY ENDING.

Cast... Generally very well selected as to types. Eddie Phillips a good man for the role of the mistreated convict. Director McGowan a convincing villain. Lloyd Hughes does satisfactory work as the leader of the American Legion Post. Others Barbara Bedford, Wade Boteler, Billy Elmer, Andrew Waldron.

Type of Story... Seems to have been made solely to show the dreadfully cruel and inhuman methods employed in some parts of the United States where convicts are leased out to work for lumber companies, etc. It deals with the case of a young lad who is found stealing a ride on a freight car and sentenced to ninety days of work in the swamps owned by a lumber company. How he contracts fever, is brutally beaten by the overseer, who when ordered to release the boy, is told by a "trustee" that he is dead, and who subsequently to cover his crime sets fire to the stockade where the prisoners are chained in for the night furnishes the chief points of the picture. A good patriotic note is sounded by the appearance at the crucial moment of the commander of the American Legion Post through whose efforts the villains are brought to justice.

Box Office Angle... This is strong stuff. The scenes showing the boy being whipped and those in the burning stockade where the men are chained to their bunks will bring a chill to the most hardened picture-goer. The patriotic angle and the happy ending, with the boy being restored to his weeping mother, may lighten the theme enough to put it over for you.

Exploitation... If you decide that you want to play this, by all means go to your local American Legion Post. Tell them the sort of picture it is and they will undoubtedly give you all the cooperation possible. Placards and throwaways should bear the emblem of the Legion and the question, "Should convicts be leased out to work?" "If you think so, see 'The Whipping Boss' at the blank theater;" or "Did Lincoln abolish slavery in the United States for all time? If you think so, see 'The Whipping Boss.'" Give them an idea of the sort of story it is, so they will know what to expect.

Direction... J. P. McGowan; has left little to the imagination, and as a result the picture grips.

Authors... Jack Boyle and A. W. Caldwell.

Scenario... Phil J. Hurn

Cameraman... Walter Griffen

Photography... Very good

Locale... A lumber town in the South

Length... 5,800 feet

"Slave of Desire"

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan
 AS A WHOLE... FAIRLY INTERESTING PICTURE. STORY HIGHLY IMAGINATIVE MAKES LITTLE BID FOR PROBABILITY BUT AT THAT MAY PROVE FASCINATING IF THEY LIKE THEM UNUSUAL.

Cast First rate company that fulfills all requirements nicely. Well balanced and usually well handled cast that includes George Walsh, Bessie Love, Carmel Myers, Wally Van, Edward Connelly, Eulalie Jensen, Herbert Prior, William Orlamond, Nick de Ruiz.

Type of Story... From Balzac's "The Magic Skin;" a sort of Alladin theme in which the possessor of a certain piece of magic skin is permitted to gratify his various wishes, but with the penalty of having the skin shrink with each succeeding wish with promise of death upon the skin's reaching a certain size.

The idea is, of course, improbable to the nth degree and resembles closely the ordinary fairy tale although it is evident that Balzac intended it for adult entertainment. Of course there is a grown-up angle in which a moral lesson is brought in. The magic skin teaches the hero that selfishness is ruinous and so, in turn, the director brings it home, convincingly in its way, to the spectator. The climax finds hero making his last wish, an unselfish one, thereby releasing himself from the death penalty and restoring happiness to him: The production is good.

Box Office Angle... For those with liberal imaginations "Slave of Desire," will prove thoroughly interesting. Otherwise the picture is a bit difficult to figure. It will appeal to individuals rather than classes.

Exploitation... Play up the title and the fact that the story was adapted from Balzac's "The Magic Skin." If you care to use stunt exploitation, the following may suffice. Have a man, dressed after the order of the antiquarian in the picture, going about offering to fulfill the wishes of those who touch the magic skin he carries. For answer he can hand out throwaways containing the line: "Your wish will be gratified at the blank theater. See 'A Slave of Desire.'" Have a skin prepared to look like the one used in the film and display it prominently.

Ideas of this sort will arouse curiosity. Mention the names of those in the cast, such as George Walsh, Bessie Love, Carmel Myers.

Direction... George D. Baker;

Scenario... Charles Whittaker

Cameraman... John Boyle

Photography... Very good

Locale... France

Length... 6,673 feet

"A Lady of Quality"

Virginia Valli in
 "A Lady of Quality"
Universal-Jewel
 AS A WHOLE... COSTUME DRAMA GORGEOUSLY PRODUCED, SPLENDIDLY ACTED AND FAR MORE INTERESTING THAN THE MAJORITY OF THOSE OF A SIMILAR TYPE.

Star... Charming and gives a very enjoyable performance; quaintly beautiful in old costumes and usually well photographed although occasionally she is too brightly lighted.

Cast... Excellent with many interesting characterizations. Lionel Belmore and Bert Roach amusing old English gentlemen, both giving first rate performances. Earle Fox adequate though inclined to overdo the role of Sir John. Milton Sills given little prominence as the lover.

Type of Story... Drama. Easily one of the most interesting costume dramas seen recently. There is a really absorbing theme and one that has been particularly well handled. The young hoyden heroine is made the center of interest and the plot revolves about her without introduction of unnecessary details, or mob scenes. True the production is lavish, there being numerous spacious and very beautiful settings typical of the old English, but this happens to be one instance where the story is not lost amid the lavishness. It stands out against the attractive backgrounds, gets the attention and holds it nicely all the way. The picture is still a trifle long, in spite of cutting, but it cannot be said that it drags.

Box Office Angle... If your folks happen to have shown an aversion to the recent flock of so-called costume pictures, you might make an effort to restore their interest by promises of a really enjoyable entertainment in "A Lady of Quality." They should like it immensely.

Exploitation... Virginia Valli deserves the stardom she attains in "A Lady of Quality." Recall her fine work in "The Storm" and get them interested in her, displaying stills in the lobby. Use a trailer giving them an idea of the magnificent, spacious settings used in the picture. Promise them a costume drama with an appealing love story, an adorable hoyden heroine,—all in all an enjoyable picture. Play up the title and work it in with stunts such as: A girl costumed after the fashion of the star, driven about in an old style carriage, with proper announcements. Mention Milton Sills' name also. Recall Hobart Henley's "The Flirt."

Direction... Hobart Henley; gave Mrs. Burnett's novel thoroughly good production and makes most of the story.

Author... Frances Hodgson Burnett

Scenario... Marion Fairfax

Cameraman... Charles Stumar

Art Director... E. E. Sheeley

Photography... Good

Locale... England

Length... 8,640 feet.

"Her Temporary Husband"

First National
 AS A WHOLE... ONE OF THE BEST LAUGH GETTERS THE SEASON; FARCE THAT DRIFTS INTO OUT AND OUT SLAP-STICK BUT WITH A PIP FIRE COMEDY AND CONTINUOUSLY FUNNY BUSINESS, IT'S A SURE WINNER.

Cast... Sydney Chaplin the real comedian in comedy role that he over in great style; they're going to look for him more often as they see this one; Owen Moore good also; Sylvia Breamer, the in the case, hasn't a great deal to do; Chuck Reisner first rate "tegguy" comedian.

Type of Story... Great comedy entertainment. It isn't often that you can take a story as silly as this actually is, and with as little situations to it, and make a successful and genuinely amusing comedy of it. But it can be done. "Her Temporary Husband" proves there is practically nothing to a story but it's a laugh from start to finish and with nearly seven reels of film, that's going some. Slapstick, as a rule, wears after the first stunt is repeated a second time but in this instance, where complicated matters by having the sets of chases and pile on the excitement at every turn, instead of dragging and losing strength it gains. The laughs keep coming better and better. It can all be summed up in clever direction by a capable company of comedians.

Box Office Angle... Good for box office. A comedy entertainment as good as this can't fail to go by unnoticed. Let one see it and you can count on word-of-mouth advertising taking care of succeeding showings. It's a laugh getter so if they enjoy being amused here's the one to do it.

Exploitation... First of all, set the right on the title. They may expect a sexy drama. Make it plain that "Her Temporary Husband" is pure comedy with unadulterated laughs. Promise them an hour of real pleasure. Distribute this always reading: "Do you want to laugh until your sides ache? It can be done by seeing 'Her Temporary Husband' at the blank theater." novel street stunt could consist of a man and woman (of the Mr. and Mrs. Henpeck variety; a stout woman and a little-short n going about with the man carrying a sign reading: "I'm 'Her Temporary Husband.'" Tell them a Sydney Chaplin and his performance. Use Owen Moore's name also.

Direction... John F. McDermott offers a real comedy treat.

Author... Edward Paul

Scenario... Sydney Chaplin and McGrew Willis

Cameraman... S. E. Landers

Photography... Perry Evans

Fox

As a Whole... PICTURIZATION OF BIBLICAL PLAY GIVEN SPECTACULAR PRODUCTION. OFFERS FAIRLY INTERESTING PICTURE WITH FOREIGN LOCATIONS ATTRACTIVE PICTORIALY.

Cast... Violet Mersereau the only player whose name will mean anything to American audiences. A well balanced and capable cast of foreign players with Nerio Bernardi giving a good performance as David; Guido Trento a satisfactory Saul. Several less important parts nicely portrayed.

Type of Story... From the stage play, a drama of the days of King Saul and David the Conqueror. Story has been handled on a highly spectacular scale with Palestine, Egypt and Jerusalem serving as the actual locations for the action. This gives the theme an added interest and affords plenty of fine pictorial appeal. Numerous long desert shots are attractive and there are many other separate pictures that are especially interesting. The photography varies. At times it is very good and again very poor. Lighting in some of the interior sets is unusually bad, giving the film the appearance of being done either without proper lighting facilities or by inexperienced hands. The story gets off to a rather slow start but the interest speeds up about the middle and holds the attention through the remarkable victories of the unconquerable hero, David. Some of his exploits are genuine thrills while others, the victory over the Philistines for instance, leave much to the imagination.

Box Office Angle... May not prove a suitable feature as a matter of general entertainment. Its timely theme makes it an appropriate number for the holiday season and one which exhibitors will probably find a first rate choice. "The Shepherd King" is not a big box office attraction, however, in all that the term implies.

Exploitation... If you can secure this for Christmas week showings you would be able to use it to good advantage. It is highly appropriate and its atmosphere and theme lend themselves readily to exploitation and should attract attention. Arrange special showings for the children and you might invite Sunday school teachers to view it privately and then arrange for theater parties during the holiday week. Bible societies and church organizations generally might be sufficiently interested to cooperate with you in interesting folks in the showing. There is but the title and the spectacular production to talk about.

Direction... J. Gordon Edwards; done on a big scale and usually good, although mob scenes suffer from comparison with some previous spectacles.

Authors... Wright-Lorimer and Arnold Reeves.

Scenario... Virginia Tracey

Cameraman... Ben Miggins

Photography... Varying

Locale... Egypt

Length... About 8,000 feet

Constance Talmadge in
"The Dangerous Maid"

First National

As a Whole... STAR IN COSTUME DRAMA NOT NEARLY AS WHEN SHE IS GIVEN OPPORTUNITY TO PUT OVER HER INIMITABLE COMEDY BUSINESS; MAY SATISFY BUT STORY IS ONLY FAIRLY INTERESTING.

Star... Has but few chances to do the sort of thing that she does best; atmosphere and story is not what suits her best.

Cast... All look pretty much alike in wigs and frills. Conway Tearle adequate though role gives him little opportunity to do anything out of the ordinary. Others are Morgan Wallace, Charles Gerrard, Marjorie Daw, Kate Price, Tully Marshall.

Type of Story... Romantic drama of England in the seventeenth century. This is a pretty picture, a pleasing romance and quite nicely done but with all its good points "The Dangerous Maid" is apt to prove disappointing to admirers of the star. She isn't at home in this type of story even though she is capable of the role it provides her. Nevertheless there is something lacking,—it's the star's inimitable comedy touches, the quality of playing that made her a favorite. She has but few chances in this to do any of it. For the average audience the theme is likely to prove draggy, especially the early reels. Director Heerman has succeeded in speeding up the latter part but at best it moves much too slowly for a well sustained interest.

Plot deals with the efforts of a girl rebel to free her brother and later an officer of the king who had befriended her, of her eventual success and happiness with the officer.

Box Office Angle... Star's name will bring them in. Whether or not they go out satisfied depends on how they will like star in something other than what they expect of her. As a general entertainment the picture is a bit too slow moving to hold them.

Exploitation... Use a trailer showing bits of the picture that will give them an idea what to expect, such as the sequence in which she boots the corporal and saves the young boy he was whipping, or the incident in which she is forced to quit in a duel.

You cannot promise laughs so refer to the star's latest as a romantic drama of the seventeenth century. If you think the costume angle of it will not draw you had best just use the title and star's name. There is a good supporting cast with many well known names.

Direction... Victor Heerman; production values very good; allows story to drag at times.

Author... Elizabeth Ellis

Scenario... C. Gardner Sullivan

Cameraman... Glenn MacWilliams

Photography... Good

Locale... England

Length... 7,337 feet.

Charles Jones in
"Cupid's Fireman"

Fox

As a Whole... GOOD AVERAGE ENTERTAINMENT, SOMETHING A LITTLE DIFFERENT FROM WHAT STAR USUALLY DOES; WILL LIKELY BE GOOD DRAWING CARD WITH THE MAJORITY.

Star... Portrays fireman hero nicely and furnishes his admirers with a new line of heroics; they'll like him very well in this.

Cast... Little Eileen O'Malley capable little actress and Marian Nixon a pretty lead; others Brooks Benedict, Lucy Beaumont, Al Freemont, none of them, however, conspicuous in the story.

Type of Story... Drama with plenty of heart interest. Hero's mother didn't want him to become a fireman and sacrifice his life as his father did. But the lure is too strong and hero succumbs. After his mother's death he adopts a little girl. Then he falls in love with an actress whose brute of a husband locks her in their burning apartment. Naturally she's saved by hero, the husband exits, and they live happy, etc. Even with Richard Harding Davis' name tacked to this as author of "Andy McGee's Chorus Girl," from which this was adapted, the story fails to get away from conventional formula. It's pretty obvious what will happen right from the start. But, it may be considered good audience business, at that, and as long as they favor it, they'll probably vote "Cupid's Fireman" a good picture. It is, for the average audience. It gives Jones a chance to vary his work so his admirers will be well satisfied.

Box Office Angle... If you cater to the regulation trade, those who come to your theater to be thrilled by the adventures of screen heroes, touched by pathos of little gray haired mothers, etc., you can count on "Cupid's Fireman" filling the bill nicely.

Exploitation... Here's a chance to have your local fire department work for you. Get them interested in the picture, telling them it's dedicated to their heroic acts, then let them do some advertising for you. With the necessary permission they might bring out the apparatus and display signs announcing the picture.

Show your patrons a trailer containing scenes of the climax in which hero makes a brave attempt to save the no-account husband of the girl he loves. This will help to bring them back. Appeal to Charles Jones' admirers and let them know that his latest is a bit different from his previous productions. Mention the author's name also.

Direction... William Wellman; caters to the audience throughout.

Author... Richard Harding Davis

Scenario... Eugene V. Lewis

Cameraman... Joe August

Photography... All right

Locale... Any city

Length... 6,500 feet

"Enemies of Children"

Mammoth Films—State Rights

As a Whole... TYPICAL "MOVIE" CONCOCTION WITH EVERYTHING SUPPOSED TO REPRESENT AUDIENCE APPEAL PUT IN WITH LITTLE REGARD WHETHER IT BELONGS OR NOT; DRAGGY, PICTURE.

Cast... Many well known names and first rate performances; a pity to waste them on such poor material; cast includes Virginia Lee Corbin, Eugenie Besserer, Geo. Seigman, Claire McDowell, Lucy Beaumont, William Boyd, Joseph Dowling, Raymond Hatton, Anna Q. Nilsson and Ward Crane.

Type of Story... Drama of the heaviest sort. Runs all the way from blackmail to murder and back again. The picture starts off splendidly and promises to be a really worth while entertainment and with a better prepared scenario, it is possible that it might have turned out to be a thoroughly interesting picture. But somewhere along about half way through it becomes highly involved and to all appearances seems lost in the mass of its complications.

There's a pretty heroine, formerly a waif on the streets, and now the protegee of two rich maiden ladies, plus her love for the adopted son of these women. So far so good, but with the tangle involving an erratic old character, played by Raymond Hatton, and the efforts of various ones to solve the riddle of the girl's real identity, comes a long draggy session of sequences that bring the story to a tedious and hardly satisfying conclusion.

Box Office Angle... Very likely the producers thought they were putting into this one everything that the public is supposed to favor, and to a certain extent they have but, unfortunately, they didn't know when they had enough. "Enemies of Children" is the so-called "movie hokum." You know best whether or not your folks will be pleased with it.

Exploitation... The title affords you something to talk about and can be played up effectively with catchlines such as: "Who are the 'Enemies of Children'?" See for yourself at the blank theater." You might be able to interest children's societies in helping you exploit the picture.

The cast contains many good names that you can use prominently in your announcements, such as that of Anna Q. Nilsson, mentioning her recent appearance in "Ponjola." Other well known players are Geo. Seigman William Boyd, Joseph Dowling and Raymond Hatton.

Direction... Lilian Ducey; good at first but gets the story all wound up in a knot toward the end; creates no suspense at all.

Author... George Gibbs

Scenario... Lilian Ducey

Cameraman... Glen MacWilliams and John Michle

Photography... Average

Locale... Los Angeles

Length... 6,100 feet

Short Subjects

"Among the Missing"—Will Nigh Good, Strong, One Reeler

Type of production... 1 reel drama

This is one of the best short subjects presented in a long time. It is real drama, realistically done, exceedingly clever in its presentation and worth showing in any house. It will go particularly well where they like something to offset a strong comedy.

Nigh not only directs in his usually capable manner, but gives a striking performance as the scared deserter. Lucille La Verne, gives a strikingly strong performance as the mother.

"Hansel and Gretel"—Century— Universal

Charming and Seasonable

Type of production... 2 reel fairy tale

Baby Peggy, one of the cutest kiddies on the screen, is the leading lady in this Century two reeler which should prove a first rate offering for this season of the year. Hansel is played by a clever little boy whose name is not mentioned. Children of all ages will enjoy this one immensely. There is also some trick stuff used to good advantage, showing Peggy standing at a table watching miniature figures come out of a bowl and dance on the table before her. The story follows the fairy tale closely except that a monkey and an elephant have been used as goblins, and they get several laughs. There is also a surprise finish, showing Peggy and her little brother being read to by their mother, as they are about to go to sleep.

"Mother's Joy"—Roach—Pathe Amusing Opening—Average Thereafter

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

At the start this looks as if it were going to be a hum-dinger. It deals with a father's tale of how he turned his daughter out into the world because she married against his wishes. The scene showing the daughter eloping with her loved one in clothes of the 19th century is very funny, as is the bit in which she returns home and pleads with her father to "let her eat," showing him a clothes basket in which reposes her baby boy—Stan Laurel. This shot of Laurel in baby clothes is as unexpected as it is amusing. Later, however, "Mother's Joy" turns out to be the average sort of comedy in which an uncouth youth, tries to make a good impression socially. Where Laurel is liked this one should go very well.

"Snooky's Covered Wagon"—Edu- cational Fine Stuff

Type of production... 2 reel animal comedy

This is a sure-fire hit. No matter what sort of an audience you cater to they will be delighted with Snooky's work in this one, for Snooky is more than one-half human judging from the intelligence displayed herein. In addition there are several other monkeys and an assortment of animals ranging from a skunk to a pelican. The direction is excellent, the story interesting and the laughs very numerous. Get this and give your folks a treat.

"Call The Wagon"—Christie—Edu- cational

Well Played and Directed

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Charlotte Merriam, Neal Burns and Babe London make this Christie comedy very enjoyable entertainment. Charlotte, a very pretty young miss, is besieged by suitors. Neal, who wants her all to himself, tells the other boys that Charlotte is not just what she seems—her hair is false, also her teeth, etc. This succeeds in scaring away the others but much is Neal's chagrin when Charlotte, learning of the trick, plans to turn it on him and asking him if he minds if she makes herself comfortable, proceeds to take off her hair, take out her teeth and even exhibits a glass eye. Those who are inclined to be squeamish may not like this particular bit, but the rest of it is thoroughly enjoyable.

"Pathe Review" 'No. 51

Has Good Variety

Type of production... 1 reel magazine

Labor of many varied types is pictured in Pathe Review No. 51. First, the method by which apple cider is made in the country, literally, "in the shade of the old apple tree"; next in series of interesting close-ups, the way in which different kinds of mother birds care for their young. Then come some views of a steamer going through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, and last some colored scenes in the valleys of France and Spain showing how the farmers still cling to their oxen for use in the fields to draw the plough, etc.

"Chasing Wealth"—Universal

A Good Tramp Team

Type of production... 1 reel comedy

Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, the two happy tramps make this one-reeler pleasant enough diversion. They have a great deal of difficulty in catching and holding any sort of paper money. It blows right out of their hands, time after time, even at the very finish when Nery Ned, having beaten the roulette table in a gambling den, steps into the street with his arms loaded down with money, the wind comes along and blows it all away. The constant merriment on the part of the featured players is bound to be contagious, and you find yourself smiling with them even though some of the stuff is rather silly.

GRIEF

By DANNY

For producers. In the Appellate Division decision. Which says the picture must hold to the author's story. Or the author can collect at law. All which makes the Authors' Congress called last Summer by famous. Wither and pale. All the kicks registered there the trifle. Against the Court decision.

If all the authors who are sore at producers for changing their stories begin action, based on this decision, the Courts will not have a chance to hear any other cases for at least the next 13 years.

The grave question arises, it would seem to a lay mind; just what does a producer buy when he buys the picture rights to material? Of course in the Packard-Fox case it was a bit different. Packard sued because Fox had used his name to a story "altogether different" from what had been sold to Fox Film. Incidentally Fox changed the Packard title from "The Iron Rider" to "Smiles are Trumps."

A Producer's Woes

Lugo Ballin talking. Thinks a lot of things are wrong. Such for instance as excessive production costs on the Coast—says pictures can be made here 30 per cent cheaper, at least; and why a distributors "guarantee" makes him smile. Most of them mean nothing; so he says. He's right. But one point pleases him muchly. That producers have finally awakened to the fact that pictures should be shot in the natural light and not in Hollywood. In other words a Parisian story should be shot in Paris. Says he wanted it seven years ago.

The latest demands of the bonus boys in aiding producers: a bonus of 20 per cent deducted beforehand; interest at six per cent during the life of the loan. AND 20 PER CENT INTEREST IN THE PICTURE.

Help!

A pretty love scene in the comedy-drama now delighting exhibitors and fans everywhere: Mack Sennett's presentation of Mabel Normand in "The Extra Girl," an Associated Exhibitors release.—Adv't.

Court Upholds Author's Rights

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided that Fox must defend a suit by Frank L. Packard for $75,000 damages on two causes of action, and has refused an application by Fox to grant judgment in its favor. Packard alleged that he sold his story, "The Iron Rider," to Fox for a film, but that Fox made two films of it by using the title for a play he didn't write, and putting a new title, "Smiles are Trumps" on his story. He asked $50,000 for the first and $25,000 for the second. The Appellate Division decided that he was damaged in both cases.

Judge Reserves Decision

Supreme Court Justice Burr has reserved decision in the proceeding by the Attorney General to restrain the Rising Sun Prod. formed by Al Gilbert, from selling stock because it has made no pictures since it was organized last March. Rising Sun Prod. contended that no stockholder has complained and no charge of fraud is made, and for that reason the Attorney General had no cause to act.

Distributing Goerz Film Here

Ferdinand Schurman and J. A. Knorr, in an announcement made in today's issue relative to the distribution of Goerz film for the United States, claim to be in a position to obtain an advantage for American producers using Goerz raw stock which should be of interest. They claim they are able to secure a refund of duty on Goerz raw stock used for all prints exported by American producers. There will be no charge for this service. They say export statistics indicate that upwards of 120,000,000 ft. of positive prints are exported annually from the United States, and that the approximate saving which could be secured from the above plan is $500,000 a year.

J. S. Cummings, former distributor of Anseo, is now associated with Fish-Schurman Corp., with offices at 33 W. 60th St.

Tops "Four Horsemen"

Arthur Loew as advised by cable from London on Saturday that "Scaramouche," which opened at the Tivoli on Monday grossed £1918 the first four days of its run with only one show on Monday. This figure tops that of "The Four Horsemen" for the same period by £350. Loew declared.

Bershon Resigns

Leaves West Coast Theaters, Inc.,—Had Trouble With Distributors and Prices

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—It is understood that Dave Bershon, booking manager for West Coast Theaters, Inc., and one of the important officials of that organization, has resigned.

Bershon is considered one of the best posted men in the selling end of the business. It has been reported for about a year past that he has had difficulty in carrying out the duties of his post with West Coast Theaters, Inc., particularly so far as it concerned consummation of deals with distributors, on the one hand and the exhibiting interests he represented, on the other.

Klein Has Napoleon Film

Edward L. Klein is handling the American distribution of "The Agony of the Eagles," a Napoleonic picture made abroad. It deals with the return of Napoleon from St. Helena and the retreat from Moscow.

Make Plans for 1st Nat'l Month

A series of sales meetings were held in all First National exchanges on Saturday, to make final plans for First National Month, which occurs in January. Five new pictures will be released in that period.

Plea for Small Towns

Steffes Opposes Individual Contracts on Playing Time for Exhibitors in the Northwest

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Minneapolis—W. A. Steffes, president of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest, has written A. H. Fischer, president of the Minneapolis Board of Trade a letter, asking that the board abandon its intention of insisting on individual contracts for playing time.

The board has been active in cooperating with Steffes for the elimination of film bicycling and in this connection, exhibitors will have to specify the number of days the picture is to be played, the exact location of the theater and information of that character that can be used for checking-up purposes. Steffes claims, however, that definite data of this kind will be sufficient to eliminate bicycling and feels that the insistence of the individual contract plan would only bolster up rentals and force the small town exhibitors to close. He advances the argument that distributors should not expect to realize a profit on all pictures they release and that the fixed minimum price plan, so far as it affects pictures of exceptional merit, is negligible. "It is on the program and mediocre pictures that the fixed minimum will prove disastrous," he maintains.

Steffes is seeking to have the matter settled so that he can present the decision to the South Dakota exhibitor meetings in Sioux Falls tomorrow and Wednesday.

Newspaper Opinions

Newspaper criticisms of pictures which closed week runs in out-of-town cities on Saturday, will be found below:

"A Lady of Quality"—Universal Randolph, Chicago

AMERICAN—Miss Valli gives here a wholly winning and wholly convincing characterization. * * *
TRIBUNE—The big thing about this picture, * * * is the presence of Virginia Valli. She is charm personified. Coiffured and costumed as was the fashion in the days of "Good Queen Anne"—she moves through the picture a thing of beauty and a joy forever. * * * On the whole, however, the photoplay is convincing.

"The French Doll"—Metro Rivoli, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Mae Murray, * * * scores a dazzling and stunning success. She was never shown to better advantage. * * *
STAR—* * * justifies about 90 per cent of the press agent's adjectives about the star's costumes, and it will doubtless be a big box office success, but somehow or other this reviewer could not grow enthusiastic.

"Going Up"—Asso. Exhibitors Strand, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—* * * reminiscent in plot and design of "The Hottentot," and, while it is not as hilarious, in many respects it is more clever. Be that as it may, "Going Up" is one of the merriest farce-comedies of the season. * * *
POST—It's hilarious farce comedy all the way thru, with Douglas MacLean at his best. It kept optiences Sunday laughing from start to finish.
MacLean has had no better vehicle since "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave."

"Held to Answer"—Metro Lyric, Cincinnati

POST—House Peters, an actor of great ability and as virile as any player on the screen, has the leading male role. His work overshadows defects in the photoplay structure.

"Hoodman Blind"—Fox Monroe, Chicago

POST—"Hoodman Blind" is a good, old-fashioned melodrama of the kind that stirs the emotions, inflames the imagination and rivets the attention. * * *
The sensational story is made doubly impressive by the very good acting of the three principal members of the cast.

"If Winter Comes"—Fox Fox's, Philadelphia

BULLETIN—* * * An intensely sincere attempt to transfer to the screen faithfully and in considerable detail the sum and substance of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel. * * *

But it does not approach nearly the merit of the novel. * * * Yet all this is almost entirely redeemed by the acting of Percy Marmont.

NORTH AMERICAN—Percy Marmont * * * contributes some very fine work. * * * He combines a certain idealistic quality with intelligence which suit him exceptionally a role of this sort.

PUBLIC LEDGER (Evening)—The novel has been extraordinarily well adapted for the screen. It seems as if it had been transformed into some magic substance and spouted into movie-celluloid.

RECORD—A very able cast contributes the life to these emotions and makes them all real. * * * The settings and the title and the directing are all just as good. "Winter Comes" is truly splendid.

"Long Live the King"—Metro The Chicago, Chicago

POST—* * * you will want to cry he (Jackie Coogan) again amazes you with his wonderful acting. * * *

FIRE PATROL BULLETIN NO. 25

While Johnny Harron feasted his eyes on Madge Bellamy, Helen Jerome Eddy looked on with envy in her heart. It's in "The Fire Patrol," directed by Hunt Stromberg—and the first of 6 big melodramas to be released on the franchise plan by CHADWICK PICTURES CORPORATION, 729 7th Ave., N. Y. C.

The Meanest Man in the World"—1st Nat'l

Strand, Minneapolis

STAR—The picture is a good one from every point of consideration. It is of necessity, light and humorous, but it is well acted and well directed.

"Our Hospitality"—Metro Regent, Rochester

DEMOCRAT-CHRONICLE—So that it is a safe promise to make to prospective patrons that they will enjoy "Our Hospitality" more than any other screen comedy presented here this season, the Harold Lloyd comedies accepted.

JOURNAL—It is unfortunate then that this picture, which is the result of such sincere effort, should lack, somehow, that infallible spark of spontaneity which must be the final ingredient of every truly mirth-producing production.

"Ponjola"—1st Nat'l Mr. Smith's, Indianapolis

STAR—May not distract the planets on the courses with its realism, but it produces first rate screen entertainment. TIMES—Miss Nilsson does splendidly in her new disguise. Interesting photography.

Newman, Kansas City

POST—"Ponjola" is an all entertainment film, from beginning to end, full of action, all of romance and full of Miss Nilsson—the last fact the most delightful.

"Six Cylinder Love"—Fox Tally's Broadway, Los Angeles

EXPRESS—So close an adherence to the manuscript tends to make the action at the beginning decidedly slow and necessitates the use of a great many subtitles. But these, are so sparkling and lively that one scarcely realizes their prominence. While slightly exaggerated for comedy purposes, is a clean, wholesome fun.

HERALD—* * * Been faithfully transferred to the screen with unstinted success. * * * Patrons were loud in their praise of the picture.

RECORD—The film play is interesting in that it brings to the screen a group of talented actors, members of the original stage success, whose faces are new to film fans.

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L. Palace, Washington

TIMES—Restraint, evidently, has been removed in a large measure from la Negri's mod of expression—with excellent results for all concerned. This, with the assistance of a good tale and a splendid cast, makes for thorough enjoyment of the film.

"Stephen Steps Out"—F. P.-L. Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—As pictures go, and they go this way and that, young Fairbanks' initial film is fairly entertaining. * * * Any way, the picture is fairly entertaining. Its chief fault is that the action sags in the middle of the picture.

PRESS—* * * Pretty good picture. But, however great the interest in this young man may be, it would be a mistake, we think, to ascribe the movie's merits to him. * * * The merits of the picture are to be credited to production, direction and the story itself.

"Tiger Rose"—Warner's Apollo, Indianapolis

STAR—* * * One of the most engrossing melodramas of the year. * * * Indeed, it is a very thrilling film that manages to keep the spectator on the edge of his seat most of the time. Lenore Ulric * * * appears to advantage as Rose. * * *

TIMES—Your interest will not center so much upon the story as the work of Miss Ulric. She brings a legitimate method to the screen. She gives a remarkable screen performance. The picture is aided by some beautiful natural "shots." There are several tense moments to this drama.

"To The Ladies"—F. P.-L. Century, Baltimore

SUN (EVENING)—The banquet scene and its denouement is an unbeatable situation. It is worth 10 times the price of admission. The whole film is replete with humorous gags of the homely sort that make the picture a scream.

Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—* * * one of the finest comedy dramas to be seen in quite a while. The cast is superb. * * * The entire picture is filled with good original humor and at times tugs at your heart strings.

POST-DISPATCH—Funny situations, rather than dramatic art, contribute to the success of * * * "To The Ladies." * * *

STAR—* * * probably is the best picture in the city this week, and it is not exceptional. The idea was rather thin for a three-act play, and is just so much the thinner for a feature-length movie.

TIMES—It is a good example of a comedy, for while there are plenty of chuckles there is also pathos, the more poignant because unobtrusive.

Palace, Washington

TIMES—"To the Ladies" is one of the cleverest comedies in months.

"Unseeing Eyes"—Gold-Cosmop. New Baltimore

NEWS—For good, old-time thrills, take a peek at "Unseeing Eyes." * * * It is soul-warming melodrama of the first water.

SUN (EVENING)—As pictures go this effort by Arthur Stringer is far from big-league stuff. We felt very often as though the poor little anemic plot were stumbling along with just as much effort as the principals who were forever wading through snow up to their knees.

Park-Mall, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—Frigid, elemental melodrama, but rugged and satisfying. The story has an element of newness.

"Unseeing Eyes" may not be art. It has some improbabilities and the story is drawn out just a little too long—but it is recommended as a rugged, compelling northern melodrama, well acted and remarkably well done, technically.

PRESS—Weak in theme and plot the glorious photography of mountains and snow scenes more than compensates.

And to its everlasting credit, it is one picture of the north that has no mounted police in it.

Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capital, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—The picture is based on a story by Arthur Stringer that is full of thrills and provides Barrymore with one of the best movie roles that he has ever played.

POST-DISPATCH—It is sheer melodrama of the serial thriller kind enacted with a wonderful scenic background. Barrymore has a thrilling fight with the villain. * * *

STAR—The presence of Lionel Barrymore, Louis Wolheim and Seena Owen in the cast, and good photographing of some magnificent snow and mountain scenes save "Unseeing Eyes." * * * from being just another gosh-awful melodrama. * * *

TIMES—Those who fancy thrillers will find much to their liking. * * * The story starts slowly, is full of action after that, and then peters out at the end.

"The Virginian"—Preferred Walnut, Cincinnati

POST—It's very well produced, with some of the finest outdoor shots of real western country we ever glimpsed on the silver screen. Some of the cattle scenes give you a good idea of the immensity of the "great open spaces."

"The Wanters"—1st Nat'l Rivoli, Baltimore

NEWS—"The Wanters" is just another one of those pictures.

"White Tiger"—Universal Miller's, Los Angeles

EXAMINER—There is speed, action and surprise in the piece. The theory that there is, contrary to general opinion, not a stick of honor among thieves is effectively brought out.

EXPRESS—The story is a weird disjointed conception, reminding one of a sketch sheet for artistic experimentation in effects. Viewed in this light the photoplay is decidedly interesting; as a more ambitious effort, it is anything but satisfying. It is too artificial and unfinished.

HERALD—A crook play with action, thrills and suspense.

"Wild Bill Hickok"—F. P.-L. McVicker's, Chicago

AMERICAN—For the production attracts you, if it interests you at all, largely because it marks William S. Hart's return to the screen. * * *

TRIBUNE—Mr. Hart, * * * better let somebody else write his stories for him. * * * The photography, supporting cast, etc., are all right—and the Hart fans will rejoice at welcoming their hero once more in anything.

"Her Temporary Husband"

First National Farce Comedy with Sidney Chaplin Is a Regular Riot of Laughs and Fast Action

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

First National has a regular whale of a comedy in "Her Temporary Husband." Here is a picture that looks as if it were built around the slogan: "Get the laughs," and it certainly does. No matter how hard-boiled you are, even if you belong to the class who sit back and mentally dare a picture to make you laugh, this one will get you, pretty soon you will be smiling and before you know it you will be laughing aloud.

An out-and-out farce, making no pretense to being taken seriously, it starts in with the first subtitle to let you know it is all in good fun. This attitude is maintained throughout; while the action is getting under way there are snappy subtitles and humorous incidents and by-play on the part of Sidney Chaplin which keeps you in good humor. Then once the main idea begins to unfold, the action gets faster and faster, the humor more and more boisterous up to the climax which is a regular whirlwind, both from the standpoint of action and laughs.

riot from every angle. Then on top of that, with no let-down in interest, the manner in which the conspirators are spirited away by the valet and given what's coming to them, brings another round of laughs. Everybody enjoys a good laugh. "Her Temporary Husband" is crammed full of them and should prove a great big box-office winner, so don't overlook it.

—when we tell you they're hits—

hits!*

"Big 10" means 10 big hits—the 10 biggest group of go-gettem's any exhibitor—big—small or medium ever saw, as long as he has been in the picture business and FIRST NATIONAL'S got them!

Get the "BIG 10" habit—nothing can stop us!

See New N. A. M. P. I.

State Righters Nucleus of Ass'n That May Include All Those Not Affiliated With Hays

A revival of the old N. A. M. P. I. under another name, is looked for in certain quarters with the development of the organization coming out of the affiliation of the various state righters who met last week at the Astor.

Originally, a credit organization was planned, sponsored by Charles B. Hoy and Frederick H. Elliott but at the meeting, it was suggested that inasmuch as the Independent Producers and Distributors' Ass'n had become inactive with a clean record, nevertheless, that it might be an idea to use the organization's by-laws as the basis for a new co-operative body. A meeting of state right producers has been called for Thursday at which the organization committee composed of Ike Chadwick, W. E. Hallenberger and Joe Brandt will report. Since Thursday, this group has had two meetings, one of them yesterday.

It is anticipated by some of the sponsors that the association will eventually include a number of firms and individuals who are not members of the Hays group. If the plan should materialize, there will be no conflict with the Hays association but a general working agreement entered upon. At least, it is so hoped. Should the growth of this new group flourish, it is planned to maintain a contact in Washington and with exhibitors throughout the country as well.

Chadwick is mentioned as the first president.

Not Interested in Studio

1924 Plans Under Way

Zukor, Lasky and De Mille Meet Thursday and Friday to Outline Production for Next Year

Cecil B. De Mille, his family and Jeanie MacPherson arrived in New York from the coast yesterday to attend the premiere of "The Ten Commandments" at the Cohan theater Friday night.

Adolph Zukor who has been visiting socially in Chicago is due back Thursday at which time, he, together with Jesse L. Lasky and De Mille will hold a two-day conference, mapping out production plans for 1924-1925. Lasky will leave for the coast on Saturday, following the discussions. De Mille is scheduled to go on the 29th.

A crew of men is busily erecting "The Ten Commandments" sign across the upper stories of the Putnam Bldg. On the 44th street side of the structure is a figure of Theodore Roberts in the role of Moses and on the 45th St. side several figures appearing in the modern version of the picture. The lettering bearing the actual title is strung across the building, covering all of the 7th Ave. front except that portion taken up by the figures.

Exhibitor Aids on Tax Repeal

Eight Suggestions

Congressmen and Public Reached by Wire, Letter and Screen As Outlined by M. P. T. O. of N. Y.

Billy Brandt has forwarded copies of his campaign book replete with exhibitors aids to repeal the admission tax to all of the New York State members and to presidents of the various M. P. T. O. units throughout the country for their help.

The campaign is divided into eight general divisions, as follows:

1. Wire to your Congressman and Senator.
2. Then write to them.
3. Use your screen to ask your public to help in this fight—they are interested!
4. Use all your advertising matter as mediums to enlist your public.
5. Have your patrons sign a petition.
6. Enlist the co-operation of civic organizations.
7. Organize a word-of-mouth squad at your theater.
8. Most important. Keep State headquarters office of M. P. T. O. of N. Y. advised of everything you do and accomplish so it may be used as organized ammunition in the fight.

The plan in detail follows:

Sample Telegrams

1. Suggested telegrams to Congressmen:

(date)

Honorable (your Representative's name and address) As a theater owner in the district you represent I respectfully urge your sincerest consideration to the question of the tax on theater admissions. Stop! A study of the situation will unquestionably recommend to you the necessity of some action during the coming session of Congress to give relief to the theaters and the public from the tax burden they now carry.

(Sign name, address and theater).

(date)

Honorable (your Representative's name and address). It is respectfully requested that the letter forwarded you today relative to the theater admission tax receive your kind consideration.

(Signed).

Model Letter

2. Sample letter to Congressmen:

I wish to call your attention to a burdensome tax situation which could be alleviated through your earnest co-operation.

Although a revision in the tax laws was made by the last Congress, little or no relief was given to the motion picture theater of the country and their millions of patrons.

The (Blank) theater has an annual total attendance of (insert annual attendance figure). These theatergoers, all of whom are your constituents, must pay a 10 per cent tax for the privilege of enjoying an evening's entertainment at the (Blank) theater. This entertainment, for a majority of my patrons, is their only means of obtaining relaxation and recreation, two elements which most certainly should be free of excessive taxation.

On many occasions the money collected in admission taxes at my box office is in excess of my profits; in fact, there are times when the film companies and the government are the only ones to profit through the operation of the (Blank) theater.

Many complaints are made at the box office by patrons who believe that the admission tax should be abolished, as other war taxes have been.

Another war levy which the theater owners must pay is the seating tax, which, in my case, amounts to (insert figure) a year. This one item might seem insignificant, but added to the other tax demands it becomes an expense that is draining the purse.

Admission prices have not advanced in keeping with wages, cost of pictures and taxes imposed upon the theaters. The public demands its motion picture entertainment at a nominal cost, and to meet that demand the theaters have maintained a low admission price, despite the increased cost of operation.

The (Blank) theater is now paying (insert figure) city, county, state and Federal taxes. I believe you will find that that total exceeds the taxes paid by any other business.

I wish Mr. (name of Congressman) you would give this matter your sincerest consideration. I believe that if you study the situation you will realize the necessity of some action by the coming session of congress which will give the theaters and the public some relief from the tax burden they now carry. I will be grateful, and I am sure my patrons will be appreciative, of any effort you may put forth in bringing about a revision of the revenue law.

(Signature.)

Using the Screen

3. Messages presenting the tax situation clearly and concisely are published herewith. Screening at every performance is suggested:

Last year the government made far more profit out of this theater than the owners did. Do you think that you should continue to pay the admission tax of 10 per cent?

* * *

Motion pictures are the one great moderate priced amusement available to everyone. Why should it be burdened with the admission tax? Ask your congressman and senator where they stand.

* * *

This theater is compelled to turn over to the U. S. Government one-tenth of the money you pay at the box office. Is any other business in this city having to carry a burden like that?

* * *

Newspaper Ads

In your newspaper advertisements use any of the following catch-lines or use all of them in rotation.

The theater admission tax was justifiable as a war measure, but it is now an unnecessary burden on the public and the theater—it should be repealed!

Write your Congressmen that the theater admission tax must be repealed.

Use these in every advertisement and continue to use them until the tax is repealed.

The burdensome theater admission tax has outlived its necessity—it should be repealed.

The theater offers relaxation and recreation—these elements should not be taxed.

Petitions

5. Every exhibitor should have his lobby or at his box office a petition, addressed to the Congressman from his district, for the public to sign. A message, urging patrons to sign before leaving the theater, should be thrown on the screen at every performance. This should be circulated among the members of the labor unions and among farmers. In the smaller communities merchants will co-operate by posting the petitions in prominent places in their stores. A petition blank should be published in each issue of the program or house organ which exhibitors may publish. Following is a suggested petition:

Petitions

The undersigned, patrons of the (insert name of theater) at (insert name of city and state), hereby petition you, as Congressman from this district, to vote for the repeal of the 10 per cent admission tax at the coming session of congress.. The undersigned believe that there no longer is justification for this war levy. We believe that in working for its repeal you will be contributing a worthy service to your constituents.

Name .....

Street Address .....

Civic Organizations

6. Appeal to civic organizations.

A direct appeal for co-operation should be made to all local organizations, such as chambers of commerce, rotary clubs, women's clubs, parent-teachers' associations, labor unions, farmers' co-operative associations and the like. In presenting the matter to chambers of commerce, exhibitors should accentuate the fact that successful theaters bring increased business to a community.

It should be pointed out emphatically that theaters must compete with Chautauquas and schools. Y. M. C. A., K. of C. and church entertainments, for which no admission tax is charged. The fact that more taxes are imposed on theaters than on any other business should not be overlooked in presenting the case. (Exhibitors should have figures at hand to emphasize this last statement.) In presenting the matter to labor unions it would be well to bring to their attention the action of their brother members in New York in going on record for repeal of the admission tax.

Call to the attention of every organization the theater's willingness at all times to co-operate in furthering all civic movements. Bring the war record of the motion picture theaters to the attention of those you interest. Tell them of the mobilization of the theaters to assist in the successful culmination of the war. Dwell upon the Four-Minute Speakers, Liberty Loan, Red Cross and numerous other drives in theaters. Tell them of the other war taxes we paid cheerfully and impress upon them that the theaters are always at the public service.

Word-of-Mouth Advertising

7. The most effective of all means of advertising.

Instruct your employes to pass the good word along. Your cashier and doorman who are familiar with your patrons can help materially in this regard. Your house manager who also knows many of your patrons by sight can help too.

Your musicians, operators and other employes belonging to labor unions can be asked to bring the question up before their local bodies for consideration because of the great importance to the theater for whom they work.

Even your cleaners and porters can be utilized to help in this cause by speaking on this subject to their own families and everybody whom they know.

In short, a general campaign among your employes, if properly inaugurated, would be of great assistance in the repeal of the tax. Appoint yourself a committee of one to generally supervise the activities of your theater. With sixteen hundred theaters in New York State thus organized, each a center generating overwhelming sentiment for the repeal of the admission tax, the success of the campaign can be assured.

The State Organization

8. It is organized to help you—collectively and individually.

Much of the work in spreading propaganda in the campaign to cause the repeal of the admission tax must be done by you individually—because you are in direct, personal contact with your local public.

But—

This is important:

Copies of letters, telegrams, your advertising matter, letters from the public and congressmen, and signed petitions should be sent to State Headquarters of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Times Building, N. Y. City.

This material will be invaluable for use by the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. in carrying the campaign to its final goal.

You must furnish the ammunition

Gertrude Atherton's "Best Seller" Made into Splendid Production

"BLACK OXEN," a First National Attraction, adapted from Gertrude Atherton's popular novel. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Eight reels.

It ought to be a clean-up for every exhibitor who plays it. It's a novel with a million dollars' worth of publicity and advertising back of it and all of this publicity can be turned to good account in exploiting the picture. Never have we seen Miss Griffith more beautiful nor more alluring. Miss Atherton's novel contains such an unusual theme and has created such a stir, there is an immense audience waiting to see this filmization of her book. And Director Lloyd has made an excellent job of it, one that puts him in the front rank of present day directors.

"BLACK OXEN" will prove a surprise for most picture devotees.

All Famous Players Theater Managers Eligible—Will Not Replace Salaries

The bonus plan for managers of theaters owned by Famous Players becomes effective on Jan. 1. Harold B. Franklin, head of the theater department, has been working out the details, some of which are announced in a new issue of "The Close-Up," a Famous Players house organ. Franklin says:

"This plan provides for paying a proportionate amount to every manager who cuts costs, increases business, or both. It goes into effect Jan. 1. The proposed bonus is not a salary. Neither is it payment in lieu of salary. It is a measure of efficiency. A weekly reward for effort and results of a kind that are out of the ordinary."

Seeks Accounting on "Drifting"

Walter Scott Andrews, executor of the estate of Daisy H. Andrews who wrote plays under the name of Leslie Loring, has sued William A. Brady for an accounting on the receipts of "Drifting." The original play was known as "Cassie Cook of the Yellow Seas," but was produced on the stage as "Drifting." It is alleged the picture rights were sold by Brady to Universal for 15% of the profits of the film and that $10,000 was paid on account. The suit is for the playwright's share.

The Trend

By DANNY

What is the trend of the motion picture industry?

Where is it leading, and how will it affect the plans now being formulated by important producers and distributors for the coming season?

These pertinent questions were put to Samuel Goldwyn yesterday. He leaves for the Coast today and will be followed on Saturday by Jesse Lasky. The following week Cecil De Mille and Richard A. Rowland leave, and other important executives will shortly make their annual mid-winter pilgrimage to the Coast.

Answering the questions Goldwyn said:

"This is certain: the trend of the industry today definitely proves that the day of the independent producers is at hand. The successes established during this season of important, worthwhile pictures made by individuals in their own time and in their own way demonstrates that real successes in the future will be made accordingly.

"The picture business is rapidly becoming a show business. The day has passed when any one man can lay out a program of fifty or more pictures which will be successful at the box-office.

Flinn In New Job

Leaves Famous Players to Join Distributing Company In Executive Capacity

John C. Flinn, for a number of years with Famous Players, has tendered his resignation, effective January 1. While no announcement was made of his future affiliation, it is understood that he will join one of the more important distributing companies in an executive capacity.

Flinn originally headed the advertising and publicity department of Famous Players. Later, he joined the theater department with special duties, and when "The Covered Wagon" was completed, he was assigned the exploitation of it and went to London to stage the English premiere. In recent weeks, Flinn has been handling the advance exploitation on "The Ten Commandments."

Reargue Goldwyn Case

Arguments relative to the use by Samuel Goldwyn of the name of Goldwyn in connection with the picture he is releasing through First National were heard in the Appellate Division yesterday. A court decision has already decided that Goldwyn can use the name provided there appear in the main title, the words "not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures." Goldwyn Pictures Corp. has appealed to the Appellate Division which now has the matter under advisement.

Bonns Promoted

Eddie Bonns who has been handling the exploitation work at Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan has been appointed a special representative of the sales department. W. F. Ferguson will handle exploitation.

"By a method of percentage, the manager of a small theater will be able to win as much money as the manager of a large house, as awards will be made on these two points: increased paid admissions per week, and decreased costs per admission. An equitable standard will be set for each theater. Standards will be arrived at by summing up past performances, and by eliminating from consideration any condition over which the manager has no control. So it can readily be seen that the bonus plan is absolutely fair.

"For instance, a manager who increases his paid admissions for a week, but exceeds his standard of cost per seat, will not receive a bonus. On the other hand, a manager who has shown no increase in business, but has cut down his cost per seat, will receive a bonus. Thus it is possible to collect from both ends by increasing business and cutting costs."

"There is an appreciation at this moment by important producers of this fact. A producer must have time, ample time, to make a picture as he plans it and desires it. Nothing could more definitely demonstrate this than such successes as 'The Hunchback,' 'Scaramouche,' 'The Covered Wagon,' 'Anna Christie,' and a number of others including 'The Eternal City.' It is true that the producer must keep an eye on the box office, but it is very true that if any producer looks only to the box office, much of the great appeal of motion pictures will be lost.

"When the motion picture business ceases to be an art it ceases to be a business. Entertainment is an art.

"The day when a producer of motion pictures could set out to make 20, 40, 60 or more pictures, attending to the innumerable annoying problems which develop, has passed. We have had a great many fine, big pictures for this year and at this moment I might ask who in this business is planning a big picture for next season? Have they been frightened off by the results obtained so far this season? For many of these results the exhibitor is to blame.

"Imagine such a state of affairs when an exhibitor in an important city refuses to pay a decent price for a good picture for New Year's week and maintains that he doesn't need it. He may spend a fortune on institutional advertising but he overlooks the fact that a fine good picture is the very best kind of institutional advertising, and I know exhibitors who are planning to play pictures two, three and four years old New Year's week because they know they are going to do good business. It's shortsightedness. If the exhibitor maintains this state of mind we are going to have a lot of mighty bad pictures for next season unless somebody wakes up in time.

"Important theatrical producers—and the motion picture business is rapidly reaching the show business—would never think of making 50 plays a year. They wouldn't dare. David Belasco has presented 11 plays during the past four years with 10 positive hits as the result. John Golden produces two plays a year; he has had one failure out of 11; Charles Dillingham, one out of 10; Ziegfeld produces two great shows a year and makes a fortune; the Shuberts make 46 a year and how many hits do they have? All of which leads to this: that the independent producer of the screen must work incessantly, developing, planning, working things out so that he has a real success. Griffith and Ince both tried to supervise for Triangle to make 52 pictures a year. Did they do it? What are they doing today? Making pictures in this form on such a scale means that production becomes a matter of convenience instead of a matter of mentality. There is a no dual genius in the picture business; a genius that is as great on production as it is on distribution.

"For six years I tried to convince my associates in Goldwyn Pictures to make 'Potash.' They could not see it. When I started on my own, the first picture that I made was 'Potash.' The newspaper press of this country and hundreds of delightful letters have proven to me as well as the success it has at the box office that I was correct. It was not the story, it never is; it is the treatment that is given to it that makes for success or failure in making pictures.

"I have waited for two months to be able to secure Lewis Stone for my next picture. Could a producer with a schedule of fifty or more dream of doing such a thing? And I wanted Stone because he is the man for the part.

"And don't forget this, that no big city, no great community like Chicago or New York gives a correct gauge of the exhibition value or the entertainment value of a picture. In great cities like this the appeal is to a shifting, nervous community which is entirely different from the state of mind which exists in the average community throughout this country."

He adds that both companies are "solvent, go-concerns."

Smallwood admits that Pyramid has been seriously hampered by the situation preventing the sale of stock. Preliminary work on three pictures has been completed but additional financing is necessary to complete them, he asserts. The letters, in part:

Smallwood and Co., Inc., invested a fortune in Pyramid in addition to the investments made by unit-holders and bondholders. William Rodman Fay, president of Schirmer, Inc., music publisher, is seeking to recover $10,000 he invested in Synchronized Scenario Music Co., in an action against Walter Engel of Far Rockaway, trial of which is under way in the Supreme Court in Queens. Fay testified that the company was represented as making records of music in conjunction with motion pictures.

Fay said that after Engel had closed a contract with him, as president of Schirmer, Engel sold him personally a block of stock for $10,000. He said Engel represented the company as a going concern, but that this turned out to be false.

Fay denies that he made any misrepresentation, and asserts that Fay bought the stock of his own accord. He also says that the company has merely suspended temporarily.

As a Whole.... ONE OF THE BIGGEST LAUGH GETTERS OF THE SEASON; FARCE THAT DRIFTS INTO OUT AND OUT SLAP-STICK BUT WITH RAPID FIRE COMEDY AND CONTINUOUSLY FUNNY BUSINESS, IT'S A SURE WINNER.

Cast.... Sydney Chaplin the real comedian in comedy role that he puts over in great style; they're going to look for him more often after they see this one; Owen Moore good also; Sylvia Breamer, the girl in the case, hasn't a great deal to do; Chuck Reisner first rate "tough guy" comedian.

Type of Story.... Great comedy entertainment. It isn't often that they can take a story as silly as this actually is, and with as little real situations to it, and make a successful and genuinely amusing comedy of it. But it can be done. "Her Temporary Husband" proves it. There is practically nothing to the story but it's a laugh from start to finish and with nearly seven reels of film, that's going some. Slapstick, as a rule, wearies after the first stunt is repeated a second time, but in this instance, where they complicate matters by having three sets of chases and pile on more excitement at every turn, instead of dragging and losing strength, it gains. The laughs keep coming better and better. It can all be summed up in clever direction and a capable company of comedians.

Box Office Angle..... Good for the box office. A comedy entertainment as good as this can't fail to go by unnoticed. Let one crowd see it and you can count on word-of-mouth advertising taking care of succeeding showings. It's a real laugh getter so if they enjoy being amused here's the one to do it.

Lapworth Resigns

From Goldwyn—Future Plans Uncertain But Likely to Produce in England

Charles Lapworth who was formerly an important executive in the London offices of Goldwyn Pictures, and who, some months ago, went to Hollywood to aid in production, has resigned.

Lapworth reached New York yesterday from the Coast. While his plans are at the moment indefinite, it is not unlikely that he will go to England in a few weeks and take up production on his own.

At a farewell dinner tendered him in London when he left for Hollywood, Lapworth then said he was bid adieu to his friends "au revoir" and expected to be back with them shortly. During his stay at Culver City Lapworth worked with Victor Astrom on "Name the Man."

"Naked Truth" Dinner March 29

The "Naked Truth" dinner of the M. P. A. will be held at the Hotel Astor March 29 and, contrary to the usual custom, guests will be permitted to escort ladies. There will be dancing and while the usual satire on film matters will be indulged in, the affair will be properly dignified. A. M. Botsford is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Resigns from Louis Mayer Organization to Accept Important Sales Post With Distributing Unit

Paul C. Mooney, general manager of the Louis B. Mayer Co., has tendered his resignation and on Jan. 1 will assume new duties of an important nature with one of the prominent distributing organizations.

In his new post, Mooney will have a good deal to say in shaping the sales policy of the company involved. He declined yesterday to discuss the matter, further than to admit that he had decided to leave the Mayer enterprises in favor of the new connection.

Mooney is one of the best known men in the distributing end of the business. He was originally in the carnival and out-door amusement business and then joined the Cleveland News-Leader. He then became

New Markets Yearly

Seen by A. E. Smith—Has No Fears About Stability of the Business

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Pessimistic, conservatives and extravagant radicals are bringing the industry tumbling about their own ears, according to Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, who has issued one of his infrequent statements.

Smith deems it fortunate that there is a level road traveled by steady minded men which remains the open way to legitimate growth and development.

The Ten Best

Lists forwarded by important newspaper as well as trade paper critics throughout the country of the ten best pictures of the year for the forthcoming issue of The Film Year Book show the following:

	Number of Votes
The Covered Wagon	52
Merry Go Round	25
Robin Hood	24
Hunchback of Notre Dame	24
The Green Goddess	22
Scaramouche	19
Safety Last	18
Rosita	17
Down to the Sea in Ships	17
Little Old New York	16

It should be borne in mind that the returns are as yet incomplete and that some of the later releases have not played in as many important cities as some of the earlier releases.

New Markets Yearly

"Since my last stay in Hollywood," Smith states, "I have had opportunity to study and analyze conditions in Great Britain and on the Continent as well as opportunity to review business in the United States and Canada and the prospects for the coming year.

"I have seen twenty-six years of progress in motion pictures. Every year of those has been one of advancement in production; only during the stern years of the war did business show any decrease. That decrease was in the foreign market. It was in a large measure, although not altogether, offset by the spread of motion pictures throughout the United States. Never have the level-headed men in this industry had cause to complain about the growth of the industry as a whole. Each year sees new markets for films.

"The business of Great Britain and the Continent is being restored to normal in a manner most satisfactory to film distributors and to producers. The Vitagraph exchanges in Great Britain where we have branches in every large city in the provinces as well as in Scotland, Ireland and Wales are reporting increased rentals every month. Our French distribution is coming back to what it was before 1914. So encouraging has been Vitagraph's business on the Continent that I reopened last summer a producing studio in Paris which is making pictures direct for Continental consumption. Vitagraph's studios in Hollywood and Brooklyn have not been idle.

"This suggests comment on the question of production in the East or in the West. I do not see any reason why the motion picture industry should be limited to any locality. On the contrary production under modern conditions permits the making of pictures anywhere on the face of the earth.

"In February I enter upon my twenty-seventh year as a motion picture producer and distributor. Therefore when I predict in all seriousness that 1924 will show a continued steady growth of markets for film I speak with more than a quarter of a century experience. Our own country is soon to be relieved of some of the burdens the war laid upon it. Our industry will share directly in this relief, but the public at large will be the chief beneficiary. This means increased attendance and the building of new theatres."

presented on a two-a-day basis. After the signing up of the Garrick theaters in Minneapolis and St. Paul, the following booked "The Hunchback":

The Palace, Montreal; Tivoli, Toronto; Alhambra, Milwaukee; probably to be followed by the Garden; Arcadia, Philadelphia; Pershing, St. Louis; Crescent, Brooklyn; Victoria, Altoona, Pa.; Nemo, Johnstown, Pa.; American, Butte, Mont.; Strand, Lakewood, N. J.; Patchogue, Patchogue, L. I.; and the Strand, Far Rockaway.

The first opening took place this week at the Strand, Lakehurst, N. J. The next will be at the Palace, Montreal, Dec. 23. Similar preparations are under way for the Tivoli, Toronto, which will open New Year's Eve. Several openings will be on Christmas Day, these including the Alhambra, Milwaukee; the Arcadia, Philadelphia and the Strand, Far Rockaway. The Victoria, Altoona, will open Christmas Eve.

Booked into "Legit" House

"The Hunchback" opens at the Crescent, in downtown Brooklyn section on Jan. 21 for a minimum run of four weeks. This is the old Triangle theater which since then has been running legitimate shows.

Skouras Books "The Hunchback"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—What is said to be the biggest deal involving a single picture for St. Louis has just been concluded by Spyros Skouras and Universal. It provides for a three weeks' run of "The Hunchback," at the Pershing, commencing Jan. 5. It will play at $1.65 top and every seat will be reserved.

Fined $100 Each

Joseph Bevalacquer and Morris Kleinman have each been fined $100 for violating the law relative to censorship. They pleaded guilty to the charge of being involved in the showing of unlicensed films at the Novelty theater on the Bowery.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Call of the Canyon"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—* * * This one is mediocre to the point of boredom. * * * The scenery is good, only there isn't enough of it.

DAILY NEWS—There are several things in the matter with "The Call of the Canyon." This Wilson, as a jazz baby, is one instance of something wrong.

EVENING JOURNAL—The picture at the Rivoli could have been told in half the footage, with plenty to spare. It's dull. Richard Dix is a fine actor, but there's not much to do.

EVENING WORLD—Anyway, Zane Grey is credited with having selected the locations on which the shooting of his story should take place; but all this shooting wasn't at sunrise, though some of it should have been.

HERALD—It would be hard to imagine a less enthralling example of the filmwright's best art. * * * The name of Mr. Grey as author would also indicate a certain amount of vigorous melodrama, with plenty of action; but in this case the label is deceptive.

MAIL—* * * A wholesome, refreshing and lightful entertainment until the very last hundred feet of the last reel. At that point comes what the producers would call a surprise, but it is such a forced attempt to put a leading character in the right light that the whole effect is spoiled.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—It is a very exceptional picture in the respect that up until the last few feet the audience expects the usual happy ending, but cannot figure out how it is going to work out. The last-minute finish is splendid.

TIMES—The titles * * * are suited to the story. The hard work of the players is commendable. * * * This is another instance where the story has been bungled. * * *

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—* * * A West-of-the-usual Grey conception, demonstrating workmanship from all departments of the order, which could take the entire reputation of the author, despite it would necessitate mistakes in some instances, and give to the scene westerns of the better type.

Tribune—"The Call of the Canyon" is the same old stuff. * * * Of course, we found the picture extremely entertaining, for it had some of our favorite players in it.

World—It gets sillier. That storm is magnificent.

"Lucretia Lombard"—Warner's Strand

AMERICAN—On the whole "Lucretia Lombard" is good entertainment and when all has been said and done that is the highest praise we can give a picture.

DAILY NEWS—In the early part of the picture Marc McDermott has some excellent moments. * * * "Lucretia Lombard" is a so-so picture.

EVENING JOURNAL—Beyond especially good effects in the flaming woods and the raging river, the photoplay is uneventful. And this despite the presence in the cast of Irene Rich and Monte Blue. The narrative, as filmed, bristles with conventional situations.

EVENING WORLD—It's fair.

MAIL—Exhibitors need have no fear for the box office when this picture comes to their theaters. * * * The picture is another one of the excessively sentimental things. * * *

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The Warner Bros. have done well by the author in giving her story a fine screen presentation. It is fundamentally a good moving picture, containing the triangle theme and a goodly share of thrills. It also contains two excellent players, Irene Rich and Monte Blue.

World—Irene Rich really ought to get more recognition in the world of the motion picture. * * * The story is very tearful and sentimental.

TELEGRAM—Spectacular thrills follow each other uninterruptedly in this Harry Rapf production.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It looks as though the Warner Bros. finally had a real box office hit on their hands. * * * The honors of the picture must be handed to Norma Shearer. * * * This girl is absolutely a find, and this picture will make her. Her work stands out in "Lucretia Lombard" as a veritable gem.

World—"Lucretia Lombard" is a highly sentimental, very well acted melodrama of a three-cornered love affair. * * * It is cast and mounted nicely. * * *

Adler, Ennis Join Hands

In The Courts

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Rochester, N. Y.—Without going into the question of whether or not the Eastman is properly excluded from taxation, Justice John B. M. Stephens has dismissed the order granted previously on the application of Julius Hoesterey, Jr., for a review of the action of the City Assessors in including the property in the list of untaxed holdings. Justice Stephens says in substance that a writ of certiorari cannot be employed and that there is no remedy at law in a case of this kind.

The Eastman was classed as untaxable property on the theory that it came within the meaning of an educational institution. Hoesterey disagreed and as a taxpayer applied to the courts for an order to review the action of the assessors to determine whether they had been right in their contention.

In a suit brought against Pathe Exchange by Jacob Landy, as trustee for the stockholders of Western Photoplays, to recover a balance alleged to be due on the exhibition of "The Great Gamble," with Charles Hutchison and Ann Luther, the Appellate Term has reversed a judgment for $1,584 against Pathe and dismissed the complaint. It was admitted that the defendant accounted for $62,547 in 1919, but the plaintiff claimed that the sum sued for had become due since.

Rockford, Ill.—While the trial of the suit of J. E. O. Pridmore vs. Charles and Oscar Frederickson and Herbert Calvert is under way in circuit court, the defendants in this action are filing a counter action against Pridmore, a Chicago architect, for $25,000 damages.

Both suits are over a row on a proposed theater which was to have been erected in West State Street by the defendants in the original action.

The Appellate Term has decided in favor of Albert H. Carlisle in five suits brought against him by former employees in his talking-film business for salary alleged to be due. The suits were bought by Joseph V. Haster, recording manager, for $925; Rudolph Miehl, demonstrator and repairer of films, for $650; Edward L. Miller, operator and demonstrator, $350; and Henry L. Miller, operator, $550.

KINSHIP

By DANNY

Hard to find in this business. Where they shake hands. And clinch the other fist behind the back. But there is one spot East—and also one in the West. Where the right spirit does prevail. Any day and every day. And that's at the AMPA meetings. There's a real kinship there.

Yesterday the weekly luncheon was turned into a regular Christmussy spirit. The boys tendered each other gifts. There were some speeches. And everybody left feeling the better for it.

There should be more of this get-together (and stay together) spirit. There is no need of waiting for Christmas to come once a year. We need a lot of that spirit every day of the year. And some of it can be used at nights, too.

DeMille's Talk

Should have been an inspiration. Should give the Advertisers not only something to think about. But to write about. And as CB said: "Don't let it be preachy. People don't want to be preached to." But if they need a little more help in this direction they can glance at the forthcoming Year Book. And see what the magazines printed during 1923. And they should have an idea from this of forgetting allie Fewclothes and her millions of income. And write some real stuff that will help get this business somewhere.

MILLION DOLLAR "NIFTY"

Pointing The Way

De Mille Tells Advertisers Public Depends on Films for Guidance—Party for Flinn

Motion pictures are depended upon to lead the way "toward the light," according to Cecil B. De Mille, who delivered an address yesterday before the A. M. P. A. He was scheduled to speak on the duty of the producer but in his talk digressed to include not only the producer but the function of the advertising man as well.

De Mille told of a $1,000 prize offer which he made to the public for an idea from which he could develop a picture. "I received 33,000 answers," he said. "Of that number about 31,000 were intelligent; 1,500 were ridiculous."

Munroe Elected

Now President of Hodkinson Corp.—Flinn and Mooney Become Vice-Presidents

Following a series of conferences held by officials of the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., announcement was made yesterday that F. C. Munroe, until now vice-president, had been elected president and that W. W. Hodkinson had gone from the presidency to the chairmanship of the board of directors.

The board of directors, under the re-organization, will, of course, include Hodkinson and Munroe while Raymond Pawley continues in the post of vice-president and treasurer. Oscar M. Bate, counsel, has been elected a director and Harry A. Richards, the secretary, as well as a director. John C. Flinn and Paul C. Mooney will join the company on Jan. 1, as vice-presidents in two newly created posts. Flinn will handle publicity and advertising and Mooney, the sales.

Hodkinson declares in the statement issued that with the acquisition of the Kirkwood-Lee series and those starring Harry Carey, "the time for the expansion of our business has come." Commenting on the increased personnel, he declares:

"This move will permit me to devote my time exclusively to the broader policies of our company, get better acquainted in the trade generally, and concentrate on the development of personal plans that I have not had the time to go into heretofore."

The Hodkinson Corp. in October, increased its capitalization from $800,000 to $1,800,000.

Many Houses for Chicago

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—There is talk of building the largest theater on the North side on the site of the cabaret garden formerly known as the Green Mill, but later called Montmartre. Four theaters are under way, or soon to be started, on the North Side; two are in course of construction on the South Side. Andrew Karas, owner of the Woodlawn, has plans for a new house on the South Side, and steps are being taken looking to the construction of two new loop houses in the new year.

"The Man From Brodney's"—Vita-graph—Rialto

AMERICAN—A picture like "The Man From Brodney's" comes along with an obvious story treated in an obvious manner, and yet with a result that is so undeniably satisfactory. One of the best things this company has ever made.

DAILY NEWS—Only Mr. McCutcheon can deal so glibly in mythical kingdoms and the romances which bud therein.

EVENING JOURNAL—It is good serial material. It is not the sort of thing one expects to see at the Rialto. Objection is not made to the fact that it is melodramatic, but to its ridiculous impossibility.

EVENING WORLD—J. Warren Kerrigan is ably supported by Alice Calhoun, Wanda Hawley and Miss Dupont.

MAIL—It is a lively melodrama with a flag-waving ending. "The Man from Brodney's" should prove to be a "knock-out" when it reaches the 10-cent stands.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—For it is typical McCutcheon fiction, produced in a manner worthy of his efforts. The best acting in the piece is done by some one called Saunders, but he isn't even mentioned in the cast provided by Vitagraph.

POST—just manages to become passable entertainment.

TELEGRAM—It is a love story of mystery and intrigue in the South Seas.

TIMES—A popular type of picture, in which awkward situations are cleared up conveniently by the scenario writer and the director to suit their convenience. This picture is poorly cut, and although it has certain interesting sequences it is not an overwhelming success as an entertainment.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It is a highly romantic story the usual emotional hokum. The uprising gave David Smith a chance to stage a corking battle.

TRIBUNE—A quite entertaining picture. It was all very good and we liked J. Warren Kerrigan better than in anything we have seen him previously.

WORLD—For the sake of this compelling climax the picture must be accorded a vote of moderate confidence. The early reels are rather soporific and may well be omitted by the discriminating movie-goer intent upon inspecting only the best of the week's display.

us; a few were humorous; two or three obscene and one, insulting. Of the total, 30,000 embodied serious ideas. We don't have to give the public the old hokum, despite talk to the contrary. The people want something new, something different.

"The replies proved to me that the great body of the people are looking toward the motion picture to lead the way. Many replies stressed the fact that the authors didn't know what they wanted. They declared the producers had a wonderful opportunity to do things of a worthwhile nature through the medium of the screen.

"We give the public what you gentlemen lead them to expect. It is for you to pave the way toward better things, not so much through the use of adjectives or the actual writing of copy as the spreading of advanced ideas that should dominate what material you turn out."

De Mille said this was his first visit in two years and remarked how strongly he was impressed with the ever-changing conditions he found here. He voiced the opinion that New York was different from the rest of the country and that what the New York public wants should not be accepted as the basis for the entire country. In support of this contention, he added that few of the ideas embodied in the plays now running on the New York stage could be used in pictures because the country at large was thinking differently from New York.

"Great thoughts can be gotten over the screen," he said at one point. "We have the power to remove censorship if our ideas are right."

De Mille caused a laugh when, in speaking of his new picture he called it "The Ten Gray Hairs," five of them for Zukor and five for Lasky. After he left, Arthur James characterized De Mille's remarks as a "smoke screen," and generally took exception to many of the director's ideas.

A number of humorous Christmas gags were interchanged. Harry Reichert acted as Santa Claus and suggested that the A. M. P. A. tender Jon C. Flinn, one of the charter members of the organization, a testimonial lunch on the occasion of his joining the Hodkinson organization as vice-president. This will occur early in January.

Here With Mt. Everest Films

Major W. R. Foran and H. A. Chase are here from Glasgow with a picture showing the Mt. Everest expedition and life in India. They will go to Toronto to show the pictures and return later to arrange for exploitation in this country. Lowell Thomas, owner of the films, is due here next week.

The M. P. T. O. Committee of Three composed of Martin G. Smith, Fred Seegert and J. S. Phillips which was assigned the duty of appointing a committee "to arrange for the fullest co-ordination and co-operation of all forces in the industry for the purpose of securing the appeal of the admission tax," has named the following:

R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J.; Joseph Mogler, St. Louis; C. E. Whitehurst, Baltimore; E. W. Collins, Jonesboro, Ark.; Martin G. Smith, Toledo; Glenn Harper, Los Angeles; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh; M. E. Comerford, Scranton; Joseph W. Walsh, Hartford; and Sydney S. Cohen, ex-officio.

Kunsky's Plans

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—John H. Kunsky has this to say relative to long runs:

"I have no doubt but that the time will come, and is nearing, when I will be obliged to turn the Adams into a two-a-day house, at increased prices. When this is done, however, I will have already begun the erection of a theater larger, or equal in size to the Capitol."

Kunsky is already reported considering the erection of a large theater.

Buys "Lost World" Rights

"The Lost World," by Conan Doyle appears in the partial list of features First National will release in 1924. It was reported in THE FILM DAILY for Sept. 16 that the company had secured the rights. The story will be filmed by one of the company's own producing units.

Gill Going to Coast

William S. Gill, Eastern sales manager for Rothacker, will leave for the Coast today to discuss business with the executives at the Rothacker-Aller laboratory in Hollywood. He will be accompanied back to New York by E. O. Blackburn, sales manager for the Rothacker plant on the Coast.

Promise Payments in Full

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—Creditors and stock subscribers of the William Christy Cabanne M. P. Trust, Ltd., which recently was thrown into the hands of a receiver in New York, will be paid in full, according to George T. Priest, local counsel. The company had the financial backing of many prominent St. Louisans, some of whom are alleged to have failed to pay their subscriptions.

Priest stated that the receivers had signed a contract with Anderson Pictures for distribution.

At Anderson Pictures, the above so far as it concerned that company, was characterized as "premature."

KINSHIP

By DANNY

Hard to find in this business. Where they shake hands. And clinch the other fist behind the back. But there is one spot East—and also one in the West. Where the right spirit does prevail. Any day and every day. And that's at the AMPA meetings. There's a real kinship here.

Yesterday the weekly luncheon was turned into a regular Chrismussy spirit. The boys tendered each other gifts. There were some speeches. And everybody left feeling the better for it.

There should be more of this get-together (and stay together) spirit. There is no need of waiting for Christmas to come once a year. We had a lot of that spirit every day of the year. And some of it can be used on nights, too.

DeMille's Talk

Should have been an inspiration. Could give the Advertisers not only something to think about. But to write about. And as CB said: "Don't let it be preachy. People don't want to be preached to." But if they need a little more help in this direction they can glance at the forthcoming Year Book. And see what the magazines printed during 1923. And they should have an idea from this of forgetting Slie Fewclothes and her millions of income. And write some real stuff that will help get this business somewhere.

A MILLION DOLLAR "NIFTY"

Said De Mille relative to The Ten Commandments: "The picture which I might call 'Ten Grey Hairs,' five for Zukor; five for Lasky."

If CB was an accountant—or a barber—he might have discovered more.

I. E. Chadwick Elected President—To Be Active in All Three Branches of Industry

The rejuvenation of the I. P. D. A. as indicated last week became a fact yesterday when a number of state right operators held a meeting at the Astor and formally launched the organization under the title of the Independent M. P. Producers and Distributors Ass'n with I. E. Chadwick president.

The meeting was well attended, a total of about twenty-five companies having representation at it. The report of a committee named last week to draw up rules covering an organization of that character was adopted. The following is the com-

Pointing The Way

De Mille Tells Advertisers Public Depends on Films for Guidance—Party for Flinn

Motion pictures are depended upon to lead the way "toward the light," according to Cecil B. De Mille, who delivered an address yesterday before the A. M. P. A. He was scheduled to speak on the duty of the producer but in his talk digressed to include not only the producer but the function of the advertising man as well.

De Mille told of a $1,000 prize offer which he made to the public for an idea from which he could develop a picture. "I received 33,000 answers," he said. "Of that number about 31,000 were intelligent; 1,500 were ridiculous."

Munroe Elected

Now President of Hodkinson Corp.—Flinn and Mooney Become Vice-Presidents

Following a series of conferences held by officials of the W. W. Hodkinson Corp., announcement was made yesterday that F. C. Munroe, until now vice-president, had been elected president and that W. W. Hodkinson had gone from the presidency to the chairmanship of the board of directors.

The board of directors, under the re-organization, will, of course, include Hodkinson and Munroe while Raymond Pawley continues in the post of vice-president and treasurer. Oscar M. Bate, counsel, has been elected a director and Harry A. Richards, the secretary, as well as a director. John C. Flinn and Paul C. Mooney will join the company on Jan. 1, as vice-presidents in two newly created posts. Flinn will handle publicity and advertising and Mooney, the sales.

Hodkinson declares in the statement issued that with the acquisition of the Kirkwood-Lee series and those starring Harry Carey, "the time for the expansion of our business has come." Commenting on the increased personnel, he declares:

"This move will permit me to devote my time exclusively to the broader policies of our company, get better acquainted in the trade generally, and concentrate on the development of personal plans that I have not had the time to go into heretofore."

The Hodkinson Corp. in October, increased its capitalization from $800,000 to $1,800,000.

Many Houses for Chicago

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Chicago—There is talk of building the largest theater on the North side on the site of the cabaret garden formerly known as the Green Mill, but later called Montmartre. Four theaters are under way, or soon to be started, on the North Side; two are in course of construction on the South Side. Andrew Karas, owner of the Woodlawn, has plans for a new house on the South Side, and steps are being taken looking to the construction of two new loop houses in the new year.

J. J. Ruben Here

J. J. Ruben of Aurora, Ill., and a director in Mid-West Theaters, Inc., which operates houses in 11 Illinois towns, is in New York. His brother, L. M. Rubens, plans another trip to Europe in January.

Major W. R. Foran and H. A. Case are here from Glasgow with a picture showing the Mt. Everest expedition and life in India. They will go to Toronto to show the pictures and return later to arrange for exhibition in this country. Lowell Tomas, owner of the films, is due here next week.

Phillipson, Judge on Directorate

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—Percy Phillipson and Grace Judge will join the directorate of Associated First National, Ltd. to replace Sir Harold de Courcy More and Charles Cohen who have retired.

"J. C. F.," Hollywood
The editor of THE FILM DAILY wants to hear from you. Drop him a line.

Unger Re-elected

Joe Unger, First National's New York manager was re-elected president of the F. I. L. M. Club Wednesday night, despite the fact that he decided not to run because of pressure of personal business. Several members, however, persuaded him to change his mind. Other officers are W. E. Raynor, Pathe, 1st vice-president; Si Fabian, 1st Nat'l of N. J., 2nd vice-president; Louis Rosenbluh, Fox, treasurer and Arthur Abeles, Metro, secretary.

The usual installation dinner will be held at the Ritz on Jan. 5.

M. P. T. O. Names Tax Committee

The M. P. T. O. Committee of Three composed of Martin G. Smith, Fred Seegert and J. S. Phillips which was assigned the duty of appointing a committee "to arrange for the fullest co-ordination and co-operation of all forces in the industry for the purpose of securing the appeal of the admission tax," has named the following:

R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J.; Joseph Mogler, St. Louis; C. E. Whitehurst, Baltimore; E. W. Collins, Jonesboro, Ark.; Martin G. Smith, Toledo; Glenn Harper, Los Angeles; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh; M. E. Comertford, Scranton; Joseph W. Walsh, Hartford; and Sydney S. Cohen, ex-officio.

Kunsky's Plans

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—John H. Kunsky has this to say relative to long runs:

"I have no doubt but that the time will come, and is nearing, when I will be obliged to turn the Adams into a two-a-day house, at increased prices. When this is done, however, I will have already begun the erection of a theater larger, or equal in size to the Capitol."

Kunsky is already reported considering the erection of a large theater.

Buys "Lost World" Rights

"The Lost World," by Conan Doyle appears in the partial list of features First National will release in 1924. It was reported in THE FILM DAILY for Sept. 16 that the company had secured the rights. The story will be filmed by one of the company's own producing units.

Gill Going to Coast

William S. Gill, Eastern sales manager for Rothacker, will leave for the Coast today to discuss business with the executives at the Rothacker-Aller laboratory in Hollywood. He will be accompanied back to New York by E. O. Blackburn, sales manager for the Rothacker plant on the Coast.

Klein Handling New Film

Promise Payments in Full

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

St. Louis—Creditors and stock subscribers of the William Christy Cabanne M. P. Trust, Ltd., which recently was thrown into the hands of a receiver in New York, will be paid in full, according to George T. Priest, local counsel. The company had the financial backing of many prominent St. Louisans, some of whom are alleged to have failed to pay their subscriptions.

Priest stated that the receivers had signed a contract with Anderson Pictures for distribution.

At Anderson Pictures, the above so far as it concerned that company, was characterized as "premature."

Frank Elliott, in M. P. News: "One of the best pictures produced this season. A story that grips the interest at all times, boasting several fine punches and a climax that will pull the most hard-boiled fan right up to the edge of the seat. For third, the big forest fire climax has not been surpassed this year."

Louella O. Parsons, in N. Y. American: "The direction is particularly good in this picture. There is a flood, a forest fire and a number of other thrilling events. The forest fire is well done."

Dorothy Day, in N. Y. Morning Star: "Lucretia Lombard is mainly a money maker, and the Warner Bros. should be quite pleased to add it to their list. A fine screen presentation."

Clara Mather, in N. Y. World: "Lucretia Lombard is a highly sentimental, very well acted melodrama. It is cast and mounted nicely, and extremely effective."

N. Y. Evening Telegram: "Spectacular thrills follow each other uninterruptedly in this production. Amid the horrors of forest fires and turbulent flood, the drama of conflict steadily develops to a crescendo of emotions, thence rising to a whirlwind climax."

N. Y. Sun and Globe: "Irene Rich, Marc MacDermott, Norma Shearer and Monte Blue give performances that are as sincere and fine as anything seen in the films this year."

N. Y. Evening Mail: "'Lucretia Lombard' at the Strand this week is a 'sell out.' Exhibitors need have no fear for the box-office when this picture comes to their theaters."

N. Y. Evening Journal: "The narrative, as filmed, bristles with situations. Good effects in the flaming woods and raging rivers."

N. Y. Times Square Daily: "A real box-office hit. 'Lucretia Lombard' is a strong story and Jack Conway, who directed, handled the tale skilfully, getting in several touches of the sexy variety that are sure to prove of assistance at the box-office."

N. Y. Evening Post: "Queer to relate, and unusual in this day of the obvious, the production is bound to rouse many questions. Excellently played, well staged, intelligently cast, an interesting and enjoyable story which is never soporific."

Harriette Underhill, in N. Y. Tribune: "The cast is excellent. There is an ingenue who is the last word in ingenues."

Lab" Case Ready

ded Docket Prevents Commission from Reaching It—Rest Case Against Famous Players

Special to THE FILM DAILY
 Washington—The action of the Federal Trade Commission against Allied Laboratories Ass'n., Inc., New York is ready for trial but has been held up because of the large number of cases on the Commission's docket. No definite time has been set for the trial but there is a possibility that it will be reached in the near future. This is, of course, entirely dependent upon the cases now on the docket.

The Commission rested its case against Famous Players-Lasky in Los Angeles. Attorneys for Paramount now begin the introduction of evidence, starting in Jacksonville on Jan. 4 and then probably visiting New Orleans, Dallas, Atlanta and finally New York once again.

Sixty From Famous

For the Coming Year—Production Plans Outlined by Jesse L. Lasky

Famous Players production plans for the coming year were outlined briefly Friday by Jesse L. Lasky, prior to his leaving for the coast today.

"Famous Players-Lasky will produce 60 pictures for the coming year," he said. "I believe these productions will contain the largest number of real box-office attractions ever made by this company."

"The West Coast studio will open on Jan. 7 and the Eastern studio will also start activity about the same time. The West Coast will make about ten pictures to four made in Long Island City. Among our forthcoming productions will be 'Triumph' which Cecil B. De Mille will direct; 'Magnolia'

"Commandments" Opens

All of the Famous Players officials and several members of the cast of "The Ten Commandments," attended the premiere of the picture at the Cohan theater Friday night. Representative people from outside of the industry included Ben Ames Williams, Elizabeth Marbury, William Randolph Hearst and Mrs. Hearst, Sir William Wiseman, Felix Kahn, Anne Morgan and Ralph Pulitzer.

In view of the fact that the "The Ten Commandments" got under way at a time past the usual theater hour and because of the crowded condition of the Saturday editions of afternoon papers which often preclude reviews of motion pictures, newspaper opinions on the De Mille picture will appear in full in Wednesday's issue of THE FILM DAILY.

Into Its Own

In all of literature, Homer's Odyssey stands out supreme, and it was written several thousand years ago.

The artists in the architectural world find in the columns of the Parthenon of Athens, an inspiration.

The sculptor who does not rave over what remains of the Venus de Milo, armless and broken, standing in the Louvre—an inspiration—does not exist.

Countless arias written years ago, stand today, pre-eminent in the field of musical composition.

And to these great arts, ancient and glorious, profound in their depths, has been added the newest of all arts, the motion picture. That it lacks much in background, in understanding and even in appreciation is true. That it falls short of some of these other arts is true. It is newer, more robust and less splendid in many ways but it can and does move human beings as even the greatest of other arts have failed to accomplish. It reaches down into that which makes in humans for understanding and appreciation. One needs not deep, involved learning, one needs not countless hours of study to appreciate that which the motion picture provides. It from Booth Tarkington's story, and the following screen adaptations from well known plays and books: 'Tomorrow's Bread,' by Wallace Irwin; 'Feet of Clay,' by Marguerite Tuttle now running in the Pictorial Review; 'Merton of the Movies,' with Glenn Hunter; 'The Breaking Point,' by Mary Roberts Rinehart; 'The Mountebank,' by William J. Locke, a Zane Grey story, and Alfred Sutro's 'The Laughing Lady.'

"Famous Players will make no costume plays for next season with the exception of 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' work on which is expected to begin shortly with a prominent star, in the East.

"I think the greatest event of last year was the production shut-down, which resulted in a more careful consideration of the control of the cost of production. During this shut-down, however, our scenario staff and writers have been working day and night and when our studio activities resume, we will be in excellent shape so far as the preparation of material and scenarios are concerned."

In this connection Lasky announced that Ralph Block will start his duties as managing editor of the story department with headquarters in New York, effective on Monday. Julian Johnson will be editor and chief of the cutting and titling department.

As previously reported, Lasky will spend a great deal more time in the East than heretofore and during his absence from the West Coast studio, Cecil B. De Mille will be in charge.

He concluded by saying that he felt very optimistic over the outlook for the coming year, and that with the complete harmony existing between himself, Adolph Zukor and Sydney R. Kent, there was every reason to anticipate a very successful year for Famous.

Into Its Own

is the chief, and to many millions, the sole means of diversion, occupation, and amusement.

And it is to these countless millions that Cecil B. De Mille's "Ten Commandments" will appeal. It will bring into their jaded, tired lives a sermon and inspiration, and above all, entertainment. And in years to come, when its value to the theater has diminished, there will still remain for the Biblical episode a lifetime of useful service. Countless thousands of children in their Sunday schools and churches will learn the story of the Exodus and appreciate the value of the immemorial tablets then bestowed, with a truer and better understanding than any preachment or any Biblical lesson can give them.

For many years the motion picture has been striving to reach some of the heights enjoyed by the other arts. With 1924 in sight, the motion picture, through "The Ten Commandments," steps into its own.

SOME PLANS

Lasky talked yesterday of production plans of Famous for 1924. And declared a great lesson had been learned. During this past year. When the production schedules ran riot with the bank rolls. Although he didn't say it just that way. But he pointed out that a great lesson had been learned; that productions for the coming year would be planned and developed with the preparation of the scenario; that "fool proof" scenarios would be the order of the day; that more time would be spent in preparation. And this is important. Because this is where the real saving can be accomplished.

Famous will make 60 for the coming year. Not as many as had been expected in view of what happened in the sales department this season.

THE HODKINSON MOVE

Surprised a lot of people. Who could not understand what magic F. C. Munroe used. To get Flinn from Famous and Mooney from Mayer. But he did. And the spirit of the new organization was excellently reflected at a luncheon he gave yesterday. To acquaint the trade paper publishers with the trio who will hereafter govern the Hodkinson organization.

For a man who has been in pictures but a year or so Munroe has managed to dig up and secure two mighty worth-while men. They are still stunned in Famous trying to figure how Flinn was taken away. He has been a mainstay there for 10 years.

THE SEASON'S SPIRIT

Everybody is sending—and receiving—Xmas cards these days. Fine idea. So Hugo Ballin sent one in. To show the sort of "bonus boys" he has encountered in his various travels while making pictures on his own. They are presented herewith for your edification and delight.

Arnold Now Owns Lyric

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Vincennes, Ind.—Herman J. Arnold, who has been managing the Lyric for the corporation which took over the Wilkerson-Lyons chain, has closed a deal whereby he becomes proprietor.

Two In Detroit Change Hands

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Detroit—Two local theaters have changed hands. Troost & Troost have bought the Theatorium from Garland & Buehrer, while L. J. Small has leased the Medbury from R. M. Robbins.

Tax Decides Ratio

Jenkins says the old method was to take the censor reports, and to figure the percentage of each territory to the whole; but this, he holds, is faulty because no count was taken of the two millions in transient population in New York, or the fact that in certain sections, 50% of the population is not eligible for theater admissions.

Jenkins advances the theory that the amount collected by the Government from the different territories tax gives a true indication of the relative amusement possibilities of the territories. "One of the troubles of the state right business," he says, "has been that the producers formulate the rules by which the game is played and that the exchangemen, unorganized and without a leader, have of necessity had to play the game according to the producers' rules. The territory in the South and West has always been considered poor territory and one of the reasons for considering it such is that producers could not secure for their films the percentage which they had charged against that territory."

What is perhaps the outstanding difference between this table and some of the others exists in only two territories, that of New York and California.

THE WASHINGTON POST

Since Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" which for eight years has remained untouched for popularity and number of showings, there had been no motion picture dealing strictly and authentically with American history on an elaborate scale until "The Covered Wagon" appeared, to prove anew the tremendous appeal of actual human experience when it is used for screen material.

Now, however, has come a third pre-eminent American historical drama in Charles Ray's "The Courtship of Myles Standish," which not only vivifies the immortal characters of Longfellow's epic, but also spans the great adventure of the Pilgrim fathers. The film is the current attraction, and Mr. F

"The Acquittal"—Universal Eastman, Rochester

DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE—The fact is obvious that a screen version of any one of them will likewise fall short of the perfect piece of stage technique. However, "The Acquittal" will appeal as an entertaining photoplay of its kind with a good cast to make it realistic.

HERALD—At any rate it is a genuine mystery and a picture well worth seeing for those who are attracted to mystery plays.

The whole picture is well produced and photographed, a court room scene being reproduced with unusual veracity.

— Merry Xmas —

"Ashes of Vengeance"—1st Nat'l Pershing, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—It is Norma Talmadge's newest and most ambitious effort, "Ashes of Vengeance," a thing that is splendidly produced and enacted.

POST DISPATCH—Elaborate settings, picturesque costumes and a story and, above all, Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle in the roles of romantic lovers are the strong points of recommendation.

STAR—One of the most interesting of the recent crop of period pictures.

TIMES—It is splendidly produced and acted—a brave story, bravely done. While the photoplay is not in the class of "Scaramouche," in breadth of interest and conception, it is excellent entertainment.

— Merry Xmas —

"Big Brother"—F. P.-L. Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—"Big Brother" is an underworld melodrama. The picture opens with "Cokey Joe," played customarily fine by Raymond Hatton.

Other than this overdose of sentimentalism and considerable hokum now and then, "Big Brother" is good stuff. That's not a back-handed slap, it's entertaining.

PRESS—Tom Moore has twinkling eyes and a likable smile. He knows how to act.

The boy in the film is likewise good. Mickey Bennett is his name. He plays the role well.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Call of the Canyon"—F. P.-L. Metropolitan, Los Angeles

(Week Ending Dec. 15)

HERALD—Poignant heart throbs permeate "The Call of the Canyon." Some of the photography is sublime.

RECORD—Incredulous as is his story, "The Call of the Canyon" is really done in the filming. This is credit to Victor Fleming, whose direction makes the very most out of a poor story.

TIMES—The picture is worth waiting for, because it discloses a vista of enchanting mountain scenery, and more than that it is not so filled with prop fights as most of the Grey pictures.

I am rather inclined to believe that the direction of Victor Fleming had considerable to do with adding a note of real quality to the picture.

Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Not only is it the best Zane Grey picture of the year, but it can be ranked as one of the foremost screen achievements of the season.

POST DISPATCH—It is as dramatic, appealing and thrilling as anything that ever came from the pen of its author, Zane Grey.

STAR—It has more emotional pull than any other picture shown here in many a month. The kick in the final footage is a wow, is sentimental hokum, at times brought on to sentimentality, but real people are sentimental and guilty of sentimentality at times.

TIMES—Here is an interesting photoplay, with all the ingredients for good entertainment spoiled by an idiotic ending that verges on melodrama of the old, old type.

"The Call of the Wild"—Universal Rialto, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—An excellent adaptation to the screen for Pathe by Hal Roach. It is a far cry from comedy to drama, but Roach has made it.

— Merry Xmas —

"Cameo Kirby"—Fox Apollo, Indianapolis

STAR—"Cameo Kirby" is an old-fashioned melodrama in which the chief keynote is the traditional defense of honor. Fox has provided the story with a colorful atmosphere and the cast is made up of some first-rate actors.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Darling of New York"—Universal New, Baltimore

SUN (EVENING)—It fits her (Baby Peggy) very nicely. While the thing has, of course, certain obvious limitations, it is far better as an entertainment than the latest Jackie Coogan picture to visit us. For one thing it isn't so long, so stretched out, and its action is swifter, although just as obvious.

— Merry Xmas —

"Drifting"—Universal Victoria, Philadelphia

INQUIRER—Miss Dean rather overdressed the part in some instances. Still the picture is replete with stirring incidents and a romance.

NORTH AMERICAN—The attack on the hero and heroine by mountain bandits being the outstanding event. This is excellently done, creating all of the excitement and suspense intended.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—The story itself is not exceptional for its novelty or originality but it has excellent entertainment qualities nevertheless.

Priscilla Dean has some very effective scenes.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Drivin' Fool"—Hodkinson Merrill, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—A high speed comedy drama that is reminiscent of the series of automobile stories made for the screen by the late Wally Reid.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Eternal Struggle"—Metro Strand, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—There is always a strong family resemblance between pictures dealing with the Northwest Mounted police but, thanks to clever acting and skillful staging, "The Eternal Struggle" will rivet the spectators' attention.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Fair Cheat"—F. B. O. Parkway, Baltimore

AMERICAN—This narrative is adequately acted by Dorothy Mackaill, Edmund Breese and Wilfried Lytell.

— Merry Xmas —

"Fashion Row"—Metro McVicker's, Chicago

HERALD EXAMINER—A much more colorful and interesting role than is her custom. In "Fashion Row" she has made a good picture.

JOURNAL—The story, however, is not the thing. It is colorful entertainment, as intoxicating as synthetic gin, and as paralyzing to cold judgment.

NEWS—It is the first of the Mae Murray productions to give us a suspicion that if she chose to go in for character acting she could hold her own with several other film birds.

TRIBUNE—Mae Murray is to be congratulated on this film. There's plot to it and she has seen the light and really ACTS at times. Lots of times. The Murray fans have a treat in store for them.

"The Green Goddess"—Gold-Cosmop. Garrick, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—A picture worth seeing. It is a faithful and sincere attempt to translate William Archer's melodrama in terms of the screen. It succeeds.

STAR—Mr. Arliss is the predominating thing about "The Green Goddess," notwithstanding certain shortcomings displayed in direction of the film itself.

As for the story production the chief, if not the only, dereliction is the tedium forced upon the spectator before he arrives at the essential points of the plot.

— Merry Xmas —

"Held to Answer"—Metro Palace, Washington

STAR—When House Peters is announced as the star of a film drama one expects something good, and expectations are realized.

— Merry Xmas —

"Jealous Husbands"—1st Nat'l Madison, Detroit

FREE PRESS—It is somewhat melodramatic in character, with occasional flashes of real drama, capably acted throughout and produced on a scale that is characteristic of the French director.

— Merry Xmas —

"A Lady of Quality"—Universal Alhambra, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—A picture which has at once dramatic punch and pictorial appeal.

Miss Valli is simply adorable in the early episodes as a boy and puts dramatic fervor into the later dramatic moments.

"A Lady of Quality" is worthy of its title as super-Jewel.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Light That Failed"—F. P.-L. Newman, Kansas City

POST—Jacqueline Logan has brains. In her mere appearance at the Newman this week it is manifested.

The picture, however, on the whole, is interesting and in it is a supporting cast of merit.

— Merry Xmas —

"Mile-A-Minute-Romeo"—Fox Liberty, Chicago

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—The ingenious plot complications, breathless action and the expected number of thrills which Mix offers, makes the picture story one of considerable interest.

STAR—The picture frankly states that it is one of the "wide open spaces where men are men," and backs up the claim with men quick to resent insult but quicker on the trigger.

TIMES—Tom Mix makes a gallant and forceful lover from start to finish this is a typical Western, and garb, atmosphere, conversation and situations.

— Merry Xmas —

"Modern Matrimony"—Selznick State-Lake Chicago

AMERICAN—It manages to pass muster as entertainment which, although nothing to write to the White House about, impresses as being rather good fun.

Victor Heerman's neat direction is partly responsible and a noteworthy cast.

POST—It keeps you laughing all the while. Created to amuse and furnish you with diverting light entertainment it fulfills its mission.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Net"—Fox Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—Here's a story excellently directed, the characters convincingly delineated, and the scenes effectively decorated.

Monroe, Chicago

JOURNAL—One of those mighty serious photodramas, with Barbara Castleton crumpling into worse and worse dismay, terror, dejection and final desperation in almost every reel.

POST—Thus is built "The Net," on heavy melodramatic lines, with much emotional acting, and many interesting complications.

— Merry Xmas —

"Our Hospitality"—Metro State, Los Angeles

(Week Ending Dec. 15)

EXAMINER—Buster Keaton has some of the funniest and most whimsical comedy ever seen. The rope episode especially deserves a whole feature picture to itself.

The comedy, however, is replete with situations which tax the risibilities of the spectator.

EXPRESS—He chalks up the greatest success of his career a bit of travesty upon the history of American railroads that ranks as one of the funniest episodes the camera has ever recorded.

RECORD—Buster Keaton is at his funniest.

The ride to the estate on the railroad is a real scream.

The river stuff is also a comedy gem, although it is so well done that he becomes dramatic.

TIMES—"Our Hospitality" is perfectly delicious. It is a rollicking "Romeo and Juliet." Satire seems to be the thing nowadays, and this one, written by Jean Havez, has a fresh angle.

Stanley, Philadelphia

INQUIRER—His latest screen production is so refreshing, coming as it did after "Three Ages," and there is something charming in the manner the young screen star portrays a most difficult part.

NORTH AMERICAN—The keen humor and originality of the Keaton brain begins to flash, and from near the beginning events move rapidly and hilariously until a smashing climax at the end.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—He (Keaton) should be commended for attempting a picture so different from the usual order of search comedies. There is an abundance of authentic atmosphere in "Our Hospitality," and there are many ingenious effects which provoke mirth.

— Merry Xmas —

"Paddy-The-Next-Best-Thing"—Allied Ohio, Indianapolis

STAR—The finest production that any English company has sent to this country. British films, as a rule, are stupid and dull, but this particular picture deserves more than passing attention.

— Merry Xmas —

"Pioneer Trails"—Vitagraph Strand, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—"Pioneer Trails" started out to be an imitation of "The Covered Wagon" and then wandered into the mystery game. There are sufficiently stirring scenes and the whole thing has enough excitement to make it a satisfactory bill.

STAR—It is a laudable production. It is smooth, easy to watch, and has the dramatic quality which makes the spectator sit with the muscles in his lower jaw tensed.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Printer's Devil"—Warner's Garden, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—By all calculations should be a comedy knock out. But somehow it managed to miss the high water mark and is only a mildly amusing piece of entertainment, saved solely by the ability of the three above mentioned players.

— Merry Xmas —

"Reno"—Gold-Cosmop. The Chicago, Chicago

AMERICAN—For "Reno" proves to be entertainment of wide appeal. It has a story of no mean calibre, presented with telling effect and, moreover, it has a novelty in connection with its informal galloping over the United States which attracts.

HERALD EXAMINER His picture is a sort of satirical revue and it presents two sides of its subject. * * * You will find "Reno" always different and never dull.

NEWS * * * a smart, satirical expose of divorce laws, shrewd and hard hitting so long as it sticks to its subject, exciting but improbable when Mr. Hughes inserts "thriller" action to make his picture "go" in the small town.

POST Diverting, enlightening and wholly enjoyable is this travesty on divorce. Merry and cynical, it is a three-quarters fun and one-quarter serious burlesque of the laws.

California, Los Angeles

EXAMINER The film is really amusing in its complications and some of the vagaries of the divorce code * * * make for amazing situations. * * * the players themselves make the story improbable, although its delightful satire is well placed throughout.

EXPRESS Bitter is the quality of its humor, cynical to a high degree. * * * It is a stinging invective uttered against the inadequacy of divorce laws. * * * It has not one scintilla of spiritual significance.

HERALD * * * he has included most of the other recognized appointments of motion picture making.

The cast is unusually brilliant. * * * It being an unusual picture, there is a sense of disappointment at the conventional finish.

RECORD—Judged as a photodrama, Hughes has produced simply a hectic modern melo, without particular artistic or dramatic distinction.

TIMES—"Reno" is sketchy and lacks the stimulus of a strong climax, for Hughes resorts to the old melodrama to do away with his most troublesome character. * * * Dramatically, the film lacks big punch and sometimes too the forceful development of situations, but the timely note will make it interesting to everybody.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Shepherd King"—Fox
Fox's Philadelphia

INQUIRER—* * * a spectacular picture with some popular appeal. * * * great care has been taken to have realistic settings. "The Shepherd King" is slow in action and is unconvincing. Even the actors seem to wonder what it is all about.

NORTH AMERICAN—The natural backgrounds are both beautiful and impressive and interesting from the mere standpoint of unfamiliar lands. The director was J. Gordon Edwards, to whom great credit is due for a number of artistic touches, and particularly his management of the crowds.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—"The Shepherd King" is an elaborately-staged, spectacular drama, well directed, but acted without distinction.

— Merry Xmas —

Shifting Sands"—Hodkinson
Hennepin-Orpheum, Minneapolis

STAR—* * * has a strong plot, a story filled with bedouins and a new breed of sheik. One of the best things about the picture is the truthfulness of its setting in Tripoli and the Libyan desert.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Silent Command"—Fox
Regent, Rochester

DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE—If it were not for a long-drawn-out preliminary to the action proper of the story itself, the photoplay might easily rank with the best screen plays of the year. Even with this regrettable feature, the production is far above the commonplace.

HERALD—It is melodrama of the "East Lynn" type, mixed up with a lot of educational features. * * * drama, it is poorly written and more than poorly acted.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Steadfast Heart"—Gold-Cosmo.
King's St. Louis

GLOBE DEMOCRAT—One of the most appealing and all around attractive pictures of the current season. * * * Never before has anyone come so near catching Mark Twain's spirit of boyhood immortalized by Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn as the producers have in this photoplay.

POST-DISPATCH—Clever acting by juvenile movie stars in the earlier episodes add greatly to the interest. * * *

STAR—The film is only so-so. * * *

TIMES—An acceptable story, given life and substance by the acting of a new child star, with all the tried and true elements of the successful photo play. * * * It is a simple tale, well acted, along conventional lines. * * *

— Merry Xmas —

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L.
Columbia, Washington

STAR The fine settings provide the richly costumed actors with massive backgrounds.

— Merry Xmas —

"Stepping Fast"—Fox
Piccadilly, Rochester

DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE—Tom steps along a little more than usual in this story, which is as obvious as it is improbable.

HERALD As a break from the regulation feature films, the usual movie dramas, Tom Mix is delightful.

"Stepping Fast" is certainly a wild tale. * * * genuinely good. It makes no pretensions to anything other than it is, and any movie fan knows what Tom Mix is. It is a picture well worth the seeing. * * *

— Merry Xmas —

"Temporary Marriage"—Principal
Liberty, Kansas City

POST It is in this trial and its outcome that the story gets out of the trite class and becomes a really good photoplay. * * *

Miss Davis is of course, poignantly appealing as the daughter.

Clune's Broadway, L. A.

(Week Ending Dec. 15)

EXPRESS—The acting of all players is well above the average. So much so that it lifts a somewhat banal story into the realms of the interesting.

TIMES—In her first serious role Mildred is wise in attempting nothing too heavy. * * * This is an entertaining story, even if in spots, out of the good old barrel. You know pretty well what is going to happen.

— Merry Xmas —

"Thundergate"—1st Nat'l Metropolitan, Wash.

STAR—"Thundergate" is the name of a palace stronghold of the old monarchy, and it has been reproduced for the camera with such artistry that the settings would take precedence over the thread of story were the latter not exceptionally interesting.

— Merry Xmas —

"To the Ladies"—F. P.-L.
Royal, Kansas City

POST—Helen Jerome Eddy, as the wife of the manager, carries a large part of the picture on her shoulders. Edward Horton, the manager, burlesques his part too much.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Virginian"—Preferred
Mission, Los Angeles

(Week Ending Dec. 15)

EXAMINER—From that standpoint (the western story) "The Virginian" is always a welcome film, and will undoubtedly win high favor in its new settings. Aside from the remarkable photography, however, the story itself adds little to earlier "Westerns" nor does it enhance in any particular degree the status of Harlan on the screen. He plays with a reserve which is almost stoic.

EXPRESS—* * * Producer Schulberg has a photoplay of which to be proud. It is by far the best work he has presented as yet, handled in a broad and virile manner. It retains the more delicate qualities of the novel and the drama, with the added sweep and strength that the great mountain stretches and plains of Wyoming under the camera's eye also could give.

HERALD—The adapters * * * have followed closely and faithfully the Wister novel and the dramatic play. * * * All the thrills of the original have been retained, with new ones added. Few screen plays hold the suspense that "The Virginian" does. The grandeur of the settings, revealing the picturesque western plains, are portraits that will cling to the memory for a long time.

RECORD—It's great melo of its kind, and well acted with Kenneth Harlan in the sort of part one expects only of Bill Hart. * * *

The picture is well directed, but there's two reels too much of it in the middle.

TIMES—The production is certainly well above the average western in interest. That much is to be said in its favor.

"The Virginian" is best in the acting, with Miss Vidor coming the nearest to being the star. Kenneth Harlan has never done any role better than The Virginian, and it is a relief to see him get into the cowboy outfit. * * * In fact, it is a very good feature, because it has a tremendous lot of fascinating situations and scenery.

— Merry Xmas —

"Wild Bill Hickok"—F. P.-L.
State, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—* * * is too long. That's the only real criticism against it. However, if you care at all for Wild Bill Hart's holster full of tricks you'll like "Wild Bill Hickok."

PRESS—It's a good movie of its sort. But if Wild Bill could see the picture it might well make him wilder yet. One can never tell, tho. He might be as well pleased as surprised to see what spiritual qualities are ascribed to him by Bill Hart.

Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—* * * Hart * * * has not only retained all his old gun-juggling tricks, but added a lot of new ones to his repertoire. "Wild Bill Hickok" has more atmosphere than any western picture ever produced.

— Merry Xmas —

"The Woman in Chains"—S. R.
Colonial, Indianapolis

STAR—* * * shows the first Mrs. Valentino to be a woman of some beauty and her performance in this Edward Owings Towne story, while not brilliant, is at least in good taste.

— Merry Xmas —

"Woman Proof"—F. P.-L.
Circle, Indianapolis

STAR—Tommy is as assuming as ever and Lila Lee is exceptionally charming. * * *

— Merry Xmas —

"Woman to Woman"—Selznick
Rialto, Washington

STAR—The plot of "Woman to Woman" is so old in both theme and treatment that one can almost see the moth holes in it, yet Miss Compton gives her very best and tries by a characterization portraying the entire gamut of human emotions in facial expression to redeem the uninteresting tale.

— Merry Xmas —

"Zaza"—F. P.-L.
State, Minneapolis

JOURNAL—The "Zaza" story has been brought up to date and it has not suffered. Miss Swanson does Zaza far better than anything she has offered before on the screen, playing with an unrestraint and an attention to detail that make her portrayal a vital, vibrant impersonation.

STAR—Gloria Swanson as "Zaza," a popular French actress, displays her vivacity and versatility, while H. B. Warner, * * * has a powerful part.

— Merry Xmas —

Walsh as "Ben Hur"

As intimated some weeks ago from the coast, George Walsh will play the title role in "Ben Hur." Gertrude Olmstead will play the part of Esther and Kathlyn Key, that of Tizrah. H. E. Edington of the production department sails for Italy shortly to be followed later by June Mathis and several of the technical staff.

Dustin Farnum in "The Grail"

Fox

As a Whole....WESTERN DRAMA; STORY IS A BIT DIFFERENT FROM THE USUAL RUN; GIVES FARNUM ROLE THAT HE DOES VERY WELL. DIRECTOR HAS NOT ALWAYS MADE SITUATIONS CONVINCING.

Star.....Plays the part of a Texas Ranger sent to capture a young murderer. Farnum is more conservative in his emotional acting and appears much more convincing and pleasing by playing these scenes in moderation.

Cast.....Jack Rollins overacts considerably. Peggy Shaw and Alma Bennett suitable and others Carl Stockdale, Frances Raymond, Frances Hatton, Leon Barry.

Type of Story.....Western drama. Here's a story that's not especially new and yet it has enough good twists to make it sufficiently different from the usual run of westerns and prove interesting. Instead of the ranger going forth loaded with guns to fight an army of rustlers you have hero setting out after his man by impersonating a Bible seller. How he ropes in his man by enticing him out of his hiding place by pretending to preach about the goodness of God, and brings about justice, is followed by a romantic twist in which hero finds happiness with the minister's daughter. A not altogether pleasant twist, however, is that in which the murderer's sister kills herself after being betrayed by the villain. But there are enough good points in the theme to offset this unfavorable one.

Box Office Angle....Will give average satisfaction. A suitable number for the house catering to a typical "fan" crowd audience.

Exploitation.....Here's a title that you may have to give some explanation. It may suggest to them, a story of the crusaders so you might make it clear in catchlines such as: "You are familiar with the Texas Ranger who goes out armed to "get" his man. Dustin Farnum will show you a new way of capturing a fugitive in his latest production 'The Grail,' at the blank theater." Have a man dressed as a ranger riding about town advertising the showing. If you care to exploit the film further you might run teaser ads offering a reward for the capture of John Trammel. Then announce that the reward goes to Dustin Farnum, mentioning the showing date, etc.

Direction...Colin Campbell; sustains interest very well and increases suspense; occasionally not convincing.

Author.....George Scarborough
Scenario.....Charles Kenton
Cameraman.....Jos. Brotherton
Photography.....Good
Locale.....The West
Length.....5,000 feet.

"The Man Life Passed By"

Metro

As a Whole.....PUBLIC WILL PROBABLY LIKE IT WELL ENOUGH; HAS CERTAIN AMOUNT OF AUDIENCE APPEAL AND A FIRST RATE CAST THAT HELPS STORY IMMENSELY.

Cast....Percy Marmont gives an unusually forceful and interesting performance; Hobart Bosworth splendid as unscrupulous millionaire; Jane and Eva Novak make a fine sister team with a sufficient resemblance to each other to make their parts in the story convincing. Cullen Landis fairly well suited.

Type of Story.....Drama. On the whole a conventional theme but the development contains some fairly new angles and with a careful treatment, it turns out to be a rather satisfying film, one that will likely prove pleasing to the average picture goer. Director Schertzing has injected considerable audience appeal and provided a well sustained interest throughout. He is inclined to hold scenes a bit too long, especially the close-ups of Percy Marmont where he occasionally overdoes his emotional scenes. The theme has to do with a rich man who steals the invention of hero, amasses a fortune through it while his victim sinks to the lowest levels, finally meeting the millionaire's daughter, who runs a mission, against her father's wishes. The girl's influence upon him is the means of preventing him from carrying out his revenge upon the man who ruined him and eventually, through rather interesting channels, the story reaches a happy closing.

Box Office Angle....Contains situations and elements of appeal that should make it attractive for the majority of your patrons. Story holds the interest nicely and there is an exceptionally good cast.

Exploitation.....Here's a title that may need explanation. It's a bit ambiguous of itself. Say that the story deals with a young inventor whose patent is stolen by another who gains a fortune by it. There is a romantic angle that will appeal to many, as well. Talk particularly about the strong cast, mentioning the splendid performance of Percy Marmont, the joint appearance of Jane and Eva Novak, Hobart Bosworth, George Seigman and Cullen Landis. All good names for you to use. Catchlines might read: "Do you believe in Fate? See 'The Man Life Passed By' if you do."

Direction.....Victor Schertzing; careful direction certainly helps put over conventional story.

"The Call of The Canyon"

Paramount

As a Whole....MORE JAZZ ENTERTAINMENT; HAS SOME TYPICAL ZANE GREY ATMOSPHERE BUT MAJORITY OF IT IS NOT WHAT THEY USUALLY ASSOCIATE WITH HIS NAME.

Cast.....Good except that Richard Dix has had much better things to do than the gassed war hero of "The Call of the Canyon." Lois Wilson handles the hole of the jazz girl nicely although she doesn't seem to make her characterization quite clear. Marjorie Daw pleasing but hasn't a very big part. Noah Beery just put in to supply a villainous touch.

Type of Story....Your folks may expect something more strictly western than "The Call of the Canyon" and the title itself really promises it. But what they'll see will be a picture dealing with the modern girl and her craze for jazz, dice and dancing. True, the story gets westward the close, in time to introduce a climax with a good thrill, that of a sand storm, but, on the whole, the theme deals with Carley Burch's love for a jazz life and the crowd that she steps around with. Of course it's all too much for a conservative, recently returned war hero whose absence "over there" is the cause for his chagrin and disappointment in Carley, his pre-war fiancée. You do think, however, that Carley will marry hero when she travels West after him but the jazz hounds follow, bring Carley back with them, leaving hero free to marry the little western girl who nursed him back to health.

Box Office Angle....Very likely the majority of your folks will like it. Those who come in expecting a typical exciting Zane Grey western thriller may be disappointed.

Exploitation.....Use the author's name prominently in your advertisements. One attractive poster reads: "Zane Grey's 'The Call of the Canyon'; jazz mad New York and the rugged West, frivolous society and the mighty realities of Nature—this Zane Grey story shows both." Use a trailer showing some of the sand storm scenes. Of the players use the names of Marjorie Daw, Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery, recalling the appearance of Dix and Miss Wilson in another recent Zane Grey picture, "To the Last Man."

Direction.....Victor Fleming; provided splendid production and injected plenty of the sort of atmosphere that public likes; picture runs too long.

Author.....Zane Grey
Scenario.....Doris Schroeder and Edfrid Bingham

Cameraman.....James Howe
Photography.....Very good
Locale....New York and Arizona
Length.....6,993 feet.

"Lucretia Lombard"

Warner Bros.

As a Whole.....WELL ACTED AND SPLENDIDLY PRODUCED DRAMATIC OFFERING WITH EFFECTIVE FORESIGHT FIRE CLIMAX. A LITTLE OVERDONE ON THE SENTIMENTAL ANGLE AND CONSIDERABLY TOO LONG.

Cast...Irene Rich and Norma Shearer share the acting honors. Both give exceptionally worth while performances and handle variety of moods called for excellently. It is not their fault that they are over-weepy at times. The director has been too keen on close-ups and stickiness on prolonging them. Norma Shearer very beautiful in some shots and Irene Rich seems able to change her expressions to suit the occasions. She can be attractive, haughty, etc., to fit the moment. Monte Blue fills the bill in the hero role but there are others who might have done it better.

Type of Story.....Drama in which three people are involved in a great love. Lucretia, the widow of Allen Lombard, finds her first real love in Steve Winship, a promising young district attorney, and learns he loves her but there is an obstacle to their happiness. Steve has previously and unwittingly become engaged to his father's ward, pretty Mimi. The elder Winship, a minister, fearing he will die as a result of an injury, requests Steve and Mimi to marry. A forest fire serves neatly as a solution to the triangle with Mimi making her exit after heroic attempts of both Steve and Lucretia to save her. Kathleen Norris, novel attained considerable fame and probably the picture will meet with the approval of picture patrons, but it will be largely due to the work of Director Conway and a good cast.

Box Office Angle.....Good from a standpoint of direction and acting. If these good points will excuse a fairly commonplace theme, you can depend upon it getting over. The forest fire climax is really a good thrill.

Exploitation.....Your women folks will like the love story business in this. The weepy Lucretia who is cheated of love for seven reels but finally is rewarded in the last half reel, will gain their sympathy and the pretty and vivacious young girl, the third party to the triangle, will interest them also. Talk about the forest fire climax if you want to get the action lovers interested. Play up the author's name and ask your local book dealers to display.

Direction....Jack Conway; good, on the whole, but picture, like most of the current releases, runs too long.

Scenario.....Sada Cowan
Cameraman.....David Abel

Herbert Rawlinson in "His Mystery Girl"

Universal

As a Whole... TYPICAL RAWLINSON ENTERTAINMENT. GIVES STAR PLENTY OF OPPORTUNITIES TO DISPLAY HIS VARIOUS PET OVERACTING BITS. STORY A LITTLE BETTER THAN WHAT HE USUALLY HAS BUT HE STILL NEEDS BETTER MATERIAL AND MORE COMPETENT DIRECTION

Cast... Will probably satisfy his admirers. Has a chance, toward the close, to show what he can do at fighting. Otherwise hasn't a great deal to do in his latest role. Direction... Haven't very important parts to fill. Ralph McCullough and Ruth Dwyer the principals in a plot to reform Rawlinson, a woman-hater.

Type of Story... A fairly old idea made over with a touch of mystery atmosphere that helps, in a measure, to make it a little different. The woman-hater who eventually "falls," is a familiar characterization but probably the angle of having the plot made to order and bringing about his reformation through a paid theatrical troupe who rope her into their scheme to make him "fall" is new enough to make "His Mystery Girl" rather interesting, and at that, a story somewhat better than Rawlinson's recent vehicles. The star could still stand better material and more careful direction. He is allowed to overact to the point of its being comical. The theme deals with efforts of man's rother to cure him of being a woman-hater, by means of an elaborate scheme in which he is roped into assisting a presumably frantic woman who pretends that she is in great trouble. The idea is worked out with hero's landing in a house of spooks and saving the girl, followed by his marriage to the girl who helped to "cure" him.

Box Office Angle... An average feature that you can probably play without creating much excitement either for or against it. If you know that Rawlinson is popular and that his pictures usually go well, you can figure this one out pretty well for yourself.

Exploitation... Universal's press sheet suggests a good idea. Secure a window display in some shop selling various articles of women's apparel. Have a sign reading: "All these belong to 'His Mystery Girl.' Who is she? See for yourself at the blank theater." Play up the title further by having a girl going about distributing throw-aways reading: "I'm 'His Mystery Girl.' Whose? Follow me to the blank theater." A trailer of the spook house sequence will get them interested.

Direction... Robt. Hill; handles material fairly well but allows star to do much overacting.

"The Old Fool"

Hodkinson

As a Whole... MAJORITY OF AUDIENCES WILL PROBABLY FIND THIS GOOD ENTERTAINMENT; CONTAINS NICE CAST, PATHOS, HUMOR AND HUMAN INTEREST TOUCHES.

Cast... James Barrows in the title role gives a remarkably good performance as the old Confederate soldier; Lloyd Hughes a satisfying young hero, with Betty Francisco playing opposite. Others include Louise Fazenda, Jimmy Mason, Barbara Tenant, Monte Collins.

Type of Story... Has as its leading character, an old civil war veteran whose family, with the exception of one grandson, consider him a burden and a nuisance. Some of the incidents portraying this are extremely touching. How he is finally taken away to Texas by the grandson who loves him, and how after several complications he is the means of capturing one of his own grandsons who is a member of a band of gun smugglers, forms the rest of the story which is embellished by humorous incidents and a romance between the grandson and his employer's daughter. There is a first-rate fight near the finish that will please excitement lovers.

While there is nothing exceptionally new in the whole idea the average audience will probably find "The Old Fool" generally satisfactory entertainment. James Barrows' work is the outstanding feature.

Box Office Angle... Where they prefer a human interest story, lavishly touched with pathos, in preference to an expensive and elaborate production, this should fit the bill nicely for you. This time it is poor old granddad who is mistreated instead of the little grey-haired mother, but the effect is the same.

Exploitation... The good cast, headed by James Barrows who although his name is not known to picture fans, will be hereafter, is probably your best talking point. Give them an idea of the story by means of catchlines and heralds. You might also use a lobby display of the cast together with stills from the picture. The title itself doesn't mean very much so you'll have to interest them in some other way.

Run a trailer showing any of the humorous bits between Louise Fazenda and O. V. Harrison or any of the scenes between the two old soldiers.

An exploitation stunt would be to have several old men, actually old or made up to look so, parade the streets with fool caps on their heads on which is the inscription: "The Old Fool"—now at the blank theater.

Direction... E. D. Venturini; handled the material well.

Author... J. C. Fabbrini

"The Marriage Market"

C. B. C. Film Sales Corp.—St. R'ts

As a Whole HAS GOOD AMOUNT OF AUDIENCE APPEAL. ON THE ORDER OF RECENT FLAPPER STORIES WITH KIND OF ATMOSPHERE AND SITUATIONS THAT THE PUBLIC SEEMS TO FAVOR.

Cast... Pauline Garon a brilliant addition to the picture. She's pretty, peppy, and makes herself thoroughly likeable. First rate company all the way through. Includes Mayme Kelso, Jean de Briac, Vera Lewis, Marc Robbins, Alice Lake, Shannon Day, Jack Mulhall and Willard Louis.

Type of Story... A young girl's desire for romance and adventure provides amusing complications that will suffice to interest a large majority of the picture going public. They're all more or less enthused over the current flapper rage and doubtless will find the antics of Pauline Garon quite enjoyable. Her masquerade, in which she secures the sympathy of a young writer by telling him she escaped from a reformatory, with suggestions on the side that men have been her ruination, takes a more serious, but still amusing turn, when she finds herself being roped into a marriage with a rich old fellow. Naturally it wouldn't be good audience business to let that happen, so the pretty young thing is happily married to Mr. Writer.

Director Le Saint has injected many effective touches and made good use of the material. He allows the picture to run a bit long, but cutting can speed it up sufficiently.

Box Office Angle... Capable of satisfying most of your folks, and will go particularly well if you have found that the recent flapper-dealing stories have met with their approval.

Exploitation... Get them interested in Pauline Garon and her performance in this. They'll like her work a lot. She has considerable personality and radiates with flapper mannerisms. Your own flapper delegation might be appealed to particularly.

It might be advisable to make it clear that "The Marriage Market" is not a sex theme. It's wholesome, good entertainment that you can show to all hands. In connection with the theme, say: "Girls, do you crave romance and adventure? If you'd know how to satisfy your desires see 'The Marriage Market' at the blank theater. Let Pauline Garon give you a hint how to do it." Show a trailer of heroine's midnight auto ride and you can promise some more exciting adventures. Mention others in the cast and use stills in the lobby.

Direction... Edward J. Le Saint; supplied story with attractive production and cast that fits nicely.

"The Governor's Lady"

Fox

As a Whole... GOOD DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT AND INTERESTING STORY THAT WOULD BE MUCH BETTER IF THEY TOOK LESS TIME TO TELL IT. NEEDS CUTTING TO SPEED UP SLOW SPOTS.

Cast... Splendidly suited types and capable performers. Robert T. Haines excellent as the miner who later becomes Governor. A great improvement over his work in "Does It Pay." Jane Grey a sympathetic old fashioned wife. Ann Luther satisfactory as the "other woman." Frazer Coulter and Leslie Austen have minor roles.

Type of Story... Not wholly new but a triangle theme that has some strong dramatic situations, fine sympathetic interest and enough new angles to make it quite interesting material. The opening reels are especially absorbing and get the story off to a fine start. Later on, with the introduction of the "other woman" the development becomes rather obvious and through an overdose of detail, a trifle draggy. There is too much deliberation and delay in bringing about the eventual separation of the Governor and his old fashioned wife. Since it is more or less plain to the spectator just what will transpire, the interest lags with the delay in arriving at the situation. Cutting will help speed up this slow spot and greatly improve the picture. It is well acted and given a satisfactory production. The Childs restaurants receive a splendid bit of publicity in the climax bringing about the reunion of the man and wife.

Box Office Angle... Properly trimmed so that it will have a better sustained interest. "The Governor's Lady," will likely prove a very satisfying box office number. It has considerable so-called audience appeal and will please a majority of the average public. You can count on the sympathetic characterization of Jane Grey to be one of its good drawing points.

Exploitation... Play up "The Governor's Lady," as an adaptation of a David Belasco stage success. Regarding the story use catchlines on the order of: "She was good enough as the miner's wife but she didn't fill the role of 'The Governor's Lady.' See how one woman lost her husband because she did not keep abreast of the times. Who was to blame? The man or the woman? Decide for yourself by seeing Fox's latest release, an adaptation of David Belasco's stage play, at the blank theater."

Direction... Harry Millarde; did considerable to make story appear different and heart interest touches are very good. Might have used less footage.

"The Veil of Happiness"Edward L. Klein Co.—Produced by Vandal Delac

As a Whole... FRENCH PRODUCTION OF STORY BY G. CLEMENCEAU. THE "TIGER" OF FRANCE; UNUSUAL PICTURE MADE ALONG ARTISTIC LINES AND WITH EFFECTIVE DRAMATIC SEQUENCES BUT HARDLY SUITABLE FOR GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT PURPOSES.

Cast... Played entirely by Chinese performers, several of them giving interesting performances, although their acting is, at times, somewhat stiff, even allowing for the customary racial pomp and ceremony.

Type of Story... A rather cynical theme in which a blind Chinese poet, in his affliction, believes that everyone and everything about him is good and kind but immediately his sight is restored, the words of a prophet are fulfilled and he sees his friends are false, his wife is faithless and his young son mimics his blindness. There are many effective human touches and effective philosophy in M. Clemenceau's story as well as a few worth while dramatic situations that are interestingly presented but it is doubtful if the general tone of the theme, the atmosphere and slow, over-precise development as well as the Oriental ceremonies, will make the picture suitable entertainment for the average American public. As a novelty, or through the fact that former Premier of France is the author, "The Veil of Happiness" may attract attention but generally speaking, exhibitors will hardly find it a suitable box office number. The settings are pretty and the photography surprisingly good. Sub-titles literally translated from the French, are difficult to grasp. They should be re-written.

Box Office Angle... You might see this one for yourself before making a decision. You may see possibilities in it since you know your audience best and are in a better position to judge whether or not it will appeal to them. If you think the novelty angle of it will interest them, you have sufficient to talk about.

Exploitation... Let them know that Clemenceau, former Premier of France, wrote the story of "The Veil of Happiness." Use the statesman's picture prominently in your announcements and mention that the entire cast is made up of Chinese players. There are no names among them to use. A trailer of some of the pretty Oriental settings might prove sufficient to interest them in the film.

Direction... E. E. Violet; much too slow in development but otherwise average.

Johnny Harron and Gloria Grey in

"The Supreme Test"

Cosmoart Prod.—State Rights

As a Whole... AMATEURISH EFFORT AT PICTURE MAKING; DISJOINTED STORY AND A POORLY PREPARED FILM GENERALLY; FAR FROM WHAT PRESENT DAY PICTURE GOERS EXPECT.

Stars... Apparently sincere in their efforts. Johnny Harron really deserving of something more worth while and Gloria Gray, though a new comer, shows promise of quite a little dramatic talent.

Cast... Dorothy Revier seems to glory in her role of "painted woman." Male members of the supporting cast appear inexperienced in the art of pantomime.

Type of Story... Crook melodrama. A poorly constructed plot dealing with the workings of a couple of crooks and their female accomplices, of the attempt of one of the men to pin the guilt of a theft on an innocent lad, followed by the eventual capture of the crook and the subsequent happiness of the innocent hero with the little blind girl whose sight is restored for the finale.

Here's a pretty amateurish picture that is far below the standard of present day attractions. The direction is bad, the continuity is jumpy and lacking entirely in sustained interest and the production cheap. They certainly curtailed expenses in this one, even to the extent of having paper flowers presented to the dancer. Even the photography is very poor.

There are numerous sub-titles, many of them quite meaningless, and often it is impossible to read them due to the light lettering against light colored decorations. Whoever is responsible for this one evidently has a lot to learn about picture production.

Box Office Angle... Not many possibilities with this one unless you cater to transient trade and don't have to worry about the calibre of entertainment that you offer. A double-feature program may be a chance to use it but your crowd is likely to kick, at that.

Exploitation... It won't do to talk much about this one. You can't make promises. If you decide to show it, merely use the title and the usual lobby display of posters and stills. Johnny Harron's is the only name that may be familiar to your audience. Exhibitors catering to regular patronage had better see the picture if at all in doubt. It is below the standard of what their folks are accustomed to. At least they'll expect good production values.

Direction... Jas. E. Bowen; shows no knowledge of box office values.

Short Subjects*"Rough Sailing"—Fox

Good as Slap-Stick Goes

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

For those who find amusement in comedies of the slap-stick variety, "Rough Sailing" will probably prove thoroughly good entertainment. It has some fairly original gags and doesn't suffer from over-repetition, a fault of most comedies of this order.

It has to do with hero's trying to board a vessel bound for the Orient. His various attempts to sneak aboard without passage offer many good laughs, ending up with his finally being yanked up with the anchor and hauled aboard. The comedy business in a harem is comical and although they resort to the ever popular throwing and dodging business for a climax, the comedy fans will likely consider it quite funny.

"A Dutch Treat"—Fox Educational
Interesting Pictures of Holland

Type of production 1 reel Educational

People of other lands pictured so realistically and authentically should be of considerable interest to those whose only glimpse of "how the other half lives" is gleaned from motion pictures. Fox's latest, "A Dutch Treat," offers many delightfully interesting views of that quaintly beautiful land of tulips. The scenes include the famous Zeyder Zea, Amsterdam, and little dyke built villages, all spick and span as are the wooden shod inhabitants. Groups of little children furnish pleasing pictorial appeal as well as the splendid scenic views. A worth while short subject.

"That Kid From Madrid, Michigan—UniversalOne of New Witwer Stories*

Type of production Story of Pugilism

This is the first of the new series of "Leather Pusher," stories being released by Universal, and judging from this one they will probably be as popular as the preceding series. The hero of these new tales, however, is Billy Sullivan, and not Reginald Denny, who, as Kid Roberts, supposedly the world's champion, has retired from the ring. His manager, played by Hayden Stevenson, is looking for a new protegee and finds him in the person of a young kid from a lumber camp, who knocks out a restaurant bouncer in a fight. There are two actual ring battles besides this fight and plenty of "kick" for excitement lovers. There is no girl in this episode. The titles have the H. C. Witwer flavor, and the direction is by Edward Laemmle.

"The Darkest Hour"—Roach—Pathe
Funny Domestic Tangle

Type of production 2 reel comedy

"The Darkest Hour," deals with some more of the funny domestic difficulties of the Spat family. This time the "know-it-all" brother-in-law tries his luck at making home brew despite the fact that the police are busy running down bootleggers. Seeing the police approaching the house, they hide the bottles of home brew in different places in the house. The police, however, only want to tell them there is an escaped maniac in the neighborhood. Needless to say, the ensuing night is one of terror for the "happy" family and laughter for the audience. The scene is enhanced by a short circuit of the electric lights and in the darkness they mistake one another constantly for the maniac, while the home-brew bottles burst merrily and loudly at intervals.

— Merry Xmas —

"Girls and Records"—Grantland Rice—PatheInteresting—Different*

Type of production 1 reel sport review

This is a rather different and entertaining short reel that might well be used on any program with the certainty that it will prove interesting to the audience. It contrasts the athletic girl of today with her hoop-skirted sister of yesterday, whose sports were more decorative than active. Present day champions of the links, the basketball and polo fields, as well as the swimming pools are seen in action. These include Helen Wills on the tennis court, Miss Collett on the golf links, Adeline Gehring at basketball and Aileen Riggan, the Olympic diving champion.

— Merry Xmas —

"Liquid Lava"—Hodge Podge—EducationalPlenty of Variety*

Type of production 1 reel magazine

If it is true that "variety is the spice of life" this is a reel that should be well-liked. The variety of scenes and countries are only equalled by the swiftness with which the bits pass in review. The outstanding scenes, however, are those taken of a volcano eruption in Java. The molten lava is photographed in daylight and at night the effects are very striking.

LENGTH

By DANNY

feature productions to be made by Famous Players for 1924 will not, on the average, exceed 6,500 feet in length.

There and there one may run shorter. But many of them will be longer rather than over the average mentioned.

This is indeed fine news for the beginning of a new year. The other old line, as well as the new, will only stick to this length of a production schedule. They are going to make a lot of pictures and be all the happier for it.

Tell the story; yes. In six reels or ten if need be; but keep out the padding. That's the main point. Keep it out of the scenario; keep it out of the actual shooting, and then it will be easy. We've harped on this subject until it's almost tiresome, but thank Heaven it didn't seem to have been wasted.

When Famous in on the movement; the first National firm believers in the need come into the field a few more and then it will be better. There are some producers and directors who still believe that they will waste thousands of feet in effort to show something; and sometimes out of ten the picture could be all the better if it was out entirely.

With shorter and more interesting features will come better short subjects; a more diversified program and a more satisfied picture going to the audience. And that—above all else, matters the most.

Sanity at Studios

Is Seen for 1924 by Irving Lesser—Declares Extravagance in Production is Gone

Irving M. Lesser of Principal Pictures, just in from the coast, stated on Saturday that the era of extravagance in production was gone and that some semblance of sanity at the studios will be evident during 1924. He found that the costume picture as a factor is gone forever and that the trend will be toward the kind of product that has always appealed to the American heart, as he put it, rather than the eye.

"I asked a lot of producers what kind of picture they planned for next year and almost invariably they replied: 'Something about life in New York. Something that goes back into the alleys and touches the heart. No more of the spectacle stuff. It costs too much and it doesn't carry the appeal.'

"There will not be any cuts in salaries of players or technical forces. The star salaries have been established on a false valuation, not by the

Divided Over Footage

Some Distributors Think Length of Features Should Be Governed by Story Values

Apparently distributors hold different ideas relative to the length of feature productions. Famous Players will confine their output to pictures 6,500 feet long, while at First National the tendency seems to be towards shorter features.

W. E. Atkinson, of Metro, declared on Saturday that he has been urging the company's producing unit to make pictures of six reels or under. This is being done wherever possible, but at the same time Atkinson pointed out that stories occasionally demand an extended footage because the situations in it warrant such action. He cited "The Four Horsemen" and "Scaramouche" as pictures falling in this class.

E. H. Goldstein, of Universal, and Harry M. Warner, of Warner Bros., stated that the story presented an important factor in determining just how long features should be made. Goldstein said it was obviously fool-

I. P. D. A. To Co-operate for Benefit of State Righters—To Seek Exhibitor Tie-Ups

The Independent M. P. Prod. and Dist. Corp. which was definitely launched last week plans to co-operate fully with the Hays organization on matters that have a common interest in the industry. While it is the intention of its sponsors to carry out this idea so far as possible, it is stated that the I. P. D. A. will, in the main, function as an independent body. Where it can get together with the Hays group or any other in the industry, for that matter, it will do so, but where it cannot, the association will function on its own.

As a matter of fact, the I. P. D. A. will operate along many of the lines adopted by the Hays group. The latter's by-laws will be used so far as possible by the I. P. D. A. in framing their own. A spokesman for the independent group stressed the point that there should not be any conflict over the existence of two bodies, so closely alike. He added that in the I. P. D. A., there have been brought together many companies which did not belong to the Hays association, either because the corporate entities were lights. The floods are thrown by 350 imported Mangin mirrors.

Famous says twenty-seven miles of electric wire were used in the construction of the sign which is dimmed and accelerated by motors of 150 horsepower capacity. This dimming equipment is equivalent to three times that of the largest theatrical stage and causes the illumination to completely disappear every twenty seconds, gradually coming back to full light.

The sign cost $45,000 to build and $1,500 a week to operate.

Warner felt that the character of feature productions depended entirely on the reaction of the public. "The public has been educated to expect the $800,000 picture. Apparently, nothing less proves acceptable at this time. It is a difficult thing to determine. Of course the nature of the story is always an important factor."

To Work With Hays

such as to prohibit their joining or because of other reasons.

"Here," he said, "is a body then that will have an excellent representation from state righters, it is hoped, before its organization is completed. It merely means that the industry is closer to an organized state of affairs than before. We will work with the Hays group, the Cohen group, the O'Reilly group, the Brandt group and any other group existing in the business. Anything to further the aims of the independent operators along lines of saner and better business tactics."

The distributors in the I. P. D. A. plan to take active steps to protect and enhance their prestige with exhibitors throughout the country by insisting that exchanges who contract with theater men for definite series of pictures supply them rather than substitute something else. They want to eliminate the kick-back that now reaches them through defaulting ex-changemen.

comparatively smaller producers like Principal, but by the larger companies that bid actively for the services of the people whose names mean something in casts. Of course, there will always be outstanding pictures. I saw one reel of 'The Thief of Bagdad.' It is a marvelous piece of work in which Fairbanks has established what is absolutely a new high standard for others to shoot at. While I didn't actually see any material on the screen, I saw the sets Mary Pickford has constructed for 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall.' She personally told about the extent to which she is going to make the picture and the vast amount of money she plans to spend on it.

"Pictures like that will, of course, continue to be made. They are, however, not the usual but the unusual. The point I want to stress is that while productions of that character will cost money and oodles of it, and while it is true there will be no scrimping along those lines, pictures of an in-between nature in which only several sequences of lavish sets and large expenditures of money are expected to carry over, will disappear."

Coming East

Doug and Mary Finishing Two Pictures—Both Are Big, Says Dennis F. O'Brien

Douglas Fairbanks has about two weeks more of night work to complete "The Thief of Bagdad," while Mary Pickford has completed "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" and is now editing the picture, according to Dennis F. O'Brien, attorney for both stars. O'Brien returned from a visit to the coast on Monday.

Both Fairbanks and Miss Pickford expect to come East in February with their completed productions. O'Brien declared that no arrangements have as yet been made for theaters for a Broadway run. He described Doug's picture as a marvelous piece of work and added that Mary's is also a production of considerable magnitude.

Branham Resigns

Leaves Famous Players-Canadian Corp. to Join New England Circuit of Theaters

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—Charles G. Branham, director of the theaters for Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., has resigned. He has had general supervision of the 64 houses operated from Montreal to Vancouver.

Branham took charge of the Famous houses in the Dominion in succession to H. M. Thomas when the latter return to Omaha, to resume direction of the Blank theaters. Branham is leaving for Boston, where he will be identified with the general management of a circuit of picture theaters in New England. Before leaving Toronto, he will be tendered a complimentary dinner by his associates in Famous Players, tonight.

Valentino Settles

Will Complete Contract With Famous Before Starting Work for Ritz—"Beaucaire" First

Famous Players, Max D. Steuer, who represented Rodolph Valentino and Ritz Carlton Pictures, issued a joint statement Monday afternoon announcing that the difficulties that had existed between Famous and Valentino had been straightened out and that Valentino would complete his contract with Paramount. The statement gave an official stamp to the exclusive announcement made along these lines in THE FILM DAILY of Dec. 10.

By the terms of the agreement, all litigation pending between both parties will be dropped upon the completion of the contract by Valentino. Mrs. Valentino, who acted as her husband's attorney-in-fact figured prominently in the negotiations.

The statement declared that Valentino will complete his contract. The expiration date is February, 1924, but Famous holds the right to exercise an option for another year. Apparently this is Adolph Zukor's intention, for in a personal statement issued in connection with the other, he said Famous Players would give Valentino "the finest productions possible"

Le Landau Closes Houses on Eve of Holiday to Allow Employees a Night at Home

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Milwaukee—Leo A. Landau, managing director of the Alhambra and Garden theaters, did an unusual thing on Monday. In order to allow the employees at both houses which are first-runs here to remain at home with their families and absorb the true Yuletide spirit, he closed the houses on Monday, Christmas Eve, and told his staff to hotfoot it home to their firesides.

This is the first time that anything of this nature has been done in Milwaukee and Landau is of the opinion the first done by an exhibitor anywhere.

Newspaper Opinions

"The Ten Commandments"—F. P.-L. Cohan Theater

AMERICAN—The Biblical parts are good. As for the rest, we cannot enthuse. Theodore Roberts, it must be said, is an imposing Moses.

There were some exquisite bits of color, and then some that were not so lovely. Especially effective were the scenes where the chariots were driven across the sands of the Egyptians in pursuit of the children of Israel. The parting of the Red Sea, a swirling, seething mass of waters, to let Moses and his followers pass to safety, brought applause; also the appearance of the Ten Commandments in fire in the sky. . . . a galaxy of headliners recruited from the Paramount lot, do the best they can in part two.

DAILY NEWS—This part of the story, (the Biblical episode) with its remarkable picture of a Red Sea rolling back to permit the oppressed to pass, briefly melts into a modern drama, and events run melodramatically to a close.

Theodore Roberts, in Moses' patriarchal robes, is, of course, the ruling spirit of the scriptural half of the picture. . . .

I think this an extremely good picture. Both Rod La Rocque and Richard Dix are splendidly chosen for their roles, and Edythe Chapman's grim mother person is little short of perfection.

EVENING JOURNAL—One of the most remarkable effects ever contrived for a motion picture, the parting of the Red Sea to permit Moses and his followers to escape Pharaoh and his army. . . . Although the latter-day narrative is interesting, it comes as a let-down from the profound majesty of the Biblical episodes. . . .

Another telling effect is the giving of the commandments to Moses in his solitary vigil on Sinai. . . .

Theodore Roberts, as Moses, towers in these sequences. Charles de Roche makes a kingly Pharaoh and Estell Taylor is beautiful. . . .

All the players in the modern story perform well. . . .

EVENING WORLD— . . . the year's biggest picture, . . . a big picture in more ways than one. It has a big theme; it has several big moments and there's absolutely no gainsaying the fact that the sets are big—the biggest yet seen. The photography was a big undertaking. . . . Contrary to general opinion, we do not think the latter portion or modern sequence of the picture is better than the portion depicting the days when the Pharaohs held sway, though the modern story is tense and thrilling.

Combined, the picturization of the two eras go to make up about as good screen entertainment as one could demand these days.

HERALD—Much has been said and written of this picture, but none of the spoken or printed accounts gives an adequate conception of its nature. From start to finish, it is a series of distinct surprises—most of which are pleasant.

"The Ten Commandments" is divided into two portions, which melt into each other with considerable effect. . . . The first part . . . tells, with remarkable clarity and straightforwardness, the story of the Book of Exodus, . . . the Biblical spectacle is faded into comparative insignificance by the modern story which follows it. . . . The actual revelation of the Commandments on the mount was incredibly exciting. . . . The outstanding player—indeed, the most worthy feature of the whole expensive mass—is Rod La Rocque. . . .

MAIL— . . . the religious spectacle was unfolded before their eyes in a manner which stamped the director as a master of the screen.

The whole is a crushing sermon propounded as the most ardent fundamentalist would have the less "Thou shalt not" preached. It is flung from the screen to the crash of drums and great cymbals, and as far as we are able to predict, the film should move any doubter to think twice. . . . Whatever faults the modern story may contain, "The Ten Commandments" will live in the memories of the many who will see it for the marvelous beauty and realistic artistry with which the biblical tale was unfolded. . . . Cecil B. de Mille, creator of many film atrocities, produced "The Ten Commandments," and thus atoned for all his screen sins.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Not only is it entitled to a place on the honor roll of the world's screen classics, but in the matter of precedence, it deserves a place very near the top of the list. . . . De Mille, to the satisfaction of the audience, again appears to have accomplished the extraordinarily delicate and difficult task of welding a tense modern drama to one of the most moving epics of history without presenting an anti-climax. . . .

SUN . . . almost half, is laid in the Egypt of Exodus times—and it is there that the scenes rise to something very approaching grandeur. One finds oneself sitting up in the seat, applauding shimmering figures in a sea of wind blown sand— . . .

The photography remains at a high degree of excellence during the scenes of modern days. The actors are fully as adequate as in the first part, rather more adequate. The difference is, after all, the difference between the men who wrote the Old Testament and Miss Jeanie Macpherson. We speak with all respect for Miss Macpherson's ability as a writer for the movies.

TELEGRAM— . . . surpassed all expectations. Here is a superb dramatic picture. . . . The scenes showing Moses on Mount Sinai are impressive and never fail in beauty and dignity. . . . Naturally, after the big epic quality of the Exodus, the modern story . . . seems something of an anti-climax. Even the captions revealed the difference. . . . Just the same, that second part was good movie stuff" with undoubted thrills and unmistakable humor.

TIMES—It is probable that no more wonderful spectacle has ever been put before the public. . . . Two men might have directed this feature, as it goes from the sublime to the out-and-out movie. Not that the latter part is bad, but that almost any melodramatic picture would have fitted into the second section of this photodrama. . . . There are many impressive colorful scenes of the Israelites in the desert, some of them appearing better and more natural than other such effects we have witnessed on the screen. But . . . the strain on Mr. De Mille told, and as soon as he swept on to his modern drama he was back to the ordinary and certainly uninspired movie. . . . At the same time it must be admitted that in this melodrama there are also some excellent and well-thought out deas, and some eye-smiting shots.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It's a big picture in its Biblical section that amounts to a prolog that ends midway in the first part. After that it's a picture story by Jeanie Macpherson, and not overly much of a picture story at that. . . . When this super-film production goes into the legends of the Bible, especially that of the Israelites crossing the Red Sea, it's a picture. These scenes, taken in colors, are stupendous. . . .

TRIBUNE—The first is the most magnificent thing we ever saw on the screen; the second is quite an ordinary picture, just good enough; melodrama. . . . Charles de Roche is quite as magnificent as Rameses. . . . Of course, it is the biggest thing that the screen has so far yielded.

WORLD— . . . appears to be a very large and expensively made motion picture. . . . In its earlier episodes the film has moments of grandeur in setting and majesty in movement which are exciting and beautiful. When the story hurdes the centuries and settles into a present day symbolization of what has gone before, it is ordinary movie melodrama of the commonest type. . . . Altogether, it is nothing like so fine a picture as we had hoped to see.

Iowa Divorced From Nebraska

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Des Moines—The formation of a separate exhibitor unit in Iowa means this state has divorced itself from the M. P. T. O. of Nebraska. Forty theaters are already members with about 35 more lined up. No affiliation with the national exhibitor body will be made, at least until the new unit organizes thoroughly.

Sun's Regent To Have Opposition

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cincinnati—The Chakeres Amusement Co., Springfield, operating the Majestic, will soon begin work on a 2,500-seat house to play Keith vaudeville and pictures, in opposition to Gus Sun's Regent. This looks like a real war, as only recently the Regent took Paramount pictures away from the Majestic, thus giving the Regent Paramount and First National. The Majestic has lost its Fox films to the Liberty, which now has Universal, Fox and Goldwyn. The Majestic has the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan program, while the Fairbanks, legitimate house, is grabbing up the specials between road show dates.

Fire Damages Nat'l, Toronto

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Toronto—The National, was damaged by fire to the extent of $7,000.

Everett, Wash.—Fire which did $100,000 damage, completely destroyed the Everett. About $1,500 in films and projection machines were saved. The lease was held by the Star Amusement Co., which owns several theaters here.

Many New Houses In Michigan

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Lansing, Mich.—The Lansing Theater Co., is having plans drawn for a two-story brick theater at Allegany and Capitol Sts., to be known as the Blackstone. It will cost $100,000.

The Muskegon Amusement Co., is building a new theater on Clay Ave., near Jefferson, Muskegon, to be known as the Jefferson. It will be a one-story building, for pictures and vaudeville. Cost about $50,000.

W. S. Butterfield will build a new theater in Flint, seating about 2,000. It will be known as the Capitol.

John H. Kunsy will build a new downtown theater in Detroit. Work will start within a year.

The new Cinderella, Detroit, will open around Jan. 1.

Oakland Theaters, Inc., Formed

In The Courts

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided that the Hackensack Trust Co. cannot recover from the Hudson Trust Co. for $837 as the amount of three checks drawn on the Cosmofotofilm Co., Inc., which were forged. The papers in the case show that one Wallace was treasurer of the film company and that Mr. Cromelin, the owner, had such confidence in him that he signed any checks he presented to him. It was stated that Wallace drew three checks to persons to whom the film company owed no money, which were paid by the Hackensack Trust Co., in which the film company had its account, and the money was collected by Wallace and deposited in his own account in the Hudson Trust Co.

In the Municipal Court the Hackensack Trust Co. got a judgment for $837 but the Appellate Division reversed it on the ground that Cromelin gave Wallace full control and made insufficient examination of the checks he signed when they were presented by Wallace.

"Cause For Joy"

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Kansas City—The following appears in the editorial column of "The Reel Journal," under the heading "Cause for Joy":

"The time of retrenchment is at hand. The hue and cry over padded feature pictures which run to ten reels where five and six would suffice has been raised. The exhibitor, who has been wont to indulge in lavish presentation, has been cautioned. The banner, which has been worn threadbare, that this picture cost oodles and oodles of money to produce is passe.

"These facts should soothe the feelings of the alarmist. They are forerunners of a stabilizing of the motion picture industry and should be hailed with joy."

Legal Tilt Over Rittenhouse Theater

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Rittenhouse, 53rd and Haverford, is the center of a legal battle, with Harry Ronisky and Sam Hyman each fighting for the house. It is alleged Hyman leased the theater about six months ago, Ronisky declares that because of a technical violation the lease had been broken.

The Film Board of Trade is involved into the litigation because of Hyman's avowed intention to pay for film that had been booked into the theater and thereby preventing Ronisky from securing shows.

A Discussion of Film Financing

The Magazine of Wall Street contains an interesting article in its current issue relative to the financing of motion pictures. It is reproduced in full:

"One of the newest industries which presents to the banker financial problems that are not exactly covered by his credit experience is afforded by the moving-picture business. As things stand at the present time, moving-picture producers find it expedient to resort to banks for a considerable amount of accommodation, and the question how to finance their necessities in a sound and safe way is one of some seriousness and difficulty.

"The original capital of a producer invested in the process of preparing the film for exhibition. This implies the entire cost of staging the production, recording it on the film and advertising and disposing of the latter. As a result of the marketing process, the producer of the film enters into an agreement with moving-picture theaters whereby the latter have the rights of exhibiting the film at specified dates, and a basis of payment is arranged, usually on the installment plan. The theater, in other words, wants to pay for the film out of the proceeds of the exhibition, and frequently does so on the basis of a percentage of receipts from admissions.

"The owner of the film thus has two distinct assets—the film itself and the expected proceeds of the contract for exhibition, the latter being in the form of payments usually extending over a considerable period of weeks. His need for credit is usually felt at the moment when the production of the film is completed advances being called for in order to enable him to continue the production of more films while awaiting the incomes that will be derived from those already in a completed form. Even if he should discontinue the process of production at that point, he would still be quite likely to need some means of cashing in on a part of the value of the film in order to settle his obligations to performers and others whose labors have gone into the making of the product.

"Up to the point where the completed film is in the hands of a producer the commercial banker cannot properly be called upon for credit. If he extends such credit, it is simply in the form of a straight loan secured

Some of the Pitfalls

"IT is a new field of experience which is in process of development and calls for considerable ingenuity and foresight on the part of those who are inclined to experiment with it," says The Magazine of Wall Street in discussing "Financing the Moving Picture Business" and then continues:

"Moving picture producers find it expedient to resort to banks for a considerable amount of accommodations and the question how to finance their necessities in a sound and sane way is one of some seriousness and difficulty.

"The amount which can be extended in the sum of loans upon a completed film, with the ownership of the latter transferred to the bank, is a question of somewhat hazardous expert judgment."

by the single name paper of the producer, who may, however, be perfectly good for the amount, just as he would be in any other undertaking that he might set his hands to. But during this production period his motion-picture undertaking does not afford any basis for bank credit, since failure to complete the film practically results in loss of all that has been done and gives him no return for his investment.

"When he has a completed product in his hands, he is in position to approach the lender with a safe proposition. This proposition consists of an application for such loan as the bank may see fit to extend him; and, in support of the application, he usually cites the total expenses of producing the film, on the theory that the bank will let him have a certain percentage of it, just as it might agree to loan 50 to 60 per cent of the cost of a stock of manufactured goods.

"Of course, all this is on the theory that the film has a perfectly definite market—which may or may not be true. Contributory evidence on that subject is furnished by the past record of the producer, but is also to be sought from moving-picture experts who should preferably be individuals that are informed as to the probable earning power of the film rather than with reference to its cost. The banker does not care how much the film cost except insofar as that may throw light upon the figure that can be charged for exhibiting it. There may or may not be a rough correspondence between the two sums.

"The amount which can be extended in the form of loans upon a completed film, with the ownership of the latter transferred to the bank, is thus a question of somewhat hazardous expert judgment. It is the more hazardous in that the bank, not being in the moving-picture business, has no facilities for arranging to market the picture. It might undertake to sell the film itself, where it is obliged to do so by reason of non-payment of notes, but such a sale would probably turn out about as unfavorably as sales of commodities made by banks usually do—that is to say would result in very material loss. Banks, therefore, are at the present time disposed to insist that, before they make advances upon pictures, the owners shall have entered into contracts for production, and that the advances shall be gauged upon the estimated receipts to be obtained from the various picture houses as indicated by their past experience with other pictures of the same general description; and for which a similar admission fee has been charged at a given theater. If, for example, a statistical review of experience shows that there is expectation of a gross return to the producer of $5,000 per month at a given theater (the application for credit being backed up by title to the film and by transfer of title to the contract with the theater), the bank may then feel warranted in advancing such percentage of these expected receipts as it can agree with the producer shall be paid to him. What that percentage shall be is dependent somewhat upon the producer's own status, his relations with the bank and the bank's knowledge of him, as well as the general practice of the bank in fixing the proportion of its own advances upon capital security.

"Loans of this kind are apt to be unfortunately long-term in character, while the fact that the income is received by the producer of the picture in relatively small sums weekly or monthly increases the probability that there will be difficulty in collecting at maturity. The banker has to bear in mind that, after the first season, the value of the film is likely to be greatly reduced, since in relatively few cases will it stand another local season, but must go out on the road for exhibition at picture establishments in other places. The bank should, therefore, endeavor to recover its entire loan at a specified rate per week or month, during the contract of exhibition. This means an agreement, either in writing or otherwise, for the regular reduction of the note at specified intervals, and in the event that there is failure in payments the bank should be authorized to enter in and assume to itself the control over all future payments. In these circumstances, the loan may be tolerably safe, as such loans go, particularly if the producer and the exhibiting houses are reasonably responsible.

"But there are some dangerous spots in the moving-picture loan. One is found in the fact that there is apparently no absolute guarantee when exhibition is to begin. Special reasons may present themselves for not offering a certain film to the public at a given time. In some cases, the theater may, for reasons of its own, not be ready to undertake the exhibition, and may arrange with the owner of the film for postponement. Ordinarily, the bank cannot assure itself that exhibition will begin when it is scheduled to do so. In the same way, there is danger that the receipts may for some good reason (or perhaps for a bad one) fail to come up to expectation, in which case the question of its recovering the amount of its loan may be difficult. Other moving-picture houses hear that the film has not been very successful and decline to put it on, perhaps being authorized to take this attitude by a cancellation clause in the contract. In that case, the bank's only protection is found in the fact that it has the title to a film which has cost money to produce, but which the public is not very anxious to see. To collect the loan from the producer in such circumstances, notwithstanding that he may already have spent the proceeds in paying off his obligations, or in embarking upon a new production, is likely to prove a very difficult matter.

"While moving picture paper is getting into banks by a gradual process, as the business becomes more settled, it would probably be difficult to make much headway, were it not for the fact that the banks are glad to get theatrical deposit accounts which bring in a steady stream of cash from admission fees. Loans of the kind referred to are taken on as in other businesses partly for the purpose of conciliating depositors and getting a regular stream of neighborhood accounts which can pretty well be depended on to furnish current cash. The value of such accounts depends in large measure, as with other accounts, upon the amount of trouble they give and upon what their owners expect at the bank. It is a new field of experience which is in process of development, and calls for considerable ingenuity and foresight on the part of those who are inclined to experiment with it."

Films Flood Britain

from that in England there is another factor to consider in the Swedish Biograph, French and German pictures which rarely reach the American screen. The result is that prices have gone to pieces. Whatever a renter asks is always underbid by the exhibitor.

"Matters have reached the stage now where there is room for two types of picture only: the mediocre picture that can be bought for a song and the big picture like "The Hunchback" or "Scaramouche." The attitude of the renter merely reflects the line of least resistance. He tells the American agent that it is better for him to buy a fair picture and thrust it on the market to go along with the rest of the productions in its class than to buy an above-the-average picture for £5,000 or £10,000 and then be compelled to £3,000 or £5,000 in putting it over through advertising and exploitation. They feel that they won't get the prices they ask anyway, so what's the use?"

"The situation has been brought about through the action of two or three large English distributing companies which have gone in for the policy of quality sales rather than quantity sales. They operate on the principle that it is better to sell 30 or 40 pictures in a group at £10 each than sell 15 pictures individually at a higher, proportionate rental. It is surprising the number of pictures that are being sold at £5 and £10."

The first of the Warner releases to go through F. B. O. is "Where the North Begins," which will have a pre-release at the Marble Arch Pavilion, one of the big London theaters for two weeks beginning Feb. 19. The series will be released at once and not held as many pictures have under the old English block booking system.

Says There Was No Fraud

The sealed verdict of the jury in the case of W. Rodman Fay, president of G. Schirmer, Inc., against Walter Engels, based upon alleged misrepresentation in the sale of corporate stock, was opened by Judge Hagarty in the Supreme Court, Queens County.

According to Engels, the verdict was for the defendant, completely sustaining his defense that there had been no fraud.

and then ventured the opinion that "his coming pictures would be the greatest in which he has ever appeared."

Zukor's statement follows:

"I think the signing of this contract is an excellent Christmas present to the motion picture public. While this company has at all times been ready to reach an amicable adjustment of its differences with Mr. Valentino, those differences are now a thing of the past. We purpose giving Mr. Valentino the finest productions possible from the best the industry affords. I am sure that with all of us working in harmony, his coming pictures will be the greatest in which he has ever appeared."

J. D. Williams of Ritz-Carlton said:

"We are all naturally very pleased at the four-square outcome and believe it is eminently fair to all concerned. The whole difference arose through misunderstandings which need not be gone into now and we are satisfied that henceforth all concerned will work in harmony, co-operation and business friendship."

"Monsieur Beaucaire" goes into production after the holidays with Sidney Olcott directing. Forrest Halsey did the scenario.

Deal With Arrow

Minter's Strand Features, of Detroit, have secured the Hatton-Gerber series of Westerns also "High Speed Lee" and "The Blue Fox," a serial, for the state of Michigan, from Arrow.

Arrow has closed with Arthur C. Bromberg for a series of 10 Edmund Cobb Westerns and six Hatton-Gerber Westerns for the 11 Southern states. They will be released through the Progress exchanges in Atlanta, Dallas, Charlotte and New Orleans.

THE "B. O."

By DANNY

Meaning the box-office. And the outlook for 1924.

If there was ever cause for satisfaction and jubilation certainly it is in the outlook. Because there is but one real fly in the ointment. And that is the admission tax. If that is repealed—and certainly the signs are encouraging at the moment—the exhibitors of this country should have another 1921.

There has always been a lot of "hollering" on the part of exhibitors about profits. There always will be. The most prominent exhibitor of the Middle West—and one of the most important in this country is responsible for this statement:

"The average exhibitor doesn't lose money on three pictures a year. When he says he loses money he really means he hasn't made as much as he thinks he should—as much as he usually does. It's a loss of profit, not an actual loss that he complains of."

Which, if true, explains much.

But with the admission tax off, the high cost of operating theaters would not hurt as much, there would be even a greater profit of running houses, and exhibitors should be happier. There is a lot of talk of lower cost pictures for next year. Perhaps they will arrive. But the "perhaps" needs emphasis. It doesn't mean that distributors will ask much less, even if the pictures cost less.

The whole trouble with this business is the lack of confidence, each to the other, which results in producers and distributors taking "all the traffic will bear." And then some.

12 Units Planned

When Famous Resumes Production in January—Closer Check on Expenditures Inaugurated

Famous Players yesterday announced a new list of productions giving titles, directors and players. Much of the information was contained in the exclusive story published in THE FILM DAILY for Sunday.

The company plans to maintain 12 companies when the coast studio reopens Jan. 7. Jesse L. Lasky who left for Hollywood on Saturday said in a statement yesterday that more time and study had been placed on every step in production in order to curtail all possible waste.

"One of the moves," he said, "is the strengthening of the estimating department in each studio. The purpose of these departments is to go over each script and estimate the cost of every scene in the picture before any photographing is done at all. These departments are composed of production experts who are able to

Again Gov't Control?

Reformers Aim at Federal Supervision—Not Taken Seriously in the Trade

Well-posted men in the industry were not inclined to pay serious attention to the announced intention of the National Conference of Churches on Federal Control of Motion Pictures, which meets in Washington Feb. 13-14 to secure a government supervision of the picture industry. The opinion seemed to prevail that the declaration of intentions was the usual annual statement of the reform element—nothing more.

The proposed bill would create a Federal M. P. Commission of the Commissioner of Education and six commissioners to be under the Secretary of the Interior, whose annual salaries shall be $9,000, the chairman receiving $10,000, who shall hold office during good behavior, to be removed at the will of the President. Plans Not Finally Determined for Next Season—Borzage Signed for Series Optimistic to a degree over the outlook for 1924, Marcus Loew returned Tuesday from the Coast but only reached his office yesterday. He worked late last night cleaning up his correspondence and mailing out about 1,000 Xmas cards.

Metro's plans for next season have not yet been fully determined. It will be several months before they are, but Frank Borzage has been signed for a series, and other announcements will be forthcoming next month. The studio is in operation with four companies at work. Two additional stages will be built.

Sees Shortage of Films

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Los Angeles—Marcus Loew, in an interview published in The Times says:

"The unsettled condition of the industry will result in an acute shortage of new pictures and many theaters will have to re-run photoplays already shown or feature reprints of the successes of other years.

"Production has not for many weeks been sufficient to supply the demands of exhibitors. The surplus of completed pictures now in the vaults here and in New York will be exhausted by early spring and, in spite of the revival of production activity which will begin the first week in January, there will be a shortage of new films from late February until April, for the new productions cannot be ready much before that date.

"In a sense this picture shortage of many

Joins Ritz July 1

Valentino to Complete Two Pictures for Famous Between Feb. and July—Going Abroad Then

Although the joint statement issued by Famous Players, Rodolph Valentino and Ritz Carlton Pictures contained no mention of the extent of the star's services with Famous, it is understood that Valentino will be ready to start work for Ritz on July 1.

He will make two pictures for Famous Players, both of them to be produced in the East. These will be completed in the period beginning Feb. 1 and ending not later than July 1. Valentino's first for Ritz will be produced in Europe. It was stated yesterday that advance preparations, so far as it was possible to make them, had been completed. The first Valentino-Ritz production is expected to be ready for the fall.

Newspaper Opinions

"Boy of Mine"—1st Nat'l Strand

AMERICAN—The story is beautifully developed and the last part of murder, intrigue and drama. Ben Alexander steals the story from everyone, so that even Charlie Chaplin himself would not have had much chance with Ben in the cast.

DAILY NEWS—Heaps of people in the Strand yesterday were enjoying Christmas Eve by shedding a few turbid tears over the recitation scene. Ben Alexander is one of the most successful little boys.

EVENING JOURNAL—"Boy of Mine" is entertaining, but not so funny as Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam." In the latter picture there was a gang of boys and a girl or so. In the new one, Bill is almost a solitary figure. Ben Alexander is excellent.

EVENING WORLD—He is, indeed, is a picture that is a picture. If you think you are a base weep-proof moviegoer and your tear ducts have gone Prohibition, go see "Boy of Mine" and find out different.

HERALD—Not quite as good as "Penrod and Sam" because it has been overburdened with adult plot and because it lacks some of the genuine understanding which characterized that earlier picture and made it one of the fine things of the year. There are plenty of good things in "Boy of Mine"—enough, undoubtedly, to make it worth while.

MAIL—The film is excellent entertainment and well acted; a movie with which every one will be satisfied.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The film starts out with a fine vitality and continues the good work until well into the middle part, when it becomes just a bit mawkishly sentimental. The entire cast is perfect. Everybody seems to "belong."

POST—A most entertaining film. It has a small cast and no elaborate settings. It is very real, and this means a great deal in this era of artificiality in motion pictures.

SUN—About as highly charged with saccharine sentiment and tear producing ruses as any picture could be, but it's a corking good one especially for parents to see.

TELEGRAM—L. K. McDonald has produced another of Tarkington's juvenile classics worthy of rank beside his "Penrod and Sam."

TIMES—This production slows down toward the end, but the acting of all the players is so excellent that one comes away feeling that it is unusually good entertainment. Henry B. Walthall as the chilly, undemonstrative father is wonderfully sincere in his impersonation.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It proves a splendid picture, mainly due to both the excellence of the direction and through the work of what closely amounts to a foolproof cast.

TRIBUNE—Ben Alexander the best of all the boy actors. Henry Walthall gives the best picture of a severe, non-understanding father we ever saw on the screen. Irene Rich is charming as the mother and Rockcliffe Fellowes is very nice.

WORLD—Nothing more human and beautiful has been made into a screen drama for months than this simple, everyday story.

"Big Brother"—F. P.-L. Rivoli

AMERICAN—Alan Dwan, the director, has given a fairly literal and an intelligent translation of the Beach story. I can think of no actor who would have played the big brother any better than Tom Moore.

EVENING JOURNAL—Tom Moore is capital. "Big Brother," directed by Alan Dwan, is a good picture.

EVENING WORLD—And a right good film it is, too. We hope you enjoy "Big Brother" and Mickey (Bennett) as much as we did.

MAIL—Yet every time a film, whose only purpose is to preach a lesson appears, it is long drawn out, dull and uninteresting. "Big Brother" is that type of picture. It has this one redeeming feature, however, and that is the acting of Mickey Bennett.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—"Big Brother" is good entertainment once it gets started.

POST—He is Mickey Bennett, and nothing as tough or as entertaining has ever been seen as his portrayal of Midge.

TELEGRAM—Admittedly Rex Beach's greatest novel, the film is one of the finest of the many that have been made from this novelist's works.

TIMES—Allan Dwan has made a picture with an appealing story and stagings of modest proportions that fit the particular sequences like artistic and well-chosen frames. The players are especially sincere. It is a splendid picture told with unusual sincerity.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—The picture is one of the best "underworlds" ever screened, is a whole of a story, flawlessly cast and unusually subtitled.

TRIBUNE—There is a wonderful child actor in "Big Brother." Mickey Bennett no one can realize just how fascinating it is until he sees Tom Moore play the big brother. Do not miss it. He and Mickey Bennett are a perfect pair.

WORLD—Of its type of sentimental and made-to-order melodrama, "Big Brother" is a right entertaining picture play. It is quite commonplace in the sequence of its events, and nothing has been done with the method of its treatment which has not been done in scores of others similar to it before.

"The Steadfast Heart"—Gold.-Cosm. Capitol

AMERICAN—The story is unusual and we recommend anyone who enjoys seeing a pair of fine juvenile players to take a look at Miriam Battista and Joseph Depew.

DAILY NEWS—I can't hand "The Steadfast Heart" so much. It's one of those hopeless tales in which the hero is persecuted throughout every single foot of film.

EVENING JOURNAL—The first part of "The Steadfast Heart" is much superior to the last. The situations are fresh and arresting. The grown-up half becomes a bit hackneyed.

EVENING WORLD—If you relish a film story that shows a lad, winning out, of course, over mountainous odds, then you will leave the Capitol perfectly satisfied.

POST—good screen material and is very well acted.

MAIL—It has its moments of entertainment and is interesting because of what it is trying to do.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—The story does not amount to much. But the picture gives real enjoyment. The play falls off a little after the children grow up. It lapses into the ordinary to a certain degree. Care and attention to detail in the sets are marked, and the smoothness and finish of the picture stand out.

SUN—Seems to be rather an obvious attempt to mop up along the same lines as those which "Driven" found so profitable.

TELEGRAM—The theme is that of a youth triumphant, and his tale has the verisimilitude of a throbbing human document.

TIMES—Possesses some excellent periods, and the only pity is that the director and the players were not able to keep up the good work. In the last reels interest in this production abates.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—It is a rather drabby picture, decidedly spotty. It does not appear to be an offering that will get any unusual box-office business. The story is depressing at the beginning, but as it goes along it lightens to a certain extent. The action, however, is decidedly slow.

TRIBUNE—Miriam Battista and Joseph Depew were delightful in "The Steadfast Heart," but we cannot say as much for Marguerite Courtot and Joseph Striker. Those two qualities (pep and personality) are the very things the picture lacks.

WORLD—This picture seems a sincere attempt to do a quiet story of country life. The atmosphere is excellent and a number of the character parts unusually amusing. Unhappily, the leading actors are for the most part disturbingly inadequate. The simplicity of the story sags into boredom through its insincerity of handling.

"Don't Call It Love"—F. P.-L. Rialto

AMERICAN—The story itself is so light Mr. DeMille had misgivings after it was made. The DeMille treatment is interesting. Charlie Chaplin tried it in "A Woman of Paris" with success, and "Don't Call It Love" does not suffer from the experiment.

EVENING JOURNAL—Mr. DeMille's direction is better than anything else, save Jack Holt's performance as Richard Parrish. As for Mr. DeMille's direction, there is this to be said: he assumes that the audience has average intelligence.

MAIL—William DeMille directed the film with consummate skill and seems to have extracted from the story that which screens best. We hasten to mention the name of the director because his pictures insure the film patron a simplicity and beauty in portrayal not found often in the work of other directors.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Here we have the vagaries of an artist, capricious, all-absorbing, temperamental, who holds our interest and never offends our intelligence. The production is excellent and the players have been chosen by the skilled hand of Mr. DeMille.

POST—a fairly good motion picture made better with the William De Mille touches.

SUN—All are excellent—La Rocque particularly so. Dreary, on the whole, and despite the acting.

TELEGRAM—The story in the Saturday Evening Post and the play both created intense discussion, and it is believed that the film version is even more powerful.

TIMES—The story is splendidly told, and at the last fadeout one feels the same as one does after finishing a good book—sorry it has come to an end. William DeMille has succeeded in telling a real story, and not a very involved one, in a simple and entrancing manner.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—Nita Naldi runs away with the picture. There's more sex in it than there are yellow taxis on Times Square, and although it's red-hot picture stuff, it's handled with a certain finesse that keeps it well within the limitations of censorship. It is excellent entertainment throughout its length.

TRIBUNE—It seems to us that in filming "Rita Coventry" they have left out the best part. The picture is extremely amusing and extremely well done, and if we hadn't seen the play we should not have known that it could be better than it is.

"A Lady of Quality"—Universal Cameo

AMERICAN—Again we want to hand Universal a few flowers. The output from their studios in the past year has improved 100 per cent. Time was when praise for Universal features was scarce. Today there is far more praise than blame handed in their direction.

EVENING WORLD—There is absolutely no question. The film is scenically and photographically one of the finest seen in these parts this season.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—A picture of quality. It is also a picture of quantity, being in eight reels, and it is a rarity to find quality and quantity in the same film. The sets are tastefully done and the direction is fine.

SUN—A film of quality. The word beauty is applicable to every unit of the production; Virginia Valli, the star; the story, the costumes and the sets.

TIMES SQUARE DAILY—For about half an hour "A Lady of Quality" promised to be one of the most colorful and gripping of the present deluge of "costume" pictures. But in the second 30 minutes the interest petered down, and the final half hour was drabby and uneventful.

TRIBUNE—The first half of it is delightful. We will even stretch a point and say that the first three-quarters of it is delightful, but it seems to drag at the end.

WORLD—For about two reels "A Lady of Quality" rests firmly in one of those few niches reserved for important motion pictures. Without warning or reason it topples out abruptly. The entire cast has been chosen with rare discrimination.

Dura Film Protector Company,
220 West 42nd Street,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We wish to advise you that we are well pleased with the duratizing we have had done to date. We have kept a very close check on this and find that it is the biggest help we have ever had in keeping our films in first class condition.

For your information we use an inspection in and out card on each print. This card is given the inspector each time she inspects the print and the film is graded according to condition from #1 which represents new film, to #7 which is junk film, and every time the inspector finishes with a print she makes a record on this same card as to the condition of each reel.

For the past year or so we have had a lot of trouble with prints of two reel comedies going to the bad quickly so we decided as a last resort to try duratizing them. We started this as you know, on the 1st of September and some of the first two reels that we had duratized have had us many as forty runs and are still in #1 and #2 condition according to the inspection card. Where heretofore two reel comedies that had had forty runs were usually down to about #4 or #5 condition.

We really believe that duratizing film gives the exhibitor a cleaner print and prolongs the life of the film. We are so well pleased with it that we are giving all of the laboratorier instructions to have all of our film duratized - not only the two reel comedies.

Wishing you continued success, we are,

Very truly yours,

A PROTEST

By DANNY

William Brandt, President of the M. P. T. O. of New York writes:

"I note in your column Thursday morning that you quote a prominent Middle West exhibitor, who makes the statement that the average exhibitor does not lose money on three pictures a year.

"My guess is that the man who made the statement is Aaron Jones, but I do not guess when I say that he is completely in error.

"The average exhibitor loses money on considerably more than three pictures yearly because, under the present system where he is obliged to buy in block bookings, he takes many pictures which he knows will be a dead loss to him in order to get good ones that go in the batch.

"It is a well known fact that practically every distributor who releases a batch of pictures dresses his window up with some big pictures, carefully thrusting into the background the dead ones.

"Mr. Jones fortunately is in a position where he does not have to run the dead ones, but when he discusses the average exhibitor who must do so, and makes the statement that he does not lose money on three pictures a year, he speaks from no definite knowledge."

Standard Form Planned For Use Between Distributor and State Right Exchanges

The Independent M. P. Prod. & Dist. Ass'n intends drawing up a standard form of contract for use between state right distributors and the exchanges with which they do business. The proposed uniform contract will not touch upon exhibition in any way.

It will be an agreement entered upon by the distributor and those exchanges with which he makes business transactions. Several forms are being considered. First, an agreement between the distributor and the exchanges; secondly, a contract between the producer and the distributor, and thirdly, a dual form contract between the distributor and the foreign buyer. The latter form will cover general foreign distribution and also distribution in a specific country.

This matter was discussed at a meeting held yesterday, at which a committee, headed by John Lowell

To Check Non-Theatrical Showings—Would Work Through F. I. L. M. Clubs

Billy Brandt stated yesterday that he has received a number of complaints regarding competition of non-theatrical exhibitors such as churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, schools, town halls, dance halls, opera houses, and the like.

He said exhibitors have complained that these places are not subjected to the rigid requirements which a theater has to undergo, such as proper facilities for exits, fire appliances, ventilation and a host of other requirements, and that this type of users of films are not obliged to pay a Federal seating tax, a local license fee, nor charge a tax on their admissions while the theater is obliged to do all these things. While not paying much for film rental, or in many cases nothing at all for the service, the non-theatricals invariably undersell the local theaters on admission price, according to Brandt.

"The New York State organization," said Brandt, "has been very apprehensive for some time that an accident in a wooden town hall or other building while showing film would bring a dire reaction upon the entire industry as a whole, with more rigid requirements, stricter inspection for the theaters and the apathy of the public following a disaster.

Putting It Over

Here is how a brother exhibitor put his show over. Send along your ideas. Let the other fellow know how you cleaned up.

Bert Lennon Scores

San Francisco—Bert Lennon is credited with putting across "Pleasure Mad," during its recent run at the Warfield. A few stunts he used include:

The posting of fifty stands throughout San Francisco reading teaser-wise like this: "Is Blind Virtue Wise When the World Is Pleasure Mad?" and "It's Three O'Clock in the Morning: Where is Your Daughter? Is She Safe? Is She With the Pleasure Mad?" The paper was in startling colors. Just before the opening they were all dated and a streamer reading: "Pleasure Mad" from "The Valley of Content" by Blanche Upright, San Francisco's favorite authoress, was put diagonally across each poster.

Somewhere in the picture there figures a view of a Maxwell car so Lennon got after the local branch of the Maxwell Car. Hundreds of stickers half foot long were printed with this legend: "The Good Maxwell Was Good Enough For The Rich Elinor Benton in Metro's 'Pleasure Mad.' See It At Loew's Warfield. Hundreds of Maxwell cars carried these tickers.

Then Lennon effected a tie-up with the local Checker Taxicab Co., Day and Night the entire fleet carried stickers with: "Our Drivers Are Not Pleasure Mad. See it at Loew's Warfield. They Drive You With Care."

Novel Ballyhoo for "Three Ages"

Mobile, Ala.—When "Three Ages," played the Crown recently, several stunts were used by C. D. Haug, Metro exploiteer, in putting over the picture, notably among which was a tie-up with a boy, dressed in a night shirt and long white stocking, in a barrel, who walked the prominent streets and then later attended a large football game. The announcement of the showing was, imprinted on the barrel.

Appeal To Hays

"They have felt that some definite action for the regulation of film in non-theatrical enterprises should be brought about, and I have written to Will H. Hays making the suggestion that all applications for the request of film for showing in non-theatrical places that charge admission fees should be passed upon by the local joint arbitration committee in the particular zone where the application comes from.

"With three exchange men and three exhibitors sitting on that committee to pass on the several different aspects that enter into the showing of film to the public, a great deal of the unjust, oppressive and unfair competition that now exists would be eliminated."

the important portion is yet to be filmed. William Randolph Hearst intends spending a fortune on the picture. As a matter of fact, at various times. Cosmopolitan officials have openly declared it will be the biggest thing the company has ever attempted.

Excavation is now under way on the site of the new stages in Harlem. The old plant which was demolished by fire is now being reconstructed and just as soon as sufficient working space is made available, the various units will be put to work.

Harry Carver who has been with Cosmopolitan for some time has resigned.

Seeking "Blue" Sunday in Ohio

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Cleveland—The anti-Sunday element are working to close picture houses in Akron, Canton and Youngstown. They are circulating petitions in these towns, hoping to overwhelm the mayors with a host of signatures. Exhibitors are doing nothing, but they say that if the Sunday shows close, everything else in the towns will close with them, including newspapers, gasoline stations, and drug stores.

Mt. Pelier will close on Sunday starting Jan. 1. Messrs. Spake and Miller, managers of the Columbia, are tired fighting losing cases. They have been in court three times for violation of the Sunday "Blue" Laws.

Loses Suit

Cables from Paris state that Cleo de Merode, French picture actress, has lost her suit for 100,000 francs against Mae Murray and Tiffany Prod., owners of "Peacock Alley," which, she charged, injured her reputation by burlesquing incidents in her career. The court also ordered the actress to pay the producer 2,000 francs costs.

CECIL DEMILLE'S Masterpiece — "The Ten Commandments"—which had its premier in New York on December 21st was an instantaneous and remarkable success.

Its magnificent prologue uses Technicolor. The wonderful scenes depicting the Tribes of Israel crossing the desert, arrayed in flaming, barbaric colors, held the audience spellbound. Continuous applause greeted this superb color work — made direct from Nature, and true to Nature.

The Technicolor process includes a number of marvelous inventions in photography and color printing which deliver a positive absolutely true to the original and one that experience proves has a longer life than black and white.

The completion of our large new plant makes "Done in Technicolor" a possibility for every progressive producer.

NEW YEAR IS ABOUT TO START that is sure to mean much, for good or ill, to the motion picture industry.

What will the year bring? Will it find the industry still permitting the Ego of some selfish directors to go on padding features into unwarranted, tiresome lengths, or will it see a return to the feature of normal length, that will permit an exhibitor to build up a REAL SHOW, a program of diversified entertainment such as built up the tremendous popularity of motion pictures?

It is largely up to you, Mr. Exhibitor, to bring about this needed reform. If you raise your voice loud enough, it will be heard and heeded. And unless features come to a saner length, all the best wishes for a prosperous New Year for you will be in vain, for, as Danny says in Film Daily, "the public is willing and anxious to pay for real entertainment—diversified entertainment—and sooner or later will refuse to pay for 'Ego'."

Let's all work earnestly for this reform, so that the whole industry may have a prosperous year, which is Educational's sincere wish.

Hays In Sympathy

Believes Exhibitors Warrant Protection from Non-Theatrical Users But What Is the Solution?

No official statement has emanated from the Hays office relative to the communication forwarded by Billy Randt who complained against the growth of non-theatrical showings in New York State, but it is understood that Hays is entirely in sympathy with the stand advanced by exhibitors at their interests should be protected.

The difficulty apparently exists in developing a suitable solution to the problem which is a knotty one. There seems to be no doubt about the rights of exhibitors in the matter. It is felt that the industry first owes protection to the customers on whom distributors depend for business. However, in some quarters, the impression is quite definite that exhibitors to some extent, are to blame as a result of their own business tactics.

One man who is very well posted with the general situation declared

Business Holds Up

November Tax Returns Slightly Under October When Figures Were Best Since 1921

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Washington—Admission tax collections during November, as reported by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, totaled $6,849,212. During the preceding month, admission tax collections totaled $6,999,867, indicating a slight falling-off in theatrical attendance, but November admission taxes were $1,364,422 greater than those of the corresponding month of the preceding year, when $5,484,790 was collected.

Collections from the seating tax on theaters and other places of amusement during November totaled $43,660, against $88,758 in October.

The November figures are $150,655 under those for October when the returns were the highest since June, 1921.

"Lone Wolf" Film

To Co-Star Jack Holt and Dorothy Dalton—Sam Taylor Directing at Tilford Studio

By special arrangement with Famous, Sam V. Taylor, the director, has engaged Jack Holt to co-star with Dorothy Dalton in "The Lone Wolf," which will be produced at the Tilford studio.

Holt will probably be finished with the picture in three or four weeks and will then return to the coast to start "The Wanderer of the Wasteland," which Paramount will make in color. Taylor has also engaged Tyrone Power, Wilton Lackaye, Maclyn Arbuckle and Gustave Von Seyferritz for the cast. Dal Clawson has come on from the coast to photograph it while Julie Herne prepared the script. Lynn Shores will be Taylor's assistant.

Associated Exhibitors will probably release.

Big Pictures

Just how much they mean. Not only at the box office, but in the development of prestige for the industry is again proven by the list of 10 best pictures of 1923 secured for the Film Year Book. (By the way, it will be off the press about Jan. 20.)

It's pretty much as Sam Goldwyn says: You cannot make pictures with your weather eye cocked at the box office all the time. You must go ahead and make the fine, big pictures—and hope.

Nothing demonstrates that better than this list of 10 best selected by newspaper and picture publication critics throughout this country. There are about 175 daily newspapers of importance in this country. Returns were secured from about a third of these. In all nearly 70 important critics ventured their ideas.

"The Covered Wagon" being presented as a road show, and not in picture houses, tops the list with about twice as many votes as any other feature. And from there on the list is full of importance. A great box office attraction like "Merry Go Round" holds second place. "Robin Hood," a product of last year, comes next and is followed by "The Hunchback." How good this should make Laemmle, Cochrane, et al., feel!

on Friday that, in many instances, exhibitors have become negligent in the care of their theaters; that they have overlooked the necessity of keeping their lobbies clean and their theater atmosphere desirable. The point was made that when, as has happened, the town high school comes along with its clean, bright auditorium and decides to run shows in order to keep children out of the dingy theater, there is nothing that can be done but supply service.

The growth of theater chains is also held responsible for the increase in non-theatrical exhibitors. It is maintained that in towns where exhibitors have secured control of the situation and where they offer rentals for films that are not fair, the distributor has a right to deal with the church or the local civic organization, in order to get as much out of the town as he can.

There have been some meetings held at the Hays office, particularly concerning Michigan, where the situation was reported very aggravating. Last reports from that territory indicated that matters had improved somewhat.

Although there has not been very much said concerning Utah, it is there that non-theatrical showings are more prevalent than in any spot in the country.

Big Pictures

And so it goes, big pictures like "The Green Goddess" and "Saramouche" and big box office bets like "Safety Last." "Rosita" sandwiches in with "Down to the Sea in Ships" and "Little Old New York."

There are many important releases not included. It should be borne in mind that some of these did not find general release throughout the country up to October and November when the lists were, generally speaking, prepared. But the list does demonstrate the importance of the big picture. You cannot escape that.

ALL IN COLOR

The Technicolor people are all aglow these days. Feel good. Building another "lab" on the Coast, etc. Going to make a Zane Grey desert picture all in color. Do hope they keep the tones down. But that should be easy. Because when you realize that Technicolor did all the color work for DeMille's "Ten Commandments"—well, that should be enough. It's a mighty fine job.

BATTLE OF THE GIANTS

Now on, "The Covered Wagon" against "The Ten Commandments." Right on Broadway. And it's some battle. Harold Franklin, who runs the Famous houses, cannot figure why the "Wagon" should be hurt because of the big DeMille picture and is going the limit to keep the "Wagon" up. Used a full page in the Times Sunday and expects to keep the picture alive. Judging from the line up at the Criterion he seems likely to do it. Meanwhile the "Commandments" is a sell out at the Cohan.

A VISITOR COMING

Malvina Longfellow, well known in pictures in England, but an American by birth, will visit the States in a few weeks. Her many friends will be glad to see her.

STANDING UP

When Arthur Sawyer of Sawyer-Lubin starts something he's a tough man to fight. Just proved it on the Coast. Did a little trick for Barbara La Marr that will make him mighty popular with all the boys and girls in the picture colony. Arthur takes no chances with his star. And he battled all the way practically alone. And looks like he won out.

THOSE AUTHORS

In St. Anne, Illinois, lives Ralph P. Fauchia, who styles himself a "photo play writer of five, six, seven, eight and nine reel photo plays." And a few weeks ago, inspired to sell one of his brain children, he wrote Louie Mayer's office about putting on "The Treachery of the Unfaltering." And said it was a fine story. He complains to the effect that "it took me four long weeks to write it and make it up out of my own head working eight hours a day, including Sundays also." And he wants $5,000 for it, part in cash, and the rest to be applied to the purchase of three Powers machines.

Probably he will need three machines to project all his great photo drama successes, such as "The Treachery of the Unfaltering."

BURNING SANDS

Writing from Touggourt, away off in Algeria, Peter Milne, with the Eddie Carewe organization, says:

"Dear Danny:—This is a 'hello' from Eddie Carewe's troupe way off in darkest Africa on the desert sands. Don't let 'em kid you any more about Africa being dark or about the sands of the desert never growing cold. They don't have to grow cold; they're cold all the time, even with the noonday sun beating on them, which sun by the way isn't the least bit dark.

"You should have seen Eddie directing a caravan scene right on the dunes of the Sahara, using over three hundred camels and two hundred men. Eddie gave orders in English to Rene Plaisetty, his co-director. Rene translated them to French and gave them to Brahim, a French-Arabic interpreter, whereupon Brahim shot them out in Arabic to the extra men. If that isn't a new kink in directing write your own ticket.

"And maybe the picture isn't going to be some picture. With all the big stuff that Eddie has planned for it First National is going to have a 'Covered Wagon' of the Sahara in 'A Son of the Sahara.' Incidentally said Sahara doesn't much resemble Oxnard, California, or the Long Island dunes. It's quite a bit different, quite a bit. It's so vast and limitless that it makes you feel smaller than the ocean makes you feel, and you know how small that is as you've crossed.

"This town of Touggourt is 150 miles into the desert from Biskra, our location headquarters. It is completely surrounded by sand. Its population is chiefly Arabic and camel with a garrison of French Senegalese soldiers and an army of flies. That's about all except the atmosphere and there's plenty of that—all kinds, too, as you discover when you walk by an open drain.

"We have a great troupe. Claire Windsor, Bert Lytell, Montagu Love, Rosemary Theby, Paul Panzer and Walter McGrail are all here. In addition we have two French artists, Mlle. Marse Dorval and Georges Chebat. Georges is playing Bert as a boy.

"We're all a long way from Broadway and home so I'm writing this for everyone to wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

HARRY, PETE, JOHN, AND ALL OTHERS, WEEP

"Vee Dee" writing in the Chicago Tribune:

I love press agents.

I love the swanking kind that tells you he is just doing this until a big thing he has in view breaks.

I love the born-Rotarian who rushes in and sweeps you off your feet, and tells in a low, confiding voice the latest scandal because he knows you won't breathe a word of it.

I love the one who weeps on your shoulder because you never publish his stuff. He is the brother of the one who will lose his job if you don't print his story tomorrow.

I love the one who asks you out to dinner.

I love the one who insists you go out to dinner.

I love the one who likes you so much he wants to do something special for your paper; he's always going to take the matter up with the home office.

I love the one who reminds you of the favor he did you two years ago last July.

I love the one who will write anything you want; he can imitate any one's style.

I love press agents. But I often wonder why they are.

46 Pictures Reviewed In 15 Cities

"The Acquittal"—Universal Kings', St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—The gripping mystery story, enacted by a powerful all star cast, is one of suspense, of thrills, and of faultless acting throughout.

POST-DISPATCH—The picture of the murder trial is very well done.

STAR—A hodge podge of alleged mystery.

Circumstantial evidence is tossed about with abandon and the resulting denouement is supposed to be a surprise.

TIMES—Here is an adaptation of a stage success that is weak.

The stage scene is effectively done, except for the frequent and annoying "flash-backs."

— Happy New Year —

"Big Brother"—F. P.-L. McVicker's, Chicago

TRIBUNE—Never a good star had a better little co-star than Tom Moore has in Mickey Bennett!

The entire supporting cast is good and the picture doesn't drag a minute. Take my word for once and have a look!

Missouri, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—For one time a picture lives up to its exploiting, for it is greater than "The Miracle Man" or any other picture that we have seen that is based on a theme dealing with the underworld.

Allan Dwan is responsible for the masterful direction of the picture, and has kept it running true and smooth at all times.

POST-DISPATCH—Mickey is the outstanding star of the film while Moore does not seem to be at home in the hole of a gangster. He plays the "Big Brother" part very well, however, but he does not impress as the boss.

STAR—It is a well told story and produced in a masterly fashion, without any of the claptrap which usually distinguishes pictures of this kind. Tom Moore heads an unusually good cast.

TIMES—Here is a yarn that moves, that grips, that will appeal peculiarly because this is Christmas week.

A new boy star has arrived. He is 7 years old. His name is Mickey Bennett. There are elements in it reminiscent of "The Miracle Man."

In many respects it is as good as that film, or better.

— Happy New Year —

"Boy of Mine"—1st Nat'l Metropolitan, Washington

STAR—Ben Alexander is an adorable youngster—and a good actor. Despite its appeal for the humanizing of parenthood, the picture is bubbling over with the fun that a regular boy can produce, and is played by an excellent cast.

The Chicago, Chicago

JOURNAL—There is lively humor in the picture when the younger generation is in action.

HERALD-EXAMINER—"Boy of Mine" has turned out to be a better picture than the one about the more famous Penrod.

Undoubtedly "Boy of Mine" is a good picture for children—but it's better for adults.

NEWS—They get real drama out of this story. It is different from the average movie.

Park, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—"Boy of Mine" we have the unbeatable combination of a human story, good acting and entirely adequate direction. And, if you haven't guessed it already—"Boy of Mine" is a mighty good picture.

Rialto, Omaha

WORLD-HERALD—"Boy of Mine" deserves a place among the best pictures of the year. It hasn't lavish settings or a large cast nor is it a sensational story, but it has splendid direction and acting that is very near flawless.

Olympia, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—It may seem a little ungracious to call attention to weaknesses in a film, which, on the whole is far better than the average run. And yet, the weaknesses are there. In part, the fault lies with the cast and with the director.

— Happy New Year —

"His Children's Children"—F. P.-L. Columbia, Washington

STAR—The settings are elaborate and beautifully photographed, and the plot holds the interest, even though it is on a theme that has been overworked for some time.

— Happy New Year —

"The Country Kid"—Warner's Piccadilly, Rochester

DEMOCRAT-CHRONICLE—Master Barry's supporting cast deserves equal honor with himself. It is evident that Wesley himself is finding it difficult to look the part of the boy. Another inch or two and the youth will be the man.

HERALD—One of the most appealing pictures that the writer has seen in some time.

It is a kid picture par excellence.

JOURNAL—The obvious straining after comedy and pathos is not highly fruitful of results and grows exceedingly tedious.

The picture seems to us adequate proof that something should be done to curb the industrious scribes who write scenarios about child actors.

TIMES-UNION—"Wesley Barry shows more real acting talent in this role of the adolescent youth left in charge of his orphaned brothers than he has ever done in the impish and unpleasantly precocious roles with which he has been provided in the past.

— Happy New Year —

"The Critical Age"—Hodkinson Empress, Omaha

WORLD-HERALD—"The Critical Age" is very interesting. The spirit of the book has been retained. The atmosphere is very good. The school room episode is especially clever.

— Happy New Year —

"The Dangerous Maid"—1st Nat'l Capitol, Detroit

FREE PRESS—"The Dangerous Maid" offers many of the whimsicalities of situation and action in Miss Constance excels.

Conway Tearle is not well placed in this picture.

Despite its handicaps, however, "The Dangerous Maid" is excellent entertainment, and Miss Talmadge was never seen to better advantage.

NEWS—"The Dangerous Maid" takes its place among the better motion pictures of this type.

TIMES—Unexpectedly does a pretty good job of it. We have yet to review a picture in which this very excellent little artist has appeared that hasn't been good.

Grand Central—West End Lyric, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—It is an ideal Constance Talmadge picture, giving her many humorous comedy situations, but it also scales the dramatic heights.

POST-DISPATCH—The story is rather slight and the occasional humor is so badly farcical as to border on the slapstick variety. The direction at times is crude and lacking in sincerity.

STAR—"The Dangerous Maid" is the leading man and he has a part that fits him well.

TIMES—The film, while fair entertainment, irritates because it could have been much better.

— Happy New Year —

"The Darling of N. Y."—Universal Randolph, Chicago

POST—This is her first venture in a big feature picture, and it certainly is a huge success. This chubby charmer has never appeared to such good advantage.

Merrill, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—You'll agree that Baby Peggy is a darling after you have seen her in "The Darling of New York." One of those exceptional stories which were not built around a star, but as a narrative to entertain.

Sun, Omaha

WORLD-HERALD—She has never appeared more appealingly human than she does in this feature.

King Baggot is responsible for the splendid direction.

Delmonte, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—While she plays the star part, the real acting—and there is plenty of it—is left to older performers. The story is a gripping one and interest never lags at any moment.

POST-DISPATCH—This is the most sustained effort ever undertaken by the 5-year-old star and she gives a good account of herself.

STAR—It is a dramatic piece with plenty of action and thrills and Baby Peggy wins more friends by her clever acting.

TIMES—Suffice it to say then that the medium for the winsome lass may have been better. The picture is a crook play. But as long as Peggy twinkles in the scenes she is entirely adorable.

— Happy New Year —

"Drifting"—Universal Garden, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—The picture has thrills and melodramatic punches galore. In addition, there is a splendid cast.

— Happy New Year —

"The Extra Girl"—Asso. Exhibitors Orpheum, Chicago

JOURNAL—Because this is "something different," because it brings Mabel back, and she has been worth waiting for, and because it's holiday time and everyone deserves some fun, "The Extra Girl" is most highly recommended.

NEWS—The story of "The Extra Girl" is a good deal like those of Miss Normand's previous pictures.

As for Mabel Normand, this is the best acting she has done. There are moments in it when she rises to great pantomimic art, and the revelation of a personality that has tone color, ranges, shadings.

POST—Mabel is a comedian you know and there is no need commenting on the comedy she injects into the picture. Her characterization of the small-town girl and her ignorance around the studio are perfectly done, and in the big moments of the story she shows her ability as an emotional actress.

Walnut, Louisville

TIMES—"The Extra Girl" although amusing, shows an appealing and romantic side.

— Happy New Year —

"Gentle Julia"—Fox Monroe, Chicago

JOURNAL—"Gentle Julia" rather borrows from than depends upon Mr. Tarkington's originality. It is plotted, obviously, by one who knows, fortunate in casts, directors and general makeup.

HERALD-EXAMINER—As far as I know Mr. Tarkington has never written an actually bad story; nor has, to my knowledge, any film director made a bad picture from a Tarkington script.

Bessie Love and Harold Goodwin present in "Gentle Julia" expert portraits of callow, self-satisfied youth.

Washington, Detroit

FREE PRESS—With characteristic humor, Booth Tarkington has written a highly diverting tale which William Fox has transferred to the screen.

NEWS—For those who crave melodrama or yet vivid action "Gentle Julia" is a slender dish, but for those who like the Tarkington style of literature, the sprightly humor, the amusing but delightful portrayal of youth in love the Washington's weekly attraction will ring high.

TIMES—"Gentle Julia" makes a splendid screen story. It's another hit for the Fox people.

"Going Up"—Asso. Exhibitors Ohio, Indianapolis

NEWS—Douglas MacLean has hit the movie ball again. His comedy "Going Up" is a real show, pleasing in every detail, admirably directed and effectively staged.

STAR—The picture is brim full of humorous situations and has for its climax a thrilling airplane ride.

MacLean's work is first rate. His facial antics when the airplane rises quite against his will are good laugh providers.

— Happy New Year —

"Hell's Hole"—Fox Apollo, Indianapolis

NEWS—Melodrama barely escapes being tragedy and in the end turns out to be a comedy. Such a stage of picture conglomeration may be hard to imagine, but George Scarborough, who is being blamed for the piece, and William Fox, who presents it, have got together on a real dime-novel thriller.

STAR—"Hell's Hole" the credit (if any) for this feature belongs more to George Scarborough, the author, and Emmett J. Flynn, the director, who in his time has wielded the megaphone over more worthwhile productions.

— Happy New Year —

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame"—Universal Palace, Montreal

STAR—There is no hitch throughout the film, the story is portrayed in a coherent and consecutive manner which leaves no impression of "What is it all about" when finished. The photography is excellent and the setting remarkable.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" the filmed reproduction of the gorgeous cathedral is in itself a tribute to the motion picture camera.

— Happy New Year —

"If Winter Comes"—Fox Circle, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—If you have read the story you will find "If Winter Comes" an unusually entertaining film and I recommend it to you warmly. Percy Marmont creates a vivid, pathetic figure.

— Happy New Year —

"In The Palace of the King"—Gold-Cosmo, Eastman, Rochester

DEMOCRAT-CHRONICLE—The settings of the photoplay were supplied, apparently, without regard to cost. All the scenes are impressive, especially the courtyard of the palace which reveals the work of an architectural designer of exceptional talent.

However, it is not wise to take the play too seriously. In this less critical mood, we can assure patrons of a goodly measure of pictorial beauty, the convincing work of the cast, and a moderately interesting story.

HERALD—a truth of depiction that is splendid and interwoven with a story that is wholly entertaining albeit it is slightly disappointing at the ending.

One has a feeling that it would have been a much better story had it ended in tragedy. JOURNAL—"In The Palace of the King" is not so swashbuckling a picture as many of the other romantic tales that have been occupying attention recently.

The picture is notable for its beautiful settings and its exceedingly adroit photography.

TIMES-UNION—Lovers of the spectacle should find much satisfaction * * * here is one that stands out above the crowd in the gorgeousness of its settings, the splendor of its costuming and the manner in which the ensemble scenes are managed.

— Happy New Year —

"In Search of A Thrill"—Metro
Alhambra, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—Only the charm and ability of Viola Dana save "In Search of a Thrill" from complete boredom.

— Happy New Year —

"The Leavenworth Case"—Vitagraph Moon, Omaha

WORLD-HERALD—If you like a mystery murder story that contains suspense and a well constructed plot and holds your attention closely all the way, go to the Moon * * *

— Happy New Year —

"The Light That Failed"—F. P.-L.
Mary Anderson, Louisville

TIMES—Percy Marmont's characterization * * * will linger long in memory of those who see him * * *

Upon seeing the picture one feels that if the screen story had followed more closely that of the book, showing the fine lines as Kipling drew them, it would have been a presentation with more convincing pathos, * * *

— Happy New Year —

"Little Johnny Jones"—Warner's
B'way-Strand, Detroit

FREE PRESS—There are more thrills in "Little Johnny Jones" than can be found in a half-dozen similar plays; everywhere it bears the unmistakable stamp of the producer, playwright and actor, Cohan, possessing all the attributes commonly coupled with his name.

NEWS—What the stage play lacked in visible action, the picturized version has made up. There is not a dull moment from start to finish.

TIMES—The picture snaps like a whip with action and thrills. You will find more thrills in this one than could be found in a 15-episodic serial of the Pearl White variety.

— Happy New Year —

"Little Old N. Y."—Gold-Cosmop.
Stanton, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—For those who saw the play, every interesting and charming incident will return anew while watching the picture, and the film has made it possible to illustrate some of the events which were only spoken of in the play. * * * Marion Davies gives an excellent performance combining comedy, winsomeness, mischief and charm.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—Here is an example of film art at its very best; here is a picture handling a theme which the stage had attempted, but which belongs rightfully to the camera; * * *

Pershing, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—Here is a glorious romance that breathes realities; a picture that is impressive, purely because of its fine story and its historical sidelights; a picture that is a super-picture just because it is, and not because some producer spent a million dollars and named it "a super-film."

POST-DISPATCH—Sustained interest, entertainment value, excellent work by the star and the rarest collection of "types" presented in any recent moving picture offering are to be found in "Little Old New York" * * *

STAR—A charming picture * * * Excellent portrayals of John Jacob Astor, Robert Fulton and Washington Irving lend reality to this film.

TIMES—* * * go to the Pershing to see the superb acting of Marion Davies in this absorbing romance. There is a sweep, a glamour, an illusion about this tale that fascinates.

— Happy New Year —

"Lucretia Lombard"—Warner's Rialto, Washington

STAR—Irene Rich gives an interesting portrayal * * * She seems to have distinct personality that is not composed of masses of curly hair, beautiful orbs and a limited set of standardized facial expressions. Miss Rich also is a delightful actress and makes her characterizations vivid and realistic. * * * The story follows the novel closely, * * * The scenery is beautiful and the photography good.

— Happy New Year —

"The Man Life Passed By"—Metro
State, Los Angeles

EXAMINER—All in all, the picture makes good, swift entertainment. It is frankly melodramatic. Whatever editorial shortcomings are to be found in the film are offset quite by some well built-up situations.

EXPRESS—The story might have been made a plausible one. * * * Victor Schertzinger seemed to have glimpsed a theme too complex to convey to the screen convincingly, save at intervals.

RECORD—While "The Man Whom Life Passed By" is irreparably a movie, Victor Schertzinger has kneaded the hokum with skillful fingers until it assumes the contour of living drama.

TIMES—Interest is scattered by having too many angles to the story. It doesn't therefore, build up.

— Happy New Year —

"The Meanest Man in the World"—
1st Nat'l
Circle, Indianapolis

NEWS—It is first of all a vehicle for fun-making of a Blanche Sweet is charming * * *

STAR—* * * a pleasing film * * * Bert Lytel makes a nice hero and Blanche Sweet is charming * * *

— Happy New Year —

"The Near Lady"—Universal
Strand, Montreal

STAR—The incomparable Gladys Walton heads an exceptionally fine cast * * * is one of the best comedies of its kind seen here for a long time.

WORLD-HERALD—* * * Gladys Walton, the star, has the sort of a role that she knows how to play and does it very well.

— Happy New Year —

"North of Hudson Bay"—Fox
Hippodrome, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—No weighty or lofty theme cramps the style of this snowy melodrama. Thrills are there for thrills' sake only. * * * Its story is hardly worth the telling—but the thrills, the settings and the generally vigorous sweep of the thing make it worthwhile entertainment.

NEWS—Here is another of those fast-moving Mix vehicles that has all the necessary qualifications for good screen entertainments. Action, acting and photographic beauty, together with a rather impelling story, hold the interest throughout the picture.

— Happy New Year —

"Pleasure Mad"—Metro
Colonial, Indianapolis

NEWS—* * * is in no sense new, and the handling of the subject-matter is a bit conventional, but despite these flaws, the film has its appeal.

STAR—* * * is a capably spun story of the decline of American family life. And it has the usual fine performance as a sacrificing mother is one of her best pieces of acting.

— Happy New Year —

"The Red Warning"—Universal
Isis, Indianapolis

NEWS—* * * Jack Hoxie, * * * does the most hazardous and most interesting stunts of his career in this picture. * * * It is wild and woolly, but way above the average.

STAR—It contains all the usual ingredients of a Western picture, helped immensely in this case by Jack's work as the young hero and by Isadore Bernstein's excellent direction,

"Richard The Lion-Hearted"—Allied
Capitol, Montreal

STAR—* * * is not so pretentious as Douglas Fairbanks' masterpiece, and the scenes are not so impressive, yet there is all the thrill that one associates with the days of chivalry, * * *

— Happy New Year —

"Rosita"—Unit. Artists
State, Boston

TRANSCRIPT—* * * jangles sadly in those very passages where it ought most to persuade and illude. Where the "star" does not hold the screen, there the genius of Ernst Lubitsch shines clearly, * * * When Miss Pickford is to the fore, however, the dramatic interest flags, the pictorial effectiveness weakens, and whatever of dynamic energy the picture possesses is dispersed and misdirected.

Gifts, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—Evidences of Ernst Lubitsch's direction can be detected in the smooth flow of the continuity, the adroit presentation of big situations, the masterful attention to details, and last, but not least, in the imposing and picturesque settings. Commendable care also was shown in the selection of the supporting cast.

POST—Everybody who saw "The Spanish Dancer" will want to see "Rosita." There can be no boredom over seeing the same story twice, because it isn't the same. Everyone who missed "The Spanish Dancer" should not fail to see "Rosita." There is no reason for passing up two good things.

TIMES-STAR—Mary Pickford in "Rosita" continues to be the girl who will never grow up. She has not the dramatic fire or passionate impulse of Pola Negri; but she still has in all their glowing splendor those attributes of charm and magnetism which had insured her a supreme place in the hearts of the motion picture public. * * * All in all, "Rosita" is one of the worth-while picture achievements of the year.

Adams, Detroit

FREE PRESS—Attention to detail is the outstanding characteristic of this picture, and no pains have been spared to recreate the atmosphere * * *

NEWS—* * * is a personal triumph for Mr. Blinn, but it should not be construed as an inferior vehicle for Miss Pickford. On the contrary, it proves an excellent entertainment, well directed by Herr Lubitsch and acted with all the cuteness and coyness that Our Mary can command.

TIMES—We don't like Mary Pickford in "Rosita." * * * This doesn't mean that Mary Pickford hasn't given to the screen a good picture. She has. Every care was taken with this production. The direction is excellent. The photography, the action of the story, everything about the picture excepting Mary Pickford as a gypsy dancer is excellent.

Palace, Washington

STAR—Mary Pickford doesn't pose and look pretty in her happy moments, or wring her hands and make faces in the tragic ones—she lives her role, * * *

Perhaps it is the hand of the renowned director, Lubitsch, which has added the magic touch to this film in developing the art of Mary Pickford to its highest possibilities—anyway, the combination has produced one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Don't miss it.

— Happy New Year —

"Second Hand Love"—Fox
Rialto, Milwaukee

SENTINEL—Comedy trimmed with thrills is what Charles Jones is offering in his latest picture, * * *

— Happy New Year —

"The Silent Command"—Fox
Strand, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—Aside from this patriotic appeal, however, "The Silent Command" is rather naive melodrama. Its characters are superficially drawn, and its story scarcely will arouse much suspense in the minds of sophisticated movie patrons who have become accustomed to the more artistic films of the past few years.

TIMES-STAR—Despite an occasional surplus of emotionalisms, * * * an excellent picture.

"South Sea Love"—Fox
Family, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—Specially absorbing, dramatically satisfying, "South Sea Love" is a delightful starring vehicle for a delightful star (Shirley Mason).

TIMES-STAR—Unfortunately, however, a photoplay needs more than an interesting story and a pretty face to insure success.

— Happy New Year —

"The Spanish Dancer"—F. P.-L.
Crystal, Indianapolis

NEWS—* * * which gives full play to her personality. It is a picture packed with dramatic moments and, while somewhat different from anything she (Pola Negri) has heretofore done, is nevertheless an attraction of entertainment value.

STAR—* * * an artistic production of a gripping story with the Polish "passion flower" blooming in fitting soil once more. * * * The settings are magnificent and Pola does work that should set her right once more with the movie patrons.

— Happy New Year —

"St. Elmo"—Fox
Broadway, Los Angeles

EXAMINER—John Gilbert * * * is, without doubt, one of the most effective romantic stars in motion pictures. It is only in sequences here and there and in flashes that we see the splendid actor shining through. * * * Take the picture for straight romantic story and for some moving situations and you'll get your money's worth of entertainment.

EXPRESS—Unreal and artificial, almost mawkishly sentimental, was the saccharine novel; somewhat true to life, not too stilted, and free in the main from syrupy love scenes, is the photodrama.

RECORD—Jules Furthman, who wrote the scenario, or Jerome Storm, who directed the picture, one or the other, must have gotten mixed up in his dates or "props." * * * John Gilbert is an impressive St. Elmo.

TIMES—Gilbert has done better work than he does in this. He has been made to rave too much.

— Happy New Year —

"Stephen Steps Out"—F. P.-L.
Madison, Detroit

FREE PRESS—His first picture, * * * is a story well suited for the young man, and starts him out under very favorable circumstances.

NEWS—* * * the picture itself hardly affords an opportunity to critically appraise the acting talents of young Fairbanks. * * * holds the interest despite its long pull on the imagination.

TIMES—Here's a clear case of commercializing the name of Fairbanks. That's all the younger Fairbanks has to recommend him as a screen actor.

Karlon, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—Young Fairbanks reminds one of his famous father in a number of ways. He is an extremely likeable chap and above all a real boy.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—* * * his broad, and winning smile carries him romping through * * *

— Happy New Year —

"The Temple of Venus"—Fox
Fox, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—It is difficult to describe "The Temple of Venus," since after watching the entire film, one wonders just what it is all about. Two things strike one rather forcibly, the very beautiful photography and various natural photographic shots and the absolute primitiveness of the production from various angles.

Liberty, St. Louis

GLOBE-DEMOCRAT—* * * the picture is a spectacle of the unusual sort, * * *

The film has a most romantic and poetic subject and the director has left little undone to bring out the colorful spectacles.

STAR—The picture is spectacular and cost-ly and by that yardstick a good film but as entertainment goes this reviewer found it rather ordinary.

TIMES—... there is introduced a totally irrelevant story of seal poaching. These pictures are excellent in themselves, but their connection with the main plot shall ever remain a mystery.

... painted crudely, with broad strokes, and overdone.

"To the Ladies" fairly bristles with satire and sparkles with wit and humor.

TIMES STAR—With expert knowledge of this medium, however, he has embellished and stressed certain phases of the story which had to be subordinated on the stage because of technical limitations.

— Happy New Year —

"Thundering Dawn"—Universal
Victoria, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—"Thundering Dawn" is the interesting title of an excellent, if somewhat implausible, melodrama.

— Happy New Year —

"Tiger Rose"—Warner's
Allen, Cleveland

PLAIN DEALER—... an entertaining and a pretty well made photo play. It marks Lenore Ulrich's return to the screen. She is not quite so engaging as she was on the stage in the same play.

— Happy New Year —

"To The Ladies"—F. P.-L.
Stanley, Philadelphia

NORTH AMERICAN—... an excellent example of the fact that a very fine picture can be made by following the original story or play, even if that story or play has no murders, pink ladies, millions and the various other common-place ingredients.

PUBLIC LEDGER (MORNING)—... is an extremely fine light comedy. It follows the original story rather closely, yet James Cruze, the intelligent director, who is responsible for the adaptation, has not missed being suggested on the stage.

Walnut, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—To say that the screen version of "To the Ladies" is as funny as the original stage play would not be quite fair. It is even funnier.

— Happy New Year —

"To The Last Man"—F. P.-L.
Regent, Indianapolis

NEWS—A western feature that actually breathes of the spirit of the original. There is plenty of action, thrills and suspense.

STAR—The gore and bloodshed are offset by a Hal Roach comedy.

— Happy New Year —

"Twenty-One"—1st Nat'l Capital, Cincinnati

ENQUIRER—As a depiction of the modern American youth, "Twenty-One" is much more sympathetic, and certainly a great deal more wholesome, than any other recent attempts, not even excluding "Flaming Youth." ... a brilliant illustration of how a comparatively simple story, almost trite in its main outlines, can be converted into an absorbing photoplay with skillful direction and capable players.

TIMES STAR—... old-fashioned melo drama. ... What it lacks in the originality of its basic plot, however, it more than makes up in its crisp, rapid action and the admirable economy of its development.

— Happy New Year —

"The Wanters"—1st Nat'l
Strand, Omaha

WORLD-HERALD—Without becoming a preachment, the theme ... presents a strong lesson. ... It hasn't a new theme but it has been so admirably handled by the director, ... that you will find this one more interesting than those you have already seen based on this theme.

— Happy New Year —

"West of the Water Tower"—F. P.-L.
Metropolitan, Los Angeles

EXAMINER—The outstanding feature of "West of the Water Tower" ... is the fine acting of Glenn Hunter. ... The story ... is built with a forceful foundation but its handling is ineffective, and it lacks that finesse of storm and stress which its situations could so well justify.

EXPRESS—In Glenn Hunter ... there is revealed a young actor of much promise. To date, and this is his third or fourth picture, he has not yet found the medium for his peculiar accomplishments.

HERALD—In its entirety, Paramount has provided what may well be said to be a program picture almost of novelty proportions, presenting in its usual able way a screen sermon for old and young on a theme which is as old as humanity itself.

RECORD—There is only one thing for the reviewer to say about "West of the Water Tower"—It's worth seeing. If you see only one motion picture a month, this is the one to see this month.

— Happy New Year —

Would Restrict Home Screenings
(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Rochester, N. Y.—An ordinance governing the use of inflammable film in the home is being prepared by Deputy Counsel Clarence Platt. Officials have in mind several proposed restrictions to relieve the menace of fire. The ordinance, which will be submitted to the common council for hearing, will be drafted along the lines of the State law, with restrictions applying to the use of inflammable film in public buildings made applicable to residences. Strong opposition is expected to develop.

"Judgment of the Storm"

Film Booking Offices
As a Whole...VERY LIKELY GOOD BOX OFFICE NUMBER. HAS ALL THE POPULAR ELEMENTS THAT MAKE FOR AUDIENCE APPEAL.

st...First rate all the way through. Lloyd Hughes gives a splendid performance in the more important role and others in an evenly balanced and capable company are Lucille Rickson, a pretty ingenue, George Hackathorne, Claire McDowell, Myrtle Stedman, Philo McCullough, Bruce Gordon and two pleasing youngsters, Frankie Darro and Fay Mackenzie.

Type of Story...Drama. A rather original theme, well developed and with a satisfactorily sustained interest. The situations are good and with one or two possible exceptions, plausible and convincingly presented.

It does not seem logical that the family of the murdered man should condemn the hero of the story because the former was killed in a rambling place owned by hero's mother. The story omits any police investigation of the murder or evidence which would readily indicate the hero's innocence in the affair. And for an apparently shrewd, confident country mother, it is difficult to realize that she could be so easily misled by the sleek, "movie" villain, McCullough, the real cause of the boy's death.

There is an excellent snow-storm climax that is particularly well done and furnishes a genuine thrill. The acting and production are both good.

Office Angle...Good audience picture, one that contains elements that appeal generally and that can usually be relied upon to send them out satisfied. There is mother love, heart interest, romance and thrills, agreeably combined. You should be able to fit this one in nicely.

Exploitation...Splendid cast, story with good variety of entertaining elements, suitable production, an appealing heroine and likable hero, plus a great snow storm climax—these are all good talking points that should be sufficient to bring them in. Play up the title with headlines such as: "Forgive your enemies. See how forgiveness restores happiness in 'Judgment of the Storm,' F. B. O.'s latest release, at blank theater." Show them a trailer of the storm sequence and promise them it contains a genuine thrill. Use the names of those in the cast and tell them there are several very worth while performances.

Direction...Del Andrews; made an interesting picture from prize scenes; climax especially well

"Broadway Broke"

Producer: Murray Garsson
Distributor: Selznick

As a Whole...ENTIRELY SATISFYING PICTURE. CONTAINS FINE AUDIENCE APPEAL AND SHOULD BE A PROFITABLE NUMBER FOR THE BOX OFFICE.

Cast...Excellent. A complete suitable and enjoyable cast with Mary Carr in one of her truly lovable characterizations. Her admirers will be delighted with her work in this. Others in this splendid cast are Percy Marmont, Edward Earle, Gladys Leslie.

Type of Story...Drama of stage life, not the sordid, commonplace chorus girl variety theme but a really effective, heart interest story that will appeal to every one. It's wholesome, sincere, and wholly plausible. It has been superbly handled, with Director Dawley handling everything in a clean-cut, straightforward fashion. The situations have an atmosphere of reality and the dramatic moments are natural, not forced. It's a picture well done and supplying a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment. "Broadway Broke" is the story of a once famous star, of the equally famous old Daly's Theater, of her fading from fame and her subsequent poverty and the eventual happy ending when she sells her husband's famous stage play and is promised the grandmother role in the motion picture version of it. Mary Carr puts all the feeling and sincerity that she's capable of into the role and she does it beautifully.

Box Office Angle...Fine audience picture with story that contains everything considered as good audience appeal. There's a good box office feature in "Broadway Broke." Its atmosphere of the stage, the really human interest angle and generally appealing theme, plus the delightful characterization of Mary Carr, are sufficient reasons for your securing a booking.

Exploitation...Do your best to get them one and then work to interest your patrons in the picture. You can rest assured they'll like it particularly well. Promise them a story of stage life that is vastly different from others they have seen. Capitalize on the name of Mary Carr and tell them they'll see one of the best performances she has ever given, probably the best since "Over the Hill." Play up the title prominently. Have a man going about distributing throw-aways reading: "You're never broke until you're 'Broadway Broke.' See Mary Carr in one of her best roles."

Direction...J. Searle Dawley; particularly good; has certainly made fine use of material and provided all entertainment.

Author...Earle Derr Biggers
Scenario...John Lynch
Cameraman...Bert Dawley
Photography...Good
Locale...Old New York
Length...5,923 feet

"Big Brother"

Paramount

As a Whole...HUMAN INTEREST ANGLE STRONG IN REX BEACH STORY THAT MAKES FIRST RATE SCREEN VEHICLE; SEEMED TO PLEASE RIVOLI AUDIENCE VERY MUCH.

Cast...Little Mickey Bennett comes very near stealing the picture. In fact, several times it's all his. Tom Moore, convincing and natural in role that gives him first rate opportunities. Will please his following immensely. Edith Roberts good as the girl. Others Raymond Hatton, Joe King, Charles Henderson, Paul Panzer. Good cast all through.

Type of Story...Comedy drama that is strong in both elements. The comedy is sure-fire and always certain of bringing the laughs. Little Mickey Bennett is responsible for much of the feature's good humor, with Moore, of course, contributing his share. The dramatic angle is taken care of through the situation in which the crook, after trying to go straight and prove himself a proper guardian for little Midge, is separated from the lad when he is branded as unfit to rear him. They take too long to get around this obstacle and arrive at the happy ending. There are numerous fine touches in this sequence that are especially effective and help to carry along the human interest angle, but they take a too round about method of arriving at the happy ending. The story isn't without a romance, either, so it can generally be conceded to contain about everything that the average picture goer considers good entertainment.

Box Office Angle...Popular variety of entertainment that should well please the majority of your folks. They'll enjoy the performance of young Mickey Bennett and where they like a good combination of comedy and pathos it will go.

Exploitation...Your people will undoubtedly like this one so it will be worth your while to get them in. Tell them it's a Rex Beach story. Let them know that Tom Moore plays the type of role that he does so well and be sure and mention Mickey Moore's name. Use a trailer containing one of the comedy scenes between Mickey and Moore with one of the comedy sub-titles. Play up the title and if there is a local Big Brothers association in your town, they'll be glad to endorse the picture and help you put it over. Or, if not, there might be some who would be interested in starting a Big Brother movement in conjunction with it.

Direction...Allan Dwan; made fine use of Rex Beach's story; results are entirely satisfactory even though feature runs a trifle long.
Author...Rex Beach
Scenario...Paul Sloane
Cameraman...Hal Rosson
Photography...Good
Locale...New York's East Side
Length...7,080 feet

"Boy of Mine"

Producer: J. K. McDonald
Distributor: First National

As a Whole...MIGHTY ENJOYABLE, WHOLESOME PICTURE THAT IS SURE-FIRE ENTERTAINMENT. BOOTH TARKINGTON AT HIS BEST PLUS PRODUCTION AND ACTING THAT CERTAINLY PUTS IT OVER.

Cast...Ben Alexander a delightful young boy whose natural ease and entirely unsophisticated manner should win for him a host of admirers. He's all boy in this and going to more than please both young and old. Irene Rich, always capable and charming, is ideal as Ben's mother and Henry B. Walthall makes an appropriate father. Others include Rockcliffe Fellows and Dot Farley.

Type of Story...Comedy drama, strikingly human and a theme that, while not remarkable for its atmosphere nor original in situations, is far more interesting and furnishes more actual entertainment than many of the lavish, costly extravaganzas that come along with much heralding. For those who appreciate and enjoy a really fine picture, full of genuine juvenile comedy, and innumerable human touches, "Boy of Mine" can't be beat. Its atmosphere is so real that it gets under the skin. Just to hear the laughs of the men, enjoying the series of boyish pranks of hero Ben Alexander at the Strand, would be sufficient to give a definite idea of the feature's drawing power. The comedy is a rare treat but the story is not without its serious side, an angle particularly well treated.

Box Office Angle...Can be recommended for all kinds and class and people of all ages. If you want your folks to enjoy themselves you will show them "Boy of Mine" and count on pleasing them. It's a thoroughly enjoyable picture.

Exploitation...Do your best to bring them in. Once inside your theater you won't have any trouble convincing them they'll go out satisfied. The picture will take care of all the promises you make for it. Boost the author's name and tell them this is one of the most delightful of his boy stories. Talk about Ben Alexander and his work. They're going to look for him again in the near future, and providing they can give him the right material, should win considerable popularity for himself. By all means convince your people that they must not miss the picture. And this goes for old and young alike.

Direction...William Beaudine; very capable direction; intelligent handling of story and fine understanding of comedy and human interest.
Author...Booth Tarkington
Scenario...Hope Loring and Louis Leighton.
Cameraman...Not credited.
Photography...Very good

Dinky Dean in
"A Prince of a King"

Selznick Distributing Corp.

As a Whole... JUVENILE ENTERTAINMENT THAT WILL PLEASE THE YOUNGSTERS AND WILL SERVE NICELY FOR MATINEE SHOWING; TOO SLOW MOVING AND STORY NOT BIG ENOUGH TO ENTERTAIN GROWN-UPS.

Star... A good little acrobat and a pleasing youngster but still has a long way to go to come up to some other child players such as Jackie Coogan and Baby Peggy.

Cast... Adequate. Includes Virginia Pearson, Eric Mayne, John Sainpolis, Josef Swickard, Sam de Grasse, Mitchell Lewis.

Type of Story... From Abbie Farwell Brown's "John of the Woods." Story consists of one of those mythical kingdom plots in which the enemies of the king plan to get their own man on the throne by poisoning the king and doing away with the young heir. But instead the child falls into the hands of a gypsy king who rears him as his own until finally the child's real identity is discovered, he regains his rightful place and the plotters are arrested.

The theme is particularly appropriate for juvenile audiences and most children will find it thoroughly interesting. It will hardly prove attractive entertainment for grown-up audiences since the theme is mechanical and old. The fairy tale atmosphere, however, makes it a picture that can be recommended for matinee showings. The production is good, the settings attractive and the cast good. The young folks will like Dinky Dean.

Box Office Angle... If you can make a specialty of matinee showings you might do very well with "A Prince of a King," or if you cater to family trade, it should serve adequately. On the other hand if your clientele is composed chiefly of adults, they may not find it particularly satisfying.

Exploitation... You might try to interest them in the new juvenile star, Dinky Dean, showing them a trailer in which the youngster performs some of his stunts. Talk about the fairy story atmosphere and let your parent clientele know that you are showing a picture especially suitable for their children. Exploit the showing by having a youngster dressed to represent Dinky Dean going about distributing throwaways reading: "I'm 'A Prince of a King'. Meet me at the blank theater on (date)." Use stills of the young star. Virginia Pearson's name might also be used.

Direction... Albert Austin; gave story good production with fine attention to artistic detail; could have speeded up story at times.

Author... Abbie Farwell Brown
 Scenario... Douglas Doty
 Cameraman... Harry Thorpe
 Photography... Good
 Locale... Mythical kingdom
 Length... About 6,000 feet.

"Other Men's Daughters"

Grand-Asher—State Rights

As a Whole... ORDINARY GRADE OF ENTERTAINMENT. MADE TO APPEAL DIRECTLY TO LOWER CLASS PICTURE PATRONS. TOO GOOD A CAST TO WASTE ON SUCH MATERIAL.

Cast... Bryant Washburn far too capable and pleasing a performer to appear in such a poor picture. Mabel Forrest an attractive heroine with Wheeler Oakman and Kathleen Kirkham satisfactory as male and female gold-diggers respectively. Sidney De Grey suitable as the narrow-minded parent. Others Martha Franklin, Roscoe Karns, William Turner, Ben Wilson, Jr.

Type of Story... One of those moral lesson dramas that aim to correct a fault of society by exposing the fault flagrantly and with all the suggestiveness and atmosphere that make this type of picture entertainment popular with a lower class audience.

The theme deals with a man who refuses to allow his grown-up, country-bred daughter to attend a daytime picnic but who, himself, sports around with a woman of obviously questionable character, when he visits the city. Eventually the girl leaves home, goes to the city and conveniently makes her home with the woman mentioned, not knowing, of course, that she is her father's "sweetie." How father and daughter confront each other, and later return to their home, having learned their lessons, completes the story. Of course there is a romantic touch with the girl meeting a man who loves her and who returns home with her.

Box Office Angle... Only suitable for a non-critical audience. If you cater to a discriminating clientele, those who demand clean wholesome entertainment, you won't flatter them with this one. Made to appeal to a sensation-loving crowd, it fills the bill splendidly. There are cabaret scenes, peppy parties in which "old buzzards are kidded into thinking they're young," etc. The titles are as coarse as they are numerous.

Exploitation... Isn't worthy of any extended effort unless you want to clean up with it by promising the sensation lovers a spicy story dealing with a man who enjoyed wild parties but refused to allow his daughter to attend a harmless picnic. You can bring them in, no doubt, if that's all you have to consider. Bryant Washburn's name can be used but there is little credit due him for his work in this.

Direction... Ben Wilson; on a cheap and ordinary scale both in production and manner of handling story.

Author... Evelyn Campbell
 Scenario... Frank Sullivan
 Cameramen... Eddie Lindon and Jack Stevens.
 Photography... All right
 Locale... City and suburb.
 Length... About 6,000 feet.

"Don't Call It Love"

Paramount

As a Whole... PLENTY OF SEX APPEAL HERE THAT WILL PROBABLY MAKE IT A POPULAR ATTRACTION ONCE IT'S SHOWN AND THEY GET TALKING ABOUT IT. HAS A FINE CAST.

Cast... Several of Paramount's best bets—Jack Holt, Agnes Ayres, Nita Naldi, Theodore Kosloff and Rod La Rocque. Nita Naldi, the last word in screen vamps, spoils her performance by appearing in gowns whose chief purpose seem to be to exhibit her figure to full advantage. To many her choice of costumes will be vulgar. Agnes Ayres pleasing and Jack Holt too much a he-man actor for his role.

Type of Story... Out and out vamp story in which famed singer trifles with her various admirers, playing them for all they're worth and finally casting them off when she's through with them. The affair in detail deals with the rich Dick Parrish who neglects his faithful sweetheart, Alice, to wait upon the diva who treats him just as miserably as he treats Alice, with the result that she eventually throws him over for a young piano tuner, leaving Dick to seek the forgiveness of Alice, whose love for him is so great that she can't refuse him. Julian Street's novel, published under the title of "Rita Coventry," and appropriately re-named "Don't Call It Love," is a weak concoction of situations with little originality or strength. The old Theda Bara business looks just the same as ever with Nita Naldi fulfilling all requirements of the sensual, scantily attired lure of men. There's plenty of fine sex appeal that will make "Don't Call It Love" a sure-fire drawing card for exhibitors who want to capitalize on this element.

Box Office Angle... All depends on the people you play to. If you think the atmosphere will prove attractive, you can go the limit on promises of sex appeal. Miss Naldi will fulfill all the promises you want to make in this connection. Should you cater to refined, family trade you may have to give it a more careful consideration.

Exploitation... Play up the title and the fact that "Don't Call It Love" is an adaptation of Julian Street's novel "Rita Coventry." In connection with the title, use catchlines such as: "He didn't know the difference between a love affair and love. See 'Don't Call It Love' and find out what he learned." There are several good names to use: Agnes Ayres, Jack Holt, Nita Naldi, Theodore Kosloff, and Rod La Rocque, a popular Paramount combination.

Direction... William De Mille; gives story satisfactory production; some scenes in which extras are not well handled.

Author... Julian Street
 Scenario... Clara Beranger
 Cameraman... Guy Wilky
 Photography... Good
 Locale... New York
 Length... 6,457 feet.

"The Steadfast Heart"

Producer: Distinctive Pictures
Distributor: Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan

As a Whole... HAS ELEMENTS OF APPEAL THAT WILL WIN IT THE FAVOR OF A GOOD MAJORITY; PICTURE NICELY PRODUCED AND WITH A GOOD CAST BUT VERY MUCH TOO LONG.

Cast... Appropriate and capable cast with several thoroughly pleasing personalities. Young Joseph Depew and Miriam Battista good in the prologue and Joseph Striker pleasing in the later episode. Marguerite Courtot rather lacking in spirit and not always well photographed. Mario Majeroni a kindly benefactor and others Jerry Devine, Hugh Huntley, William B. Mack, Mary Alden, Harlan Knight.

Type of Story... Drama laid in a small town community where narrow mindedness is the watchword, as the background for rather interesting story dealing with the efforts of townsfolk to drive out a young boy who happened to belong to degenerate parents. The boy is cared for and finally sent home by the kindly owner of the newspaper and returns to the town where he not only lives down the opposition of the people but their favor and the hand of the most prominent citizen's daughter. There's much in the story that appeal to the average audience. Clarence Kelland's plot has many twists and bits of detail they'll like, such as the scenes between the poor young hero and the little rich girl whose patronage he is reprimanded by her blue-blooded aunt. Lonergan carries the idea all the way through by having the girl fall in love with hero when he returns to prove himself a real man in spite of his parental handicap. They are the sort of touches that the more enthusiastic will applaud, and this goes for a Broadway audience where the picture was reviewed. The feature is far too long. Properly cut it would have a much better sustained interest.

Box Office Angle... Pretty good audience material in this. Will please most of your folks. Talk about the main idea of the story—that of the handicap with which certain children are forced to go through life, such as having parents who are criminals. You might arouse a controversy regarding whether or not such children should be handled locally or through municipal jurisdiction. Mention that the story appeared in Collier's Weekly and was written by Clarence B. Kelland. There are no particularly prominent names in the cast but you can say there are several worth while performances.

Direction... Sheridan Hall; usually very good and with many effective touches; an over abundance of unnecessary detail.

Author... Clarence Budington Kelland
Scenario... Phillip Lonergan
Cameo... George Veters

"The Rich Pup"—Century—Universal A Mighty Intelligent Pup

Type of production... 2 reel comedy
Pal, the dog, is the chief attraction of this two reel Century, although the cast includes Henry Murdock, Bill Irving, Mary O'Brien and Baby Dawn O'Day, the latter registering nicely in some cute scenes with the dog. The story is slim Pal's mistress has two suitors, and the pup likes one but not the other, who, it later develops, is a jewel thief. Quite a few of the laughs result from the tricks the dog puts over to help his friend and frustrate his enemy. Good, average comedy.

— Happy New Year —

"The Rivals"—Universal Fairly Amusing

Type of production... 1 reel comedy
Slim Summerville and Bobbie Dunn are the featured players, with Esther Ralston as the girl. The humor in this consists for the most part in seeing Summerville who is tall and thin, kick Dunn, who is very short, around. The opening is fairly different, showing the team in Roman costume, having a duel. After much knockabout stuff the audience is let in on the fact that they are working in a movie studio. Later, both loving the same girl, they climb into her boudoir where they are caught by her stern and irate father who chases them off with a gun.

— Happy New Year —

"The May Fly"—Secrets of Nature Excellent of Its Type

Type of production... 1 reel educational
Made in England, and edited by W. P. Pycraft of the Natural History Museum of London, this is one of the most interesting and finely handled educational reels seen in a long time. The camera work is especially good. It deals with the life of the May fly which is closely related to what we call the dragon fly, except that after it emerges from its larva state to that of a beautiful winged creature, it lives but one day. The entire transition from the larvae to the perfect insect has been caught by the camera in detail.

"Two Wagons—Both Covered"— Pathe

Humorous, But Subtle
Type of production... 2 reel comedy

This is, of course, a travesty on the well-known feature, with Will Rogers playing a dual role, that of the hero and the guide, with his make-up following that used by Torrence and Kerrigan in the original version. It is amusing, and there are a good number of spontaneous laughs, but scattered. Some of those who have not seen the feature may find "nothing much happening." The humor is often subtle, but the Broadway houses should eat it up. The titles have been written by Rogers.

— Happy New Year —

"The Stickleback"—Secrets of Nature —E. L. Klein Co.

Interesting Educational
Type of production... 1 reel educational

This is a very interesting camera study showing in most complete detail the life of "The Stickleback," a tiny fish that inhabits most streams in the British Isles. It shows with what infinite care the fish builds its nest, and watches over the eggs until the young ones hatch. The photography is decidedly noteworthy, the entire reel is extremely interesting and should go well where educational material is liked.

— Happy New Year —

"My Friend"—Educational Don't Miss This One

Type of production... 2 reel comedy

Here's a comedy that will cause laughs and then some. Lloyd Hamilton is funnier in this one than he has been in quite some time, and the gags, while not especially new, are put over so well that they will undoubtedly go over. One particularly funny scene is where Lloyd, followed by all the hounds in the neighborhood tries to escape them by driving off in his flivver. The dogs clamber in through the windows, doors and even the roof of the car and not even a driving rainstorm will stop them. Hamilton, in the midst of the dripping dogs, soaking wet himself, is a scream. You'll please them with this.

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

If I thought you wouldn't be too excited tomorrow morning to READ this column, I'd save the review of "Boy of Mine" for then and call it a Christmas present from me to you. As is, you've probably done your shopping early and, while more or less loafing today, are going to be told that this film is without doubt one of the BEST program pictures you've seen this year or will see ANY year.

The people on it are real—that's why. Some one aptly said of it: "You wouldn't think of it in the terms of 'great drama' or anything of the kind. You just live along with the folks in the film and 'get' them every minute."

Booth Tarkington wrote the story, which is about a "just kid" whose dad didn't understand him and whose mother DID. Situations develop naturally.

There are three chuckles to every tear—and the tears you do shed you luxuriate in.

The doings of Ben Alexander and one small Negro rejoicing in the stage name of Vestibule Thompson (no, no, the latter's father isn't a porter) hold you entranced. What WILL they do next! The work of both stacks up as screen literature! To my way of thinking, little Ben takes a place as one of the greatest if not THE greatest of child actors. The tiny colored boy is a wonder! SOME direction there by somebody who understands kids.

The grownups? You say it! Irene Rich is adorable as the mother. Henry Walthall as the father carries you back to the playing he did in "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Avenging Conscience." Remember? The others? Splendid.

One little word of four letters aptly describes the entire production. "R—E—A—L."

See you tomorrow! (Just for a minute.)

Wha'd'yu mean hardboiled!

Mae Tinée's thoughts as expressed in The Chicago Tribune — proves that when you show newspaper critics a real actor like

BEN ALEXANDER

and a real picture like

"BOY OF MINE"

they'll shout its praise from the housetops—and any picture that rouses the critics as this one is doing is the picture YOU WANT!

A FIRST NATIONAL PICTURE
